Hands Off Cuba, First Ballot President Warns of 800 Seen Soviet Premier for Kennedy

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI)—President Eisenhower warned Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev Saturday night to keep his hands off Cuba.

The President, in a statement issued from his Summer White House here, declared that the United States would not "permit the establishment of a regime dominated by international communism in the Western Hemisphere."

The United States will not be "deterred" by Khrushchev's rocket threats, Eisenhower said, from standing by its treaty obligations to protect every nation in the Western Hemisphere from domination by an alien ideology or a foreign power.

THE PRESIDENT'S statement came only a few hours after Khrushchev declared in a Kremlin speech that Russia might use rockets against the United States if the Americans "dare to begin an intervention against Cuba."

Khrushchev said the Russians would "use everything to support Cuba in her just struggle for freedom and liberty won by the Cuban people under the leadership of the national hero, Fidel Castro."

"The economic blockade, now declared against Cuba by the U.S.A., shall fail," Khrushchev said.

"One should not forget that the United States is not, as before, an unreachable distance from the Soviet Union."

KHRUSHCHEV'S saber rattling brought one of the bluntest warnings Eisenhower ever has delivered to a foreign power. The President said Khrushchev's remarks showed Russia had the "clear intention to establish Cuba in a role serving Soviet purposes in this hemisphere."

He went on to charge Russia flatly with trying to "intervene in the affairs of the Western Hemisphere."

Eisenhower authorized issuance of his statement by his news secretary, James C. Hagerty, after talking several times during the afternoon by

Tourists Fleeing Congo

LEOPOLDVILLE, Congo (UPI)—American women and children began fleeing this panic-stricken capital Saturday.

No American casualties were reported, but some Americans were roughed up. L. W. Gorman, 68, and his wife, Roberta of San Francisco were among the several dozen tourists, woman employees of the U.S. Embassy, and wives and children of embassy personnel who were ferried across the four-mile Congo River to Brazzaville, capital of the Congo Republic, which is a separate nation and part of the French community.

Congo troops held up him and his wife for a search, Gorman said.

Big Pennsylvania, California Strength Is Still Uncounted

By ROBERT E. LEE
of I. P-T Convention Bureau

LOS ANGELES—Sen. John F. Kennedy appears likely to roll up a first-ballot total of more than 800 votes when the Democratic National Convention starts voting for a presidential candidate Wednesday.

Kennedy flew into this bustling convention city Saturday with his most optimistic prediction so far of first-ballot strength. He claimed "more than 600" votes—even without the big blocks he will get from uncommitted Pennsylvania and the favorite-son states of California, Minnesota, New Jersey, Iowa and Kansas. His aides said he's actually counting on at least 650, exclusive of Pennsylvania and the favorite-son delegations.

KENNEDY TOLD an airport rally shortly after his plane from New York touched down that he's "confident" the additional votes needed for the nominating total of 761 will come from those states. There were few political realists here who would dispute him. Many thought he was being too cautious in his claim.

The states he specifically excluded from the "more than 600" estimate will cast a total of 281 votes. The most conservative arithmetic seemed to assure Kennedy about 200 of them, either on the first ballot or at its end, when the traditional vote-switching occurs.

THE KENNEDY camp's calculations had him going over the top as soon as even one of the big question-mark states made its decision. The first state to cave was ex-

Universe Title to Utah Girl

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Miss U. S. A., Linda Bement, of Salt Lake City, carried her raven-haired beauty Saturday night to victory in the Miss Universe pageant.

The 18-year-old Mormon girl became the third girl to win both the Miss U. S. A. title and crown of Miss Universe.

"I never expected it after Miss U. S. A.," Miss Bement told reporters, her eyes glistening with tears.

As the five finalists were named dramatically one by one to the crowd and a national television audience, the new Miss Universe said, "When the fourth one was named, I thought, oh, oh—either I'm out or I'm in."

HER PARENTS, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Bement, and two aunts, were in the audience of 6,123 to see her receive the pearl-studded crown and golden scepter from last year's Miss Universe, Akiko Kojima of Japan.

Miss Bement, a recent graduate of Highland High School in Salt Lake City, is five feet six inches tall, and weighs 120 pounds. She measures 37-23-36. The crown earned the green-eyed winner a $5,000 cash prize and the offer of a motion picture contract and a host of other gifts all with a total value of $10,000. She also won $1,000 for her selection as Miss U. S. A. Thursday night.

The first runner-up was Miss Italy, Daniela Bianchi. Miss Austria, Elizabeth Hodacs of Vienna, placed third. Miss South Africa, Nicolette Caras of Johannesburg was fourth.

Adlai Boosters Driving to L.A.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Stevenson-for-President committee said Saturday a "Safari for Stevenson" motorcade that began here with two cars has reached Colorado Springs and has grown to six cars.

The autos carrying supporters of Adlai Stevenson for the Democratic presidential nomination are expected to rendezvous with some 100 other autos outside the Los Angeles City limits and drive to the convention scene in time for Wednesday's first roll call.

Johnson, Stevenson Forces Drive Against 1st-Ballot Blitz

By BILL BROOM
of I. P-T Convention Bureau

LOS ANGELES—Stop-Kennedy candidates struggled uphill Saturday without picking up any significant ground.

From Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson's camp came brave claims that the Texan's support had withstood a Kennedy "newspaper blitz."

As he has for six months, Sen. Stuart Symington insisted the Democratic convention will turn to him after a Johnson-Kennedy deadlock. Adlai Stevenson's late-blooming candidacy unleashed a blizzard of telegrams to delegates, which found receptive readers only in the California delegation.

A GRIM Alamo-like atmosphere settled over Johnson's seventh-floor headquarters. There were few important faces in the sporadic parade of visitors.

Gov.-elect Farris Bryant

Brown of Florida reported a four-delegate gain for Johnson, which will be registered on the second ballot after supporting favorite son Sen. George Smathers.

Delaware's 11 votes were added to the Johnson column after National Committeeman William S. Potter said an will make significant gains after the first ballot is over.

THE JOHNSON camp worked hard to crack Pennsylvania's big uncommitted delegation and the Kennedy hold on Maryland in an effort to offset defections in Dixie.

There were indignant denials from Johnson supporters that Kennedy will get 10 of North Carolina's 37 votes. Terry Sanford, Democratic candidate for governor, announced his support of Kennedy early in the day and said one-third of the delegation will go along with him.

The Johnson camp pointed out Sanford had been openly for Kennedy for several months and contended they will hold all but five or six Tarheel delegates.

Sen. Everett Jordan (D-N.C.) disputed Sanford's

Dixie Votes Seen

LOS ANGELES — Three Democratic candidates flew into town Saturday, but only one could smell the sweet incense of victory.

Youthful Massachusetts Senator John F. Kennedy arrived just in time to take the reins of his bandwagon which early Saturday started to rumble along the highway to a possible overwhelming first-ballot triumph.

The day had been as good for Kennedy as it had been bad for his leading rivals, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, Sen. Stuart Symington, and Adlai E. Stevenson. Early Saturday morning, the governor of North Carolina announced the defection of an estimated 10 Tarheel votes from Johnson to Kennedy.

THIS WAS followed by the collapse of the favorite-son candidacy of Gov. George Docking of Kansas who urged his followers to plump for Kennedy. Rumors of restlessness in the pro-Johnson delegations of South Carolina and Kentucky were widely circulated, adding to the impression that Johnson's citadel, the South, was crumbling. Most Southern states vote, however, under the unit rule, and Johnson can hold the rebellious quiescent.

Concurrently with the boom in Kennedy stock, labor leaders, always influential in a Democratic convention, were putting on the heat for a party ticket headed by Kennedy and with Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota as his running-mate.

Furious Neighbors Call Law, Say Tab Hunter Beat Dog

GLENDALE (AP)—Actor Tab Hunter, accused in a police report of beating and kicking his dog, Saturday said he slapped the dog with a strap.

He denied he had kicked the dog in the midsection and head while holding it by a chain leash.

"My dog is a high-strung Weimaraner. If I look at him cross, he'll moan. I got home late from the studio the other night and found that he had dug a hole in the yard."

"I took him to the hole and slapped him four times only on his paws, telling him 'No dig, no dig.' The dog's a real lover, he started moaning like I was killing him."

"I was only disciplining him the way any dog owner would. I love him. I've always loved animals. My neighbors next door were having a beer party and barbecue so they started yelling at me. I explained that I was only disciplining my dog but they called the police anyhow."

"I feel terrible about this. I'm not cruel to my dog. You should see him running around here wagging his tail."

Sgt. W. J. Chambers said police got in the act because "neighbors got pretty upset about it. One woman called for the police because she

Boy, 7, Safe After Niagara Falls Plunge

NIAGARA FALLS (UPI)—A 7-year-old boy was swept over Niagara Falls from a disabled boat Saturday and was rescued virtually unharmed in the churning waters 165 feet below.

Police said no one ever survived a plunge over the falls except daredevils in elaborate barrels and shock-resistant containers.

The boy's 17-year-old sister, who also was in the boat, was pulled from the river by two New Jersey vacationists. Her rescuers said she was calling "Save my brother!" just as he was begging his rescuers to go after his sister.

HIS RESCUERS, crewmen of the sightseeing boat "Maid of the Mist," said he did not cry.

"He was pretty well bruised up," said Capt. Bud McGinn, one of the rescuers. "His neck, chest and legs all showed bruises, but he was conscious."

The boat was commanded by Capt. Clifford Keech.

"We were out on our usual run with 65 passengers," Keech said. "We always keep a close lookout for debris. Suddenly I saw this life belt jump out of the water. I had to look a second time. There was a head sticking out of the middle of it."

were going down for a boat ride and then suddenly we were going back to the dock and then our engine went out of control, and it was going real fast.

"There was a lot of noise and then I hit the water and I came up to the top. One of my legs hurt."

"The next thing I remember is coming out of the water. After that, my first thought was for my sister."

The boy's sister, Diane, was pulled from the river by two New Jersey vacationists. Her rescuers said she was calling "Save my brother!" just as he was begging his rescuers to go after his sister.

"We were out on our usual run with 65 passengers," Keech said. "We always keep a close lookout for debris. Suddenly I saw this life belt jump out of the water. I had to look a second time. There was a head sticking out of the middle of it."

"We had to go round him to get in position to save him. He apparently thought we had not seen him and began to holler for help."

"We threw him a rope. He grabbed hold. I went back to call the office to send an emergency boat because the boy kept saying his sister was in there."

"Then we headed for the dock. We had him safe on land in eight minutes. The boy didn't cry once."

"I don't see how he survived. I don't expect to see anything like this again. At first we wondered if he really could have gone over the falls, but then I saw that there was only one way to get in the position he was in, and that's to go over the falls."

When Keech called for help from the main dock, McGinn, Canadian manager of the Maid of the Mist concession, jumped into his little rescue boat, "The Little Sister," and raced to the area.

By that time, the boy had been pulled aboard.

"My sister's still in there," the boy said over and over.

"I went on up to see if I could find her," McGinn said, "while the boy was taken to shore. He was rushed to a hospital."

"When I got back to the dock, a call came from police that the girl had been rescued above the falls but a man still was missing."

"We found some oars and the wreckage of a tank from an outboard," McGinn said. "There also were some pieces of the sides of a boat."

L.A.C. Says: The Platform

As the convention opens most of the thoughts of the general public will be concerned with whom the delegates will nominate as their candidate. Very little thought will be given to the platform which has been in preparation for several weeks. It will probably be read to the delegates and be adopted by Wednesday. The platform of the Democratic convention this year is of greater importance than most of them in the past. This is because Congress recessed to attend the conventions. It is returning in August after the two conventions are over. It will then be up to the Democrats to put into effect the platform provisions or be charged with insincerity.

This makes the platform more important than in the past because the Democrats have complete control of both houses of Congress. It was apparent Sen. Johnson and Speaker Sam Rayburn maneuvered the recess rather than adjournment to help Johnson's chances for the nomination. A returning Congress will have these two men in charge of the conduct of both houses. It gives them a stronger hold on delegates than they would have if Congress was adjourned until next January. But it can be a two-edged sword. What Congress does on returning to Washington must be in keeping with the Democratic platform—or it will be evidence that the platform is meaningless.

This means civil rights legislation to guarantee Negroes protection from segregation by unions as well as schools in the South. It means coming up with a medical plan for the aged that can mean a start on socialized medicine if promises already made by some candidates are included in the platform. It can mean a platform plank calling for school aid which will cost billions of dollars of tax money to be collected by the federal government and part of it returned to local schools. To satisfy labor leaders the platform must give some assurance that the Landrum-Griffith Bill and Taft-Hartley Law will be modified or repealed.

In most of the past conventions the platform has been accepted with a "ho-hum" attitude. It has rarely been followed by the candidates after the conventions. But with Congress returning to active sessions and with a large majority of Democrats controlling both houses, the Democrats cannot shrug off the platform. If they do not enact most of its provisions into laws by Nov. 1 they will have made a mockery of the platform adopted by the convention delegates. But if they do adopt most of the provisions they will perform a miracle in view of the divergent views of the Democrats from the North and South.

These are some reasons why the platform should be of greater interest in the next few days. The real game appears to be in who will be the candidate. But the platform planks can mean victory or defeat for whomever the convention nominates. It could well be the maneuvers which slowed up Congress to force a recess rather than adjournment will prove to be the mistake of the year for the party in power.—L.A.C.

Man, Wife in Two Cars, Collide, Hurt

OTTAWA, Ill. (AP) — Automobiles driven by a man and his wife crashed Saturday on a gravel road near their farm home.

Both drivers—Ralph Bain, 24, and Beverly Bain, 20—were taken to Ryburn King Hospital where they were reported in fair condition. The accident occurred three miles east of Ottawa.

Spy Pilot's Russ Trial to Be Military

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union announced Saturday that American spy pilot Francis Gary Powers will be tried by a military court for espionage. The maximum penalty on conviction is death by shooting.

By ordinary standards of Soviet law, this means the trial will be secret and not open to the public, and could mean that the trial already has taken place.

NO DATE or place for a trial was mentioned.

The government said that the investigation of the Powers case had been completed.

The announcement said an indictment had been handed in to the Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. and that the court had handed this over to its military division.

This is equivalent to a high-level court martial by western standards. No such trial has ever been held in public in the Soviet Union, and it is commonly believed Powers' trial will be just as secret as the thousands that have preceded his.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A source close to the wife of U2 spy-plane pilot Francis G. Powers hinted Saturday there is fear over a letter from him.

The source said a second letter from Powers to his wife, Barbara, "did not ring true."

"IT WAS too much like the first one," the source said. "It did not indicate what it should have indicated, if you know what I mean."

In Virginia, usually reliable sources said Saturday Francis Powers has cabled his father, Oliver, of Pound, Va., that he does not want American attorneys representing him at his trial.

Red Tide Back Along Coast

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The red tide has returned to the San Diego County coastline in luminescent proportions, the University of California's Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla reported Saturday.

The organisms cause the surf to sparkle luminescently at night.

He added that the Soviet premier's remarks also revealed the "close ties that have developed between the Soviet and Cuban governments."

Atom-Doom Dodgers to Emerge Soon

BENSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A hundred men, women and children waited huddled in the cellars of their sealed homes here Saturday night to see if the world is going to be devastated by a nuclear holocaust.

The group went underground Monday, convinced that atomic war was a certainty within a few days.

Members of the small religious sect, who have resisted all attempts to get in touch with them except when worried authorities broke into one home, said they would emerge today if the atomic war they predicted hadn't come.

THE FAMILIES sealed off their homes completely, with tape and paper around the doors and windows, and took up living in their cellars Monday after announcing they had been divinely informed that a nuclear war would start this week.

Other residents of this small town were concerned over their sudden disappearance. Sect members' cars were parked outside their homes, but there was no sight or sound of life. There were no answers to telephone calls or repeated rapping on the doors.

He said: "I affirm, in the most emphatic terms, that the United States will not be deterred from its responsibility by the threats Mr. Khrushchev is making, nor will the United States, in conformity

Brown's Aides Drifting Over Choice

By BOB HOUSER
L.P.T. Political Editor

LOS ANGELES—Some of Gov. Edmund G. Brown's lieutenants drifted out of formation this weekend, but the governor's headlong charge into Kennedy country with a majority of the troops seemed certain.

Brown, as favorite-son general, still was in command despite defections. Brown predicted he would take a majority with him which ever direction he went. The defectors agreed Brown had this capability.

Colorful Throngs Greet 3 Candidates at Airport

Three candidates for Democratic presidential nomination arrived in Los Angeles Saturday.

(Reports of their receptions follow.)

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Adlai Stevenson came to Los Angeles Saturday, acting every inch a candidate despite disavowal of any campaign for the Democratic nomination for President.

A large crowd of rosters cheered as Stevenson blasted the Republican administration for what he called its "complacency of the past eight years." Police Capt. Robert W. Richards estimated two hours before Stevenson arrived that 5,000 persons were on hand.

Donkey Diary

The crowd shouted down Stevenson's statements indicating he thinks the Democratic party has other candidates as good as himself for the nomination.

"WE WANT Stevenson!" the audience chanted for several minutes, as Stevenson stood smiling on a stand at the airport.

"I am not here to promote my candidacy," he said. "I am here as a delegate for no personal purpose, but to share in the common and crucial task of the convention."

A forest of placards and banners waved before him from the crowd which had waited much of the afternoon after Stevenson's plane was delayed by a refueling stop at Las Vegas, Nev.

"It is remarkable," he said, "that in the most revolutionary period in history the only thing that has stood stock still is the Republican administration."

He said some are saying it is time for a change, adding: "If it is, then they have their man — Revolving Richard."

Stevenson's reference was to Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the virtually certain Republican nominee for President. He added that people often don't know whether Nixon is going or coming — "but we know: He's going."

BEAMING BEAUTIES CHANT FOR STUART

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Beaming at pretty girls chanting "We want Stu," Sen. Stuart Symington breezed into town Saturday and declared: "Obviously, I'm not here to lose."

A few hundred well-wishers swarmed over the vast reception area at International Airport when the Missouri senator and his wife, Eve, got off the plane from San Francisco.

Brushing aside newsmen's questions, Symington posed under a warm, hazy sun as photographers crowded around. Then he rode in a motorcade to the reception at the other end of the airport.

As the band played "When the Saints Go Marching In," Symington mounted a platform and told the crowd: "This is a wonderful reception. We'll remember it as long as we live."

Later, he was whisked away in a motorcade to Democratic convention headquarters at the Biltmore Hotel.

KENNEDY ASSAILS LYNDON CRITICISM

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Front-running Sen. John F. Kennedy arrived here Saturday to assume command of his drive for the Democratic presidential nomination and promptly struck back at Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson's criticism of his relative youth. He was welcomed at the airport by a crowd estimated at 3,500.

Obviously stung by the Texan's statement that he lacked experience to be President, Kennedy told newsmen at International Airport: "I expect to defeat Sen. Johnson by the end of next week, and I wonder what that is going to do to him."

Kennedy, tanned, smiling, and outwardly confident, arrived by jet plane accompanied by New York Mayor Robert Wagner. He was greeted by Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Pennsylvania, California, New Jersey, Kansas, Minnesota, and Iowa. All are committed to favorite sons on the first go-around but contain Kennedy backers.

"I am quite confident I am going to get the 161 votes I need for nomination from these states," he said.

The senator was asked if he thought the anticipated endorsement of Kennedy by California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, possibly today, would touch off a convention steamroller.

"I would think it extremely important," Kennedy replied.

CAPT. ROBERT W. Richards of the Los Angeles Police Department estimated the crowd welcoming Kennedy at 3,500. Richards also placed the crowds for Sens. Stuart S. Symington (D-Mo.), and Johnson at 300 and 500 respectively.

Addressing the crowd, Kennedy got in a dig at Johnson. Kennedy said that one of the other presidential hopefuls recently said that Kennedy didn't have as many grey hairs as he does.

"Well, we put that grey hair on his head and we're going to continue to do so," Kennedy said.

Urge Grab in Isles

TOKYO, Sunday (AP)—The left-wing labor federation Sobosi, of South Sumatra, Indonesia, urged the government Saturday to nationalize all American-owned enterprises in Indonesia. Antara News Agency reported today.

IT'S FUN to check Classified for things you want to buy.

Lt. Gov. Glenn Anderson chirped Morgan, "Scotty Reston had written about our 'bleak and dispirited headquarters.' Now he writes that the race is between Kennedy and Stevenson."

Meanwhile, Brown's press secretary, Hale Champion, wrestled with a new problem. The Knickerbocker caucus area where Brown's announcement is due has a fire marshal-approved capacity of 205. Some 243 delegates and alternates are expected to attend, plus some 500 working newsmen. He is looking for a new spot.

Bill Munnell, the state Democratic chairman, while declining public acknowledgement of his pro-Stevenson mood, was too late with his protest as the word leaked into print in some newspaper accounts. But Munnell also pointed out his sentiments for Stevenson would not commit him to a hopeless cause.

JESSE UNRUH, Brown's right arm in the Assembly where he heads ways and means, has been sounding the charge for Kennedy for months. Rep. John Shelley, of the delegation, was unfazed either by word of delegation dissidents or of claims by candidates other than Kennedy. Shelley's preoccupation Saturday was a recasing of Kennedy's strength among the 126 half-vote members of the Brown delegation. He emphasized he expected to find gains, not losses.

Charley Porter, Compton Assemblyman who has worked unstintingly for Brown legislative programs, wore a sympathetic banner for Lyndon Johnson. But Porter was quick to acknowledge Brown's hold on the delegation and his ability to take a majority his way after releasing members from allegiance to his favorite-son role. He said his choice was based mainly "because I'm interested in national legislation—and Lyndon Johnson will still be majority leader when he goes back to Washington. I've worked with him and recognize his abilities."

JOSEPH WYATT, president of the unofficial party Democratic Council, said he is uncommitted but will listen carefully to Brown's counsel today.

"I don't expect him to urge us to vote for a candidate simply because he prefers that candidate," said Wyatt, "but if his suggestion is accompanied by good and sufficient reason, I would respect that suggestion because he is privy to intelligence perhaps unavailable to the other delegates."

Brown, pictured over the past weeks as a man with divergent leanings and preferences, answered a firm "no" when asked if there is a chance he might break his own deadline for an announcement at the 2 p.m. delegation caucus today in the Hollywood-Knickerbocker, delegate headquarters.

TOM MORGAN, press chief at Stevenson HQ, admitted the battle is still uphill but contends the wheels have been greased.

Sensitive to any change in the wind, Morgan said Saturday Adlai supporters had a dilly in the about-face performed by James Reston of the New York Times.

TOO MUCH FOOD AND SPEECHES

William Perkins Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Perkins, 1776 Rose Ave., found the 55th annual Iowa Picnic at Recreation Park just too much to bear Saturday and caught a bit of shut-eye. Even the music of the Long Beach Municipal band and the applause of the audience didn't disturb the boy.—(Staff Photo by Kent Henderson.)

7,500 AT PICNIC

Iowa Governor Greet Friends

By BILL DONLEVY

Iowa Gov. Herschel C. Loveless told an estimated 7,500 former Iowans attending the 55th annual Iowa picnic at Recreation Park that any time the atmospheric conditions out here bothered them, they were welcome back home.

The state's chief executive addressed the group after a hectic trip from Los Angeles where he is attending the National Democratic Convention.

He explained that if he and his attractive wife looked somewhat bedraggled, it was because their transportation to Long Beach suffered two breakdowns.

Gov. and Mrs. Loveless were forced to leave one car and take a second, and then it broke down in Compton. The Long Beach Police Dept. came to the rescue and brought the couple to the picnic.

MARSHALL CRAIG, president of the All States Society of Long Beach and a native of Allison, Ia., was master of ceremonies.

The Rev. J. R. McNichols, formerly of Waterloo, Ia., and vice president of the Iowa Assn. of Long Beach, delivered the invocation.

Dan C. Dutcher, formerly of Iowa City, and president of the Iowa Assn. of Southern Calif., also addressed the group.

A tragic note to the celebration occurred when Daymon Woodbury, 60, of 2330 E. Santa Fe Ave., Fullerton, died of a heart attack.

Woodbury, a former automobile dealer at Charles City, Ia., was attending the picnic with his wife when he was stricken. The body is at Mottell's & Peek Mortuary here.

A key to the City of Long Beach was presented to Loveless by Mayor Edwin C. Wade. In making the presentation, Wade said the key would open any door in Long Beach with the exception of the city treasury.

Loveless said Iowa was pretty well off, and if Long Beach needed any money he would see about arranging a loan.

LOVELESS, former mayor of the city of Ottumwa, Ia., recalled the disastrous flood that hit that city in 1947, but added that this year, despite heavy spring rains, "everything is growing well."

"Many of you who have been gone for some time remember the green fields, but I must remind you that now there are tall factory chimneys among those fields and we need the hands and minds capable of running them."

"I hope to tempt some of you to come back to Iowa."

Loveless, Democratic nominee for the U. S. Senate in Iowa, is chairman of the rules committee of the National Convention and also has been cited as a dark-horse candidate for vice president.

"They tell me I'm high up on somebody's list, but I don't know whose," he told The Independent, Press-Telegram.

Ike to Appeal for Spending Lid

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI)—President Eisenhower will appeal to Congress when it reconvenes after the political conventions to complete work on his legislative program and to hold the line against an election-year spending spree.

The President's plans were announced while he relaxed on a fishing expedition in advance of his meeting Monday with top aides on the mounting Cuban crisis.

News Secretary James C. Hagerty said the President does not think the legislators have even begun to complete work on vital measures suggested by the administration. He cited the farm bill and the measure appropriating money for the foreign-aid program as two examples.

Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and the White House staff secretary, Brig. Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster, are due here today for an early-Monday conference with the President on the Cuban situation as well as other international matters.

IN ADDITION to assessing the mounting tension between the United States and Premier Fidel Castro's Cuban regime, which now has the backing of Soviet military threats, the President and his aides will discuss details of a new American plan for raising living standards in the western hemisphere.

The President is expected to announce, following the Monday meeting here at the naval base, the general outline of the plan, which will be presented at the Sept. 5 meeting of the economic ministers of the 21 American republics in Bogota.

The President spent most of Saturday fishing at the Hioanlowland farm near West Greenwich, R. I., of his friend W. Alton Jones, chairman of the board of the Cities Service Corp.

The President is concerned, Hagerty acknowledged, lest election-year politics lead both Democratic and Republican congressmen to wreck his budget by opening the situation as well as other appropriations floodgates to woo voters.

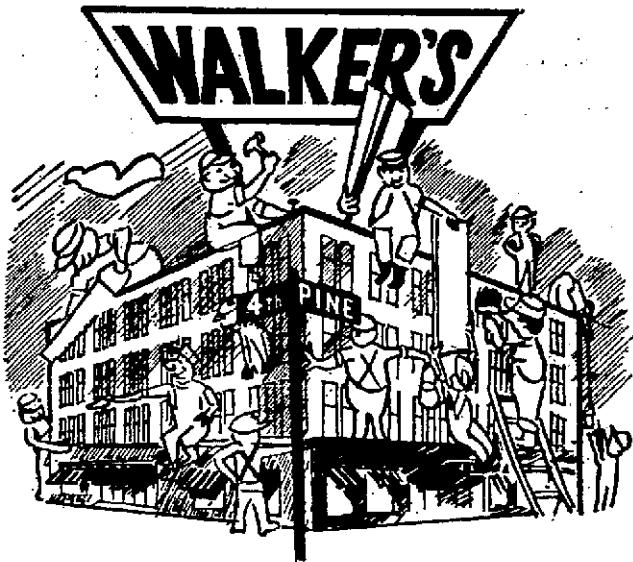

Hagerty said the President had not yet decided on the method of presenting his appeal to Congress. He may deliver it in person, simply send it to Capitol Hill, or take his case to the nation in a radio and television address.

The President planned to attend church today at the chapel of the officers candidate school on the naval base.

Here's the Cast in Big Democratic Drama

Donkey Diary

By ARTHUR EDSON

LOS ANGELES (AP)—If it's a lively, rowdy political convention you're after, this could be it.

Monday the Democrats move into the new Sports Arena—it looks something like a monstrous, sky-blue flying saucer at roost—to pick the man they think should be the next president of the United States.

Not since 1952 have the prospects for excitement looked so good.

That was the year of the great turbulence, when the Democrats chose Adlai Stevenson and the Republicans came up with a promising political rookie, Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The big questions to be settled here are:

Can anyone catch the front runner, Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.)?

If so, who?

No one can predict what politicians will do, but the ingredients are here for a spectacular finish.

Let's take a quick look at some of the characters you'll be seeing hearing and reading about during this week.

THE FIRST OFFICIAL VOICE you'll hear will belong to Paul Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. He will call the convention to order.

Cartoonists still picture professional politicians as untidy, heaps of lard moving slovenly toward nefarious goals under cover of deep cigar smoke.

But the caricature doesn't fit Butler at all.

Butler, at 55, stays as slim as a debutante, dresses impeccably. He neither drinks nor smokes, possibly because he has to watch his health. He's a diabetic, but he whips right along, fully charged with insulin.

Theoretically, a national chairman is all things to all party men, a glad on-the-other-hand. Butler says what he thinks, and though his views—he's for stronger civil rights, for example—often cause his fellow Democrats to cry out in horror, he's been national chairman since January, 1954.

That's astonishing durability in this risky business.

The chore of getting the convention off to a whirlwind start falls on the slender shoulders of what must be the youngest looking senator in our history, Frank Church of Idaho. As temporary chairman, he will make the keynote speech.

Only three senators took office at a more boyish age than Church. He was 32 when he was sworn in three years ago. But he looked younger. They laughed when Church was mistaken for a Senate page boy, but the jeers turned to applause after he stood up to speak.

He's an old hand at oratory. As a 16-year-old schoolboy,

MEN IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Men who will figure in the Democratic Convention are caricatured here. The keynoter, Sen. Frank Church of Idaho (left, front) is congratulated by platform chairman Chester Bowles. In back, Speaker of House Sam Rayburn and Harry S. Truman confer while national chairman Paul Butler listens. Permanent chairman Gov. Leroy Collins (with gavel) checks with parliamentarian Clarence Cannon.

Church tore into a speech, "The American Way of Life," so effectively that he won the National American Legion content—and a $4,000 college scholarship.

Church is dark haired, a slightly built 165-pounder who stands 6 feet. He tries to keep in mind that warning issued by a famous Democrat:

"Every man who comes to Washington changes," Woodrow Wilson said. "He either grows or swells."

THE PERMANENT CHAIRMAN of the convention, who wields tremendous power simply by deciding whom to recognize, and when, will be Gov. LeRoy Collins of Florida.

It will be a shock to see Collins as the gavel-pounder. For this handsome, graying, tall 51-year-old could never be confused with Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas.

Rayburn, bald, short, stern, fair—at 78 a man of tremendous dignity—had held this job so long many believed he was the permanent chairman.

This year Rayburn stepped aside, for purpose. He will manage the presidential campaign for one of his boys, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson.

Not love of politics, but love, got Collins into this vocation.

He wanted to marry his childhood sweetheart, Mary Call Darby. But it took no mathematical wizard to conclude that his job in 1932 presented certain fiscal objections. He was making $34 a month.

So he ran for county prosecutor.

He lost—but the story has a happy ending. He married Miss Darby anyway, and two years later was elected to the Florida house of representatives.

Collins has been a successful politician ever since—so successful that, depending on who heads the ticket, he could wind up the vice presidential nominee.

On the question that haunts every southern politician—where do you stand on the race issue?—Collins is a moderate.

"This matter of racial relations," the governor once said, "is not a southern problem, but an American one. It is not regional, it is human."

FROM TIME TO TIME Collins may confer with Rep. Clarence Cannon of Elsberry, Mo. Cannon, at 81, is once again the parliamentarian.

When asked to unsmile a particularly knotty problem, Cannon often sounds as if he were quoting the rules book. And he may be. He wrote it.

There's no problem in recognizing Cannon. Even when he's happy, Cannon screws up his face so that he looks as if he had just lunched on green persimmons.

And now, the candidates. They fetch up the rear because they rarely appear at the big hall until the game is almost over.

But they won't be in hiding. Research shows that each candidate, on the average, will be interviewed 213 times during the week. In only a few of these will the great man say anything he hasn't said before. But each new interview will be reported speedily and conscientiously.

SINCE KENNEDY IS IN front, let's start with him.

No man in our history has run for the presidency as relentlessly and perhaps as skillfully as Kennedy.

Modern inventions, and the Kennedy millions, have made this possible.

With his own plane, Kennedy has been able to travel enormous distances and still keep up some semblance of holding down a job as senator.

Scarcely a week has gone by without a news release from his office, giving a hamlet-by-city-by-hamlet schedule of his wanderings.

At 43, Kennedy has such a youthful grin and such tremendous charm that it's easy to forget that this nice young man knows where he wants to go and is determined to get there.

Long ago Kennedy made a prediction.

"I may not win (the nomination)," he said, "but if I'm beaten, the winner will know he's been through the fight of his life."

SEN. STUART SYMINGTON of Missouri has the most nerve-tugging position of the candidates.

His plan seems to be this: he's to hang on and circulate and hope. As other candidates fade, their delegates will have to turn somewhere.

And what better final resting place than with Symington, who, at 59, has had more executive experience than all other candidates combined? "Everybody's second choice" is the label that has been plastered on Symington. If that seems faint recommendation for the presidency, remember it has worked many times before.

Exactly 100 years ago another politician had his supporters push him as the ideal second choice. It looked like a forlorn hope at the time, but that's how the nomination went to Abraham Lincoln.

LIKE ALL candidates, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas loves words with which no one can quarrel. "I'm for responsible leadership," he will say belligerently. Sure enough, there won't be an anti-responsible leadership vote left in the place.

But it's true that while other senators, yearning to be promoted to the White House, were out trying to tease good marks out of the voters, Johnson as Senate majority leader was tending the senatorial store.

Naturally this still left him long weekends for his own politicking.

Johnson, 51, big, persuasive, hard driving, has many things going against him.

Butler Gives Dixie Delegates Praise

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Retiring Chairman Paul M. Butler said Saturday he has the "greatest admiration" for Southern members of the Democratic National Committee and received kinder treatment from them than from some other sectional party leaders.

"I'm going to overlook some of the petty things that have been done in the hope that they will not be done to the new chairman," Butler said in a swan-song speech to the outgoing committee.

"This is a party that requires your devotion and mine. I have tried to give the best in me to my party and to my country."

In its final meeting, the committee approved the 1960 convention arrangements, deferred action on a Puerto Rican credentials dispute and heard an encouraging financial report.

BUTLER REPORTED that the 1956 campaign deficit has been cut from $750,000 to $25,000. He said he hoped that by next Saturday, when the new committee convenes, the "entire deficit will be wiped out."

Butler's praise for the convention preparations under Director J. Leonard Reinsch drew half-humorous challenges from two old-time Democrats. Former Kentucky Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler said he hadn't been able to get his convention tickets or his badge.

Members joined Butler in laughter when Committeeman Jerry W. Carter of Florida protested: "I have not yet called at any office at this convention and gotten satisfactory information. I've been to your office three or four times."

CARTER SAID Reinsch once pretended to talk to Butler by phone in his behalf when the Florida member tried without luck to reach the chairman. Butler said Carter was mistaken—that he actually had been on the other end of the phone conversation.

Butler told the committee there were "very, very few members with whom I have had any personal antagonism." He said most of the differences were ones of "principle" and he "gloried" in the right of others to say what they felt.

CONVENTION ATTRACTION

Pickpockets, Burglars, Purse Snatchers Active

LOS ANGELES (CNS)—A special detail of police assigned to Democratic convention headquarters at the Biltmore cracked down Saturday on pickpockets, burglars and purse thieves attracted by the huge convention gathering.

A rash of pickpockets and purse theft reported by victims brought special precautions and instruction from an expert who briefed officers on methods used by convention thieves.

Several women reported their purses were grabbed after they left them in convention rooms.

The room of a press secretary's attache was burglarized earlier in the week by a thief who removed a wallet and valuable papers from a coat.

Mrs. Harry Roxton of Alhambra, reported her purse was snatched at the hotel Friday.

Expected convention antics brought brief disturbances during the week. One man was ushered out of Symington headquarters after he annoyed secretaries and volunteer workers with loud demands for "justice."

Kennedy Forces Claim 800 Votes

pected to start the ball rolling. This looked like California Saturday night. Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown planned to declare for Kennedy at a state caucus today and is expected to provide a minimum of 48 first-ballot Kennedy votes.
Even before Kennedy arrived, Gov. George Docking of Kansas had swung to the 43-year-old Massachusetts senator and urged his state's 21 votes to follow him. Most if not all are expected to.
Most of Minnesota's 31-vote delegation led by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, who controls 35 to 40 additional votes by virtue of his primary campaigns, has long been ticketed for the Kennedy column. A state caucus this afternoon will determine details of how the Humphrey votes will be swung to Kennedy. A key factor in the timing will be how to make the move a boost for either Humphrey or Gov. Orville Freeman as a running mate for Kennedy. Kennedy now leans toward Humphrey.

THERE WAS NO official word from the always tight-lipped Gov. David Lawrence of Pennsylvania but it was reliably reported he sees the Kennedy handwriting on the wall and will do nothing to discourage about half of his 81-vote delegation from going to Kennedy.
Kennedy made it clear Saturday on his arrival that he'll watch with intense interest the California delegation caucus at 2 p.m. today.
He said a Brown endorsement "would be extremely significant and important" to his first-ballot strength. He carefully avoided saying it would put him over the top, yet it was clear he feels that would be the effect.
Reporters pressed Kennedy to predict that California could start a bandwagon, but he insisted, as he has all along, that he's not making any such claim.
Gov. Herschel Loveless, Iowa's favorite son, talked with Brown Saturday about the California governor's anticipated action and the odds were that the Iowan, too, would come out for Kennedy.

THE SWING OF the favorite sons to Kennedy is not without technical difficulties as regards first-ballot voting. Some delegations are under specific instructions to vote for their governors at least once. However, there seemed little question that after such a vote, most if not all could switch before the opening roll call, came to an official end.
Added to these northern and western reservoirs of actual and potential Kennedy strength were dissident elements in some southern delegations who saw little value in going down fighting with Sen. Lyndon Johnson.

Little by little, delegates were breaking away from a once-solid phalanx of support for Johnson in delegations below the Mason-Dixon line. One indication of this feeling came Saturday when Gov. Elect Terry Sanford of North Carolina declared for Kennedy and estimated that a third of his state's 37 votes would follow.

claim as exaggerated, but he couldn't give a breakdown of the count.
The Johnson candidacy sustained a mild first-ballot setback when Louisiana's delegation insisted it supports favorite son Gov. Jimmie Davis. The Texan counted heavily on unit-rule support in eight of the 10 Dixie delegations to plug any Kennedy gaps in the dike that might develop in Georgia, Alabama, or South Carolina.

IF THERE was any effort to achieve the chief hope of the stop-Kennedy movement—a coalition of the candidates—it was not apparent.
Symington's passive-resistance campaign rested its case on an assumed Johnson-Kennedy deadlock.
The Missourian said neither Johnson nor Kennedy has enough strength to win.
"We're going to have an open convention," he said. "It's not going to be decided on the first or second ballot."
Symington shied away from membership in any coalition, saying he had never discussed "any effort to stop any other candidate" with anybody.

THE COMBINED first-ballot claims of the candidates added up to enough to stop Kennedy on the first ballot. Whether the margin was great enough to prevent a second-ballot stampede to Kennedy was the big question on the eve of the convention.
Johnson claims 500-plus, Symington added 150, and the total of favorite-son votes for New Jersey Gov. Robert Meyner, Sen. George Smathers (D-Fla.), Gov. Davis, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, Gov. David Lawrence of Pennsylvania, and others pushed the total to around 950.
But the Johnson forces were keenly aware this could be shaved back to thin advantage or no advantage after Brown's expected endorsement of Kennedy today and after the Pennsylvania delegation caucuses Monday morning.

state, a political marriage effort to stop Kennedy. Nothing materialized, but Kennedy is today in such a dominant position that talk of this nature finds receptive ears. Stevenson rooters were out in force to greet their hero and he certainly has enthusiastic support among many elements. His actual delegate count, however, appears relatively small and hostility to a third try by Stevenson is strong in the delegations from the country's heartland. Stevenson's main strength lies on the eastern seaboard and here in California.
Sen. Stuart Symington was keeping his banner high and he courageously told a press conference Saturday that he expected the convention ultimately to nominate him. He was standing practically alone in his confidence for by and large he has been the forgotten man of the Democratic get-together.
His candidacy will no doubt get a publicity shot in the arm when his most famous backer, Harry S. Truman, rolls into town, but Truman's help it not expected to translate itself into votes unless the convention turns into a long deadlock—an event which at the moment seems highly unlikely.

ADLAI STEVENSON, the noncandidate candidate, was by early evening also on hand, although he was not personally pressing his own case. Stevenson undoubtedly has a measure of strength in this convention and if, through some circumstances, the Kennedy balloon should blow up, Stevenson is a likely winner.
In assessing the mood of this convention, there was much talk Saturday of Johnson throwing his support to Stevenson in a last-ditch

WHERE'S YOUR HOME STATE SEATED?

To help you follow in the news and on television the action at Democratic convention in the Sports Arena, here is the seating plan. TV towers are indicated. Black dots show approximate locations of the chairmen of various delegations. As the host state, California has a prime location. J. Leonard Reinsch, director-manager of the convention, says most locations reflect the order in which states fulfilled fund drive quotas. Lagging in this respect, apparently, were such southern states as Louisiana, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama.

Man in a 'Hurricane's Eye'

CONVENTION DIRECTOR CAUGHT IN PARTY CROSSWINDS

By LOU JOBST

LOS ANGELES — J. Leonard Reinsch, a telephone receiver cradled against his ear, sorted through a stack of papers with his right hand and beckoned to an aide standing at the door with his left.

"They call this," he said, indicating the handsomely furnished Biltmore Hotel suite, "the eye of the hurricane."

It's calm in here, but the storm rages all around."

The buzzer sounded and three of the pushbuttons on the desk phone lighted up and a pretty secretary showed delegation bosses from South Carolina, Virginia and Alabama into the room.

"Here we go again," winked the 51-year-old Reinsch (pronounced Wrench), a man on a merry-go-round, the National Democratic Convention.

Reinsch, a 6-foot radio and TV executive from Atlanta, Ga., is director-manager of the convention; a herculean job with much prestige, but little political potential.

"THIS OFFICE has to be run on a completely non-partisan basis," explained Reinsch who during the first two hours of his 15-hour work day had held eight meetings with various delegations, a pair of conferences with the credentials and organization committees, placated irate hotel managers over disparaging remarks made about accommodations on a television show, drew up the final plans for parking at the Coliseum and conducted a dozen telephone conversations with party bigwigs all over the nation.

"I can't have a personal preference for a candidate."

Reinsch, who is the most experienced convention manager in both parties (he was drafted by President Roosevelt in 1944), has to take the stance of an objective bystander (he uses the term

Donkey Diary

"professional executive") because he oversees virtually every aspect of the show from seating to buying bunting and obviously could aid any of the candidates with well-placed and timed favors.

AS PROOF of his non-partisanship Reinsch proudly pointed out that the staffs of candidates Symington, Kennedy and Johnson got together June 28 and "threw me a surprise birthday party."

The phone rang again. "Nominating speeches must be limited to 15 minutes, that's it," he said crisply.

"Another thing," he said, putting down the phone and picking up his horn-rimmed glasses, "there can be no delay on replies. They must be instantaneous and, I hope, impartial."

Reinsch and his 10-man team moved into Los Angeles in February to begin making arrangements for the 4,518 delegates and alternates, their families, 5,400 newsmen and hundreds of VIPs.

Some of the tasks were astounding — notably the installation of 4,000 telephones, 350 teletype machines and 12,000 miles of line and cable to handle 500,000 words which will be sent out each day to 10,000 publishing centers throughout the world and the $50,000 decorating job of downtown Los Angeles and the Sports Arena with materials which include enough satin to make 150 evening gowns.

"What's this job like?" he asked. "It's something like producing Ben-Hur for a one night stand."

THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR of six radio and television stations in Georgia, North Carolina and Ohio uses every waking moment in conducting convention business and even eats in the hotel so he can confer with officials between bites.

Seating arrangements, like candidate office facilities, can be a subject of awesome controversy but Reinsch breezed past this pitfall by employing some simple rules.

Choice spots were given to California as the host delegation, Idaho as the state of the keynote speaker, Sen. Frank Church, and Florida as the home of Gov. LeRoy Collins, permanent convention chairman.

Also in front-row positions are states expected to lead demonstrations for presidential candidates—Illinois (Stevenson), Missouri (Symington), Massachusetts (Kennedy) and Texas (Johnson).

However, Reinsch says, most locations were parcelled out to the states in the order that they fulfilled their fund drive quotas. Maryland was first.

"Actually there isn't a bad location on the floor," added Reinsch, a meticulous dresser who looks just as fresh and impeccable at the end of a riotous day as at its start.

"The Sports Arena is the finest political convention facility in the world."

REINSCH'S BIGGEST and most recurring headache is the delegate who "shows up two or three days ahead of schedule and before accommodations are ready."

He reassured one of his three secretaries that candidates' signs put up on house fronts facing the arena would be taken down, looked over a sketch of the platform decorations, read a letter and ordered a staff member to "take it up to Paul" (Butler, the party's national chairman).

"I've got to shut down

Delegates May Get Smog

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The city Saturday offered singers 2,000 reserved seats to the final session of the Democratic convention.

here for a conference on allocations," he said apologetically and added as afterthought that the convention will cost about $400,000.

Before he reached the door he was buttonholed by a Kennedy worker and a Stevenson-wearing supporter of Sen. Johnson.

"We have a saying," Reinsch laughed.

"The Republicans have committees and the Democrats have Reinsch."

Kennedy Gets Top Quarters

By MARIE W. RIDDER

Of L. P. T. Chronicle Bureau

LOS ANGELES—The luck of the Irish appears to be holding up, at least in the little things, for Sen. John F. Kennedy.

Presidential hopefuls drew straws for office space at the Los Angeles Sports Arena. The senator from Massachusetts hit the jackpot.

Model houses on the edge of the arena grounds were made available for the use of the top runners. One of the houses still is in the planning stage, another lacks plumbing, but Jack drew a cozy billet, complete with swimming pool.

Lyndon Johnson's workers are hastily constructing an outhouse for his quarters, while supporters of Sen. Stuart Symington are out buying a tent. Adlai E. Stevenson enthusiasts make no comment on their housing plans.

INDEED, IF CROWDS, noise, and decor create a win-win, the casual observer could call it a Kennedy victory already. Kennedy's Biltmore headquarters are festooned in red, white, and blue, with large pictures of the candidate, his beautiful wife, and baby daughter strewn liberally around the premises. On the walls are artful pictures of Jack as a hero of many occasions.

Hot coffee, out of China cups, is served by sun-tanned lovelies in the Kennedy uniform of red, white, and blue cotton dresses.

Hovering between the Coca-Cola machine and desks are helpful young men asking: "Can I do anything for you?" These volunteers have been induced to wear a Ken-neddy costume too—gray flannels, red-checked madras jackets, and straw boaters similar to the hats worn by the pretty girls.

Adlai.

Donkey Diary

Across the hall, Symington's headquarters are sedately quiet. Huge posters saying: "Unite with Symington" are its only decor. The candidate's son is on hand to greet visitors, standing generally near the Coca-Cola machine.

JOHNSON headquarters are the most difficult to find. Disgruntled volunteers claim that national-committee chairman, Paul Butler, "tried to hide us." Piece de resistance in the Texan's headquarters are candies bearing the legend: "Chew Lyndon Peppermints."

Only at the last minute were Stevenson advocates given a room of their own. Tucked away on a mezzanine floor, it proved so inadequate that space was taken in a building across the street from the Biltmore. Adlai is now ensconced in what used to be a lingerie shop and forlorn signs of "Sale, Building Being Razed Next Week" mingle with the most curious of the convention's slogans: "Time for a Change. We Want Adlai."

J. LEONARD REINSCH... "Storm Rages All Around"

Women at Conventions Can't Dress Casually—TV Lightning May Strike

By MARIE W. RIDDER
Chief of L. P. T. Convention Bureau

LOS ANGELES—With television cameras trained on every nook and cranny of the conventions, the clothing of the female has gone through a radical change.

Time was when the candidate's wife, the lady delegate or the governor's lady could wear her comfortable clothes and walking shoes to the great arena. But now, she can't be sure at what moment the glare of millions of eyes might be focused on her stockinged feet just as she has slipped out of those homey slippers.

The political lady must be well dressed. Minnesota's Abigail McCarthy's first reaction to "all this talk that Eugene might be a vice-presidential candidate" added up to a week's shopping, "just in case I have to be seen on television."

'AND I SAY TO YOU, MY HUSBAND . . .'

WORST PROBLEM is that of front runner Jack Kennedy's pregnant wife. "I promised," says the lovely Jacqueline, "to come to Los Angeles if Jack is nominated but I'm not sure I will look very well." The beautiful Mrs. Kennedy is dressed by French couturier Givenchy, but she says plaintively, "even his generous seams have a limit."

For many months Jackie has been wearing empire-waisted dresses and loose-jacketed suits. Those of us who have followed her had been suspicious that her formless clothes were designed to disguise a very well-kept secret but she always claimed that her mode of dress was just stylish.

Lyndon Johnson's Lady Bird has no problem. "I get our good friend Stanley Marcus (of Dallas' famed Neiman Marcus) to help me choose my clothes," Mrs. Johnson doesn't know what she will wear if she has to get up on the podium. "I just brought the clothes I already owned—and two new, street dresses."

Missouri's favorite son's wife always has been famous for her chic simplicity. Mrs. Stuart Symington says, "I just buy clothes that please me. Now that I am older I look best in very simple pastel dresses and suits."

NOT ONE of the ladies is eager to disclose the details or the price tag of the dress she has chosen just in case the lightning strikes.

Since the chic thing this year is to be seen at the conventions, one finds many who have nothing to do with the smoke-filled rooms. Refugees from the Stork Club abound. Some New Yorkers, like Mrs. Averell Harriman, have come complete with lady's maid.

There is a distinct regional difference in female attire. Lady politicians from the East wear black, navy blue or gray. They are more concerned over their hair-dos than hats. Ladies of the Middle Western delegations incline to prints, most wear hats, whereas Western dames wear colorful cottons and white shoes. More than 600 distaff politicians are thinking about "what to wear" at the sports arena.

COMPETITION FOR eye-catching attire goes beyond the candidate's lady. The city of Los Angeles has garbed its "welcome" girls in white dresses, with blue-ribboned straw hats. Not to be outdone by civic hospitality the city is crowded with leggy sun-tanned "Lovelies for Kennedy," dressed in colorful red, white - and - blue - striped cottons.

The dresses, cut low in front and back, were designed by Pat Kennedy Lawford. The inevitable straw hats finish the costume.

Texas, never to be outdone, is dressing its "Ladies for Lyndon" in striped red, white and blue blouses over white skirts. Their special gimmick is that all the ladies in the Lone Star State delegation and all the wives of its congressmen are to wear the outfit. As one wag puts points out, "These fancy outfits look fine on all that pretty youth for Kennedy but when you get it on some others—well I guess there will be a lot of dieting in the Texas delegation before Monday."

Soviet Composer Doing Art Film Songs

BERLIN (AP)—Soviet composer Dmitri Shostakovich is working on music for a movie. The East German news agency ADN reported he is in Dresden for conferences on the joint Soviet-German film "Five Days and Five Nights" showing the rescue of the city's treasures by the Soviet army at the end of World War II.

Coverage by 5,000 May Be a Record

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Is the Democratic National Convention the most-covered news event of all time?

The Democrats are saying it is, and this may be one political claim that is true. When you get 5,000 people putting out a news story, that ought to be a record.

"There may have been more newsmen reporting a war in all its theaters, but I doubt it," says Sam Brightman, chief of press arrangements for the Democrats.

The Democratic war has attracted correspondents from around the globe, including two from Tass. Also covering for the Iron Curtain are a Polish press agency and a Czechoslovakia news agency.

ALL 50 STATES are represented among the 450 newspapers accredited to cover the convention. Staffs range from the 100-plus of the Associated Press to a correspondent from the Anchorage Times.

Seventy foreign newspapers and agencies are represented, including those of Austria, Australia, Canada, England (biggest foreign group), Formosa, India, Indonesia, Japan, Yugoslavia, Israel, Ireland, Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland and Viet-nam.

Brightman, a former Lancaster, Mo., boy and St. Louis reporter, has been working on press arrangements for a year and a half.

NEW DEALERS OF '30s FADING

Democratic Old Guard Making Its Last Stand

By WALTER T. RIDDER
Chief of L. P. T. Convention Bureau

LOS ANGELES—The fight now raging at the Democratic National Convention is not only over the presidential candidate, but also over control of the Democratic Party.

This convention is the last stand of the Old Guard, those men who in the 1930s rode into power as young New Dealers under the aegis of their hero and leader, Franklin Delano Roosevelt. They have, in effect, been controlling the party ever since.

The fierceness of the current battle is intensified by the knowledge of men like Sam Rayburn, Harry S. Truman, and Oscar Chapman that, should young Jack Kennedy take the nomination, their days as influential party members are numbered.

The Truman group, long dominant in Democratic Party circles, has, in effect, put forth two candidates, Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, and Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri, in an effort to retain their party influence.

OLD NEW DEALERS and

associates of Truman during his presidency are the leading figures in both the Johnson and Symington camps. They are bitterly opposed to both Kennedy and Adlai E. Stevenson, not only because they have doubts about the candidacies of the two, but also because should either win the nomination their influence would wane.

Perhaps only Johnson and, to a lesser extent, Sam Rayburn would maintain a modicum of weight through their positions as majority leader of the Senate and Speaker of the House.

Nor is the Old Guard versus the youngsters the only struggle going on in this convention. There has been a noticeable shift of influence from East to West. The growing West is demanding its place in the political sun. The New York political leaders, who for so long held sway over the Democratic Party, are, in this convention, being almost totally ignored.

Where once the New York leaders were considered the very fulcrum of convention politics, today they are paid little heed. One reporter, wishing to speak to New York's so-called bosses, Carmine De Sapio and Michael Pendegast, found them in T-shirts and swimming suits, sunning themselves at a Los Angeles hotel poolside, unconsulted and impotent as far as convention in-fighting was concerned.

NOTICEABLE, TOO, is what might be called the federalization of our political system. The candidates are largely drawn from the federal government, three of them operating out of the U.S. Senate. Not one governor is being seriously considered as a candidate, save as an extremely dark horse in case of a prolonged convention deadlock.

Not so long ago, it was regarded as political suicide for a prospective presidential candidate to seek a Senate seat. Today, apparently it is all but necessary. As power drifts away from the states and into the hands of the federal government, the man conversant with federal problems, above all with foreign policy, is looked upon as the likeliest presidential material.

Foreign policy has revived the once dormant candidacy of Adlai Stevenson; it is advanced by his opponents as the reason why the youthful Kennedy should not be nominated. Lack of experience in the foreign field has all but knocked out of contention the various democratic governors.

OLD PREJUDICES are tottering in this convention. Not so long ago, it would have been impossible to nominate on the Democratic ticket either a Catholic or a man from the Deep South. Yet, today, the two leading contenders are a Catholic and a Southerner.

Neither, of course, may get the nomination, but the fact that they are out ahead in the convention's early stages is proof of the changing patterns of the American political scene.

Beat Police May Collect Car Fees

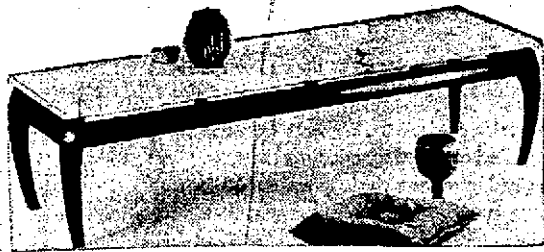

PARIS (AP)—Police chief Maurice Papon told the City Council it takes 44 administrative operations and 12 office workers to collect a single parking fine.

He proposed to cut red tape and paper work by having the policeman on the beat collect for overtime parking. A decision is awaited.

Fire Japan Rioters

TOKYO (AP)—The government-owned Japan National Railways Corp. announced Saturday the firing of 13 employees and lesser penalties for another 1,200 for taking part in the recent demonstrations against the U.S.-Japan security pact.

'MR. CHAIRMAN'

Exhibits Portray Democratic Lore

"Mr. Chairman," an exhibition shown for the first time in this country, featuring historical highlights of the Democratic party, opens today in the California Museum of Science and Industry in Exposition Park, Los Angeles. The exhibition, which will continue through Sept. 19, is a non-partisan approach to the subject.

Scarcely more than a stone's throw from the Sports Arena, scene of the Democratic national convention, the exhibition is expected to attract the interest of political leaders and newspaper and magazine writers around the globe, as well as California citizens.

Dr. Halvor G. Melom, history professor at Long Beach State College, chief researcher for the project, visited the nation's foremost libraries to gather material—the National Archives in Washington, D. C., the Roosevelt Library in Hyde Park, N. Y., the Truman Library in Independence, Mo., and the Huntington Library in Pasadena. "In developing this exhibit we attempted to capture the excitement of American political conventions which dramatically portray key issues of our history," explains Dr. Melom.

VOICES OF DEMOCRATIC PARTY LEADERS from Grover Cleveland to the present and party campaign songs may be heard. There also will be graphic illustrations and life-size photographs of party leaders.

"The Pursuit of Happiness," a motion picture on American life and politics created for the exhibit, will be shown four times a day in an air-conditioned tent.

Dr. Melom screens thousands of pictures, sketches, photographs and documents to create the historical panorama which covers 22,000 square feet in the museum.

Lives and political times of Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, William Jennings Bryan, Grover Cleveland, Woodrow Wilson, Alfred E. Smith, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman are portrayed.

Topics include Democratic conventions, women's suffrage, and the currency problem.

DOCUMENTS INCLUDE the Hollywood Bowl speech made by Roosevelt in 1932 with annotations in FDR's handwriting, his acceptance speech at the 1932 Democratic convention and Roosevelt's first inaugural address.

One of the most interesting items, according to Dr. Melom, is a three-page telegram of congratulations sent to Roosevelt in 1932 by Will Rogers.

Included are a note written by Woodrow Wilson on his typewriter to William Jennings Bryan to avoid dictating to a secretary, and a note from Truman to Charles G. Ross in 1946 requesting a seat at the Gridiron Dinner for Eddie Jacobson "with whom I went broke in the shirt business."

Campaign memorabilia include buttons, metalettes, banners, plates, cartoons and handkerchiefs.

Rockefeller Calls for Bold Platform

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller called on the Republican Party Saturday to prove its capacity for leadership by adopting a platform advocating broad government reforms, bold defense measures and promises of race equality for all.

Rockefeller urged his fellow Republicans to write a platform reflecting courage, imagination and initiative instead of merely containing collections of clichés.

He made his comments in submitting to the GOP the platform he would like to see his party campaign on for the presidency this year.

Rockefeller, who has said he would be available for the GOP nomination, submitted a 10-page, single-spaced proposed platform summarizing the proposals he has made in statements and speeches in recent weeks.

IN A COVERING letter to Platform Committee Chairman Charles H. Percy, Rockefeller said he was aware that "the fullness and frankness of my discussion of these issues has not been understood by burdens of the presidency."

all members of the Republican Party."

He did not mention specifically his challenge to Vice President Richard M. Nixon to outline his own views on the issues before the convention.

Rockefeller said political platforms have tended in recent years to fall into some disrepute.

"THEY HAVE COME to be regarded by many as mere collections of evasions, polemics, sophistries and clichés. They have even been regarded by some cynics in both parties as empty verbal exercises."

Among other things, Rockefeller proposed establishment of a North American Confederation, with a common market, and of a Western Hemisphere Confederation to meet threats such as that now posed by Cuba.

Rockefeller renewed his appeal for creation of the posts of first secretary of the government, executive assistant to the president, and director of the office of executive management, to ease the

Symington Supporter in a Stew

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You could have cut the silence with the dull edge of a campaign poster in one of the cars in Sen. Stuart Symington's motorcade to the Biltmore hotel.

As Symington's party prepared to leave the airport for the hotel, a moment of crisis occurred: Some reporters didn't have rides to convention headquarters.

After some scurrying about, several jammed into a car driven by delegate Cal Calvert of West Covina and a Symington enthusiast, of course.

AS HE DROVE over the freeway, Calvert extolled the virtues of his candidate for the benefit of his passengers.

But one man in the back seat kept a balefully polite silence.

Finally, he said, "I happen to be a Kennedy supporter." He was Mayor Ivan Nestingen of Madison, Wis., chairman of the Wisconsin delegation and a key leader of that state's Kennedy forces.

Latin Chiefs Mum on Cuba; Assassins Miss Critic of U.S.

By the Associated Press

Leaders of Latin America showed no disposition Saturday to line up with Mexican congressional leaders along-side Cuba in its feud with the United States.

There was a reluctance of government leaders to comment, even in such nations as Argentina, Brazil and Chile, where Prime Minister Fidel Castro is suspected and disliked.

Leaders of Peru were equally silent, but Premier Pedro Beltran's newspaper, La Prensa, predicted an early downfall of the Castro regime.

The only comment from Brazil was Foreign Minister Horacio Lafer's recent statement that strained U.S.-Cuban relations must be considered by all Latin American nations in unity.

President Arturo Frondizi of Argentina has been cool toward Castro but has avoided any public statements. President Osvaldo Dorticos of Cuba got a chilly reception on a recent visit and Buenos Aires newspapers have blasted the Cuban regime.

RELUCTANCE to comment appears due to a desire to avoid Cuba's propaganda guns and to avoid anything that sounds like intervention in Cuban affairs.

There is no such reluctance, however, in discussing the U.S. cut in the Cuban sugar quota, for some Latin American nations expect to benefit.

Industry and Mining Secretary Carlos A. Juni of Argentina sent a note to Washington saying Argentina has about 360,000 tons of sugar available for export. Argentina has a sugar surplus.

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—The government newspaper El Nacional Saturday endorsed a congressional expression of Mexico's "solidarity" with the Cuban people in the dispute between Premier Fidel Castro and the United States.

The United States has requested "clarification" from the government of President Adolfo Lopez Mateos of the remarks made by Emilio Sanchez Piedras last Thursday.

Friday, Federal Senate President Manuel Moreno Sanchez said Mexico should supply crude oil to Cuba for the American and other foreign-owned refineries Castro seized because of their refusal to refine Russian crude.

BUT THE opposition Partido Accion Nacional (PAN) criticized Sanchez and the congressional committee for the expressions of support for Castro.

"One thing is the Cuban people, and another is the Communist government it has," said a party statement.

The newspaper Excelsior also spoke critically of Castro.

"Neither materially nor morally is it good business for an American country to deliver itself into the arms of the Moscow-Peking axis," it said in a lengthy editorial analysis of the Cuban situation.

HAVANA (UPI)—Gunmen opened fire Saturday on leading anti-American radio commentator Jose Pardo Llada, wounding a friend who sat next to him and riddling his coat with bullets in a street-corner ambush certain to fan the Castro hate-America campaign.

Pardo was not even scratched. The man with him was wounded critically.

It was the second attempt in three weeks on the life of Pardo whose growling voice delivers daily broadsides against the United States and "Yankee imperialism."

The assassination attempt caused a sensation in Havana and Premier Castro was expected to have a heavy security guard around him when he takes part today in a mass anti-U.S. rally.

HAVANA (UP)—Ernest Hemingway's modest farm outside Havana is safe from expropriation.

Fidel Castro said so Friday night, telling a television audience a new Cuban government decree aimed at seizing all American property on this island was drafted for use only "against those bent on starving and exploiting Cubans."

ERNEST HEMINGWAY

Therefore, the Prime Minister added, his government has no intention of touching small American property owners "like Ernest Hemingway." The American writer has lived in Cuba for many years.

Ex-Newsman Wyatt Shook Dies, Age 77

A 77-year-old retired newspaperman who began his career at the age of 8 died Friday.

Wyatt B. Shook, of 232 W. 233rd St. Wilmington, was born in Rusk, Tex., where his father owned the Rusk Democrat. Shook owned and operated a series of newspapers in Texas, and worked for more than 20 years on the Daily Oklahoman in Oklahoma City. He last was with the San Diego Union.

Funeral services will be at 10 a.m. Monday in Hillside Church, Rose Hills Memorial Park, Whittier. Wyatt is survived by his wife, Olive, and sons, Wyatt B., William, Maynard E., Thomas E., and Buford.

Gunfire Kills 2

CALCUTTA (UP)—Two persons were killed by police gunfire turned on rioters attacking the railway station at Siliguri in the Himalayan foothills Saturday, reports reaching Calcutta said. Violence broke out when Bengali-speaking people attempted to attack an Assam state political leader.

Trustees Reorganized in Alamitos District

LOS ALAMITOS—Reorganization of the board of trustees of Los Alamitos School District and selection of personnel for two positions, one of them new, were announced Saturday.

Richard Noble, who last year was clerk of the board, succeeds Joe Clor as president. Jean Nichols was named clerk. Other members of the board include Charles Tyler and Dr. Leo Goodman-Malmuth. The board will meet July 20 at 7 p.m.

Charlton R. Lee, 4582 Banner Dr., Long Beach, will be school psychologist, replacing Frank Davis, who resigned to do graduate work at Stanford.

Lee, who attended Long Beach City College, was graduated from Long Beach State College, and earned a master-of-arts degree in psychology from UCLA, will take over Sept. 1.

John R. Plymyer, who was principal of the afternoon session at Los Alamitos School, will become curriculum assistant, a new post. He was graduated from Long Beach State College and taught at Alamitos School District three years before he became vice principal of Los Nietos School District, Whittier. Then he transferred to the local system.

Superintendent Jack L. Weaver said that Plymyer's position will be to coordinate special services for children and teachers, prepare handbooks and other materials, organize workshops, and do publicity.

Four Firms to Design Moon Craft

PASADENA (AP) — Four aircraft-missile firms have been chosen to make independent-design studies of an instrumented spacecraft to be soft-landed on the moon, it was announced Saturday.

Dr. William H. Pickering, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory here, said the four designs will be submitted to JPL in December.

He listed the companies as Hughes Aircraft, North American Aviation, McDonnell Aircraft, and Space Technology Laboratories.

Clifford I. Cummings, head of JPL's lunar program, said the soft-lander will be launched by an Atlas-Centaur booster.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Drugs Linked to Cataracts

"Medicine and You," a regular Sunday feature of this newspaper, is prepared in collaboration with the Department of Medical Education, Memorial Hospital of Long Beach.

By BEN ZINSER AND GEORGE N. TRIMBLE, M.D.
Long-term treatment of rheumatoid arthritis with cortisone-like drugs may result in cataracts, reports Dr. Roger L. Black of the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md.

Sixteen of 66 NIH patients receiving such drugs developed lens opacities, but only four had any measurable loss of vision. No surgery was required, nor was it necessary to discontinue the drugs since the effect on vision was considered minor. The cataracts appeared as small, filament-like spots.

The finding, reported to the American Rheumatism Assn., has been disputed by several medical specialists. Dr. Black and associates, however, recommend "prudent" dosage of cortisone-like drugs.

HERE'S BLOOD IN YOUR EYE—if it's scraped.
A few drops of whole blood dripped into the eye can promote healing of abrasions of the cornea—the transparent coat of the eyeball. Dr. Kenneth W. Christenberry, Knoxville, Tenn., reports that the blood is taken from the patient's finger and placed in the eye just before the eye is bandaged, after regular treatment. Dr. Christenberry says in the AMA Archives of Ophthalmology that corneal abrasions are one of the most common injuries of the eye and the blood-application technique can reduce healing time by half. The procedure also offers relief from pain.

THE DRUG PHENMETRAZINE, if taken longer than 12 weeks for weight reduction, appears to have little effect in promoting loss of weight, say Edinburgh researchers in the Journal Lancet. The drug, tradenamed Preludin, is somewhat effective at first, but a danger of addiction exists. Use of the drug in a weight-reducing program is not recommended, they conclude.

BEDROOM SLIPPERS should be banned from the sickroom of the aged and chronically ill, insists Dr. Murray B. Forster, assistant professor of medicine at the University of Pittsburgh. They weaken the feet, he says, and can cause habit patterns of walking that are difficult to correct.

MEN UNDER 45 who devote more than 48 hours a week to the job are more likely to die of a heart attack than other persons. The finding applies only to those men who engage in jobs of a light physical nature. Also, farm workers less than 45 years old do not fall into this category. The hazard of long work hours is reported by Drs. Philip Buell and Lester Breslow of the California State Department of Public Health in the Journal of Chronic Diseases.

A BRITISH PUBLIC HEALTH OFFICER has found what appears to be a relationship between cancer incidence and water supply. After more cancer cases were reported in West Devon than in surrounding communities, Dr. E. D. Allen-Price traced the cause to what he believes is a "cancer-provoking" ingredient in West Devon's highly mineralized wells and springs. The ingredient is still a mystery, and more research is warranted, the doctor says in Lancet.

AFTER A STUDY OF 20 CADAVERS, two University of Pennsylvania researchers offer a startling possibility: In the aged, some strokes (those first evident upon awakening) may result from kinking of blood vessels in the neck because of head position during sleep.
The theory is that of Drs. James F. Toole and Samuel H. Tucker of Philadelphia, who tell of their study in the Archives of Neurology. Some strokes result from interference with blood supply to the brain, and the Pennsylvania researchers believe a temporary pinching of a neck artery during sleep may be one cause of blood shutoff.

HOT WEATHER BOOSTS the death rate far more than cold spell, says a U. S. Weather Bureau meteorologist. Paul H. Kutschenreuter. He told a section meeting of the American Society of Heating, Ventilating and Air Conditioning Engineers that hot-weather deaths are sometimes triple the normal number for the season. Hardest hit: the elderly. Apparently unaffected by either heat waves or cold spells: persons aged 1 year through 24.

DO PROFESSIONAL SINGERS have a bigger lung volume? No, says a report in the Journal of Applied Physiology. Lung volume of 16 professional singers was checked against that of 21 persons who had no professional vocal training. Researchers' finding: no significant difference which could not be explained on basis of age and size.

Channel Swimmer Quits, Says She Won't Try Again

Mary Margaret Revell, 22, of 112 Glendora Ave., quit on her fifth attempt to swim the Catalina Channel and said Saturday she never will try it again.
She said that her doctor had phoned shortly before and warned me it was risky for me to try again." She added that there also was a danger of sharks.

Mortgages Occupy Top Miami Hotels

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., (AP)—Booming business and bankruptcy are neighbors in this glittering resort city where more than two million persons come to enjoy the sun, sand and surf each year.

"Here lie the greatest concentration of plush tourist accommodations in the world and some of the finest entertainment to be had at any price. Here also are: layer upon layer of mortgages and unpaid bills.

Hotels in one block are bankrupt, shuttered and dark; in the next they are crowded.

The paradox of failure in the midst of wealth is no surprise to professional hotel men who for years have been saying you must have the know-how to make the grade.

At least a dozen of the city's 378 hotels, including some of the newest, are in distress and authoritative sources say 35 to 40 of them will go under this year.

Approximately 85 resort hotels received tax cuts in 1958 in what Tax Assessor John Gautier called "economic relief." But it wasn't enough.

THERE IS THE LUCERNE, a 178-room hotel which cost four million dollars when built in 1956. In May the hotel closed and asked for reorganization under the Federal Bankruptcy Act. It was losing $300 to $400 a day with only 60 rooms occupied.

The Nautilus, a 252-room structure, carried many mortgages, at interest rates of 6 to 13 per cent, and was thrown into bankruptcy by fifth and sixth mortgage holders in 1958. It was sold at public auction on its ninth anniversary. Since then rents and other income have amounted to $1,321,713, but expenses, including mortgage payments, taxes and insurance ran to $1,665,274.

Others undergoing reorganization include the Cadillac, Delmonico, Saxony and Sorrento—all luxury oceanfront hotels. Foreclosure suits have been filed against the Lombardy and Plymouth.

DOWN THE STREET from the Lucerne, the Fontainebleau is having the best year in its history, the Deauville is crowded and others are making money. Why?

Admittedly, the area is overbuilt with many plush hotels erected since the end of World War II. Many motels also went up, and bid strongly for the middle class tourist trade.

"You can't buy your son-in-law a hotel and tell him to run it," said Ben Novack,

40 Negroes Sit in at Cafeterias

KANSAS CITY (UPI)—Some 40 Negroes launched sit-in demonstrations at three Kansas City-area restaurants Saturday after they were served at a downtown cafeteria without question. The group was joined by a few whites. All were students.

Five Negroes entered the Myron-Green Cafeteria in downtown Kansas City about 11:30 a.m. and were served without incident.

At about the same time, members of the project were attempting to receive meals at the Forum Cafeteria, also in downtown Kansas City; Kelsey's Restaurant in nearby Independence, Mo., and at a Howard Johnson Restaurant near the east edge of Kansas City.

Eleven Negro youths were served at Kelsey's after a short delay and there were no incidents at the Independence restaurant.

Live Music Kills Patron

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A bartender who wanted to listen to jukebox music Friday night shot to death a patron who wanted to hear live music, police said.

Officers said the victim, Ernesto Gonzales, 29, argued in behalf of a strolling Mexican band.

Bartender Mike Duran, 41, walked out from behind the bar with a quarter for the jukebox and a gun. Police said he then fired several shots into Gonzales in front of the jukebox.

Davis-Britt Wedding by Rabbi Due

BOSTON (AP)—Negro singer and actor Sammy Davis Jr. and statuesque Swedish film star May Britt have set Oct. 1 for their wedding. Davis announced Saturday.

Davis said they will be married by a rabbi at his Los Angeles home. Davis, 34, is a convert to the Jewish faith, and Miss Britt, 24, is a Lutheran.

Davis said there won't be time for a honeymoon as he will be too busy making a picture.

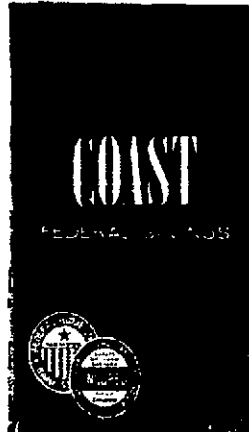

The Nordic beauty arrived in Boston Friday and visited Davis at The Frolics at Salisbury Beach on Massachusetts' North Shore where he was completing a week's engagement.

Davis left for a Washington engagement Saturday and Miss Britt returns to Los Angeles.

The couple announced their

THE GREATEST ADVANCE IN CARPETS

The perfect answer for the carpet industry

NOW IN.. 5 MAGNIFICENT QUALITIES

Handsome Luxury Look Carpets That Can Take It!

... 65 Glorious colors

These are carpets that have been thoroughly wear-tested throughout the United States. The results have been fabulous! For example, Lees tested their 501 nylon against their much more expensive wool quality. The 501 nylon carpet out-wore the wool carpet 4 times! In another test, 1,500,000 people could not wear out the Caprolan nylon carpet, altho carpets in other fibers wore out quickly. At the Texas State Fair in October 1959, 2,500,000 people could not wear out the 501 nylon carpet. After cleaning, the high-low loop pattern was sharp and clear, not walked out. Crush recovery was excellent and the color fresh as new.

IMPORTANT!

(Do not confuse present-day 100% nylon carpet with Nylon-Viscose which was prevalent a few years ago. There was never more than 10% nylon in Nylon-Viscose, in some cases as low as ¼ of 1%. Viscose is rayon. 100% fine nylon carpets have been manufactured and proved for 15 years and in qualities up to $60.00 a square yard.)

HERE'S WHAT CONTINUOUS FILAMENT NYLON MEANS TO YOU!

- APPEARANCE—No fuzzing, pilling or shedding.
- WEAR—Scientific tests prove nylon wears up to 15 times longer than comparable wool qualities. A strand of nylon is actually stronger than steel!
- RESILIENCY—Recovers even more fully than wool.
- BEAUTY—Clarity and lushness of color (fastest dyes known to science are used).
- CLEANING—Usual stains such as coffee, liquor, nail polish, animal stains, etc., that might ruin the color in a wool carpet are usually readily removable with merely an effective detergent and warm water. Nylon does not "soak in." Highest soil resistance.
- MOTHPROOF • ALLERGY FREE
- NON-INFLAMMABLE

PROCLAIMED optimism is the politician's stock in trade. The conflicting declarations of complete confidence emanating from various camps around L.A. these days must be as confusing to impressionable members of the public as are Santa Claus on adjoining street corners to innocent kids.

Aside from the fact that hope springs eternal in a politician's breast, a candidate just can't do anything but keep up a brave front as long as he's in a race.

Otherwise, his followers desert. Hardly anybody is really so devoted that he will stick with a losing cause. Now and then somebody says he'd rather lose with Joe Doakes than win with somebody else—but he doesn't mean it.

No campaign can stay alive unless there's the smell of victory there—no matter how fraudulent the odor.

ON THE MORNING after the presidential election in 1948, Harry Truman had staged a stunning upset. In the face of almost universal contrary predictions, he had licked Tom Dewey.

Looking back, some commentators recalled that Truman had said he was going to win, and opined that this had proved remarkable prescience.

But did it? What else could Truman have said?

I've always suspected that Bro. Harry secretly shared the general opinion of the likely outcome of that election. As I recall, he went into seclusion when the returns started coming in, emerging later, after the good news reached him, to declare "I told you so."

If Mr. Truman had been absolutely sure, I think he would have been right out in the public eye all the time, celebrating the great victory as it developed.

ANYHOW, the point I'm making, as we get into the big political season of 1960, is that we might as well brace ourselves for months of conflicting claims of forthcoming victory and apply a grain of salt here and there as we listen.

Most of us will finally believe the claim we want to believe—and be thrilled with triumph or jolted with disappointment on election night.

RESIDENTS of a triangular section of west Anaheim, lying between the Santa Ana and Riverside Freeways, have become disturbed by the condition of a plot of open land there they call "No Man's Land."

This area, right at the junction, supposedly belongs to the state highway dept. It has remained undeveloped and probably was acquired in connection with the freeway program. It would make an ideal small public park or playground, but instead has been allowed to grow a mass of high weeds which are now becoming a serious fire hazard. It also generates an enormous supply of grasshoppers that spread to the adjoining home properties.

Youngsters from these homes like to play in the wild weeded area, and with the fire hazard that is bad. It's also a fire threat to the houses.

I have some readers in the area and have been asked to point out the danger in the public print. Hope it helps.

CREDIT CARD use has become so universal that people who pay cash are getting to feel a little conspicuous. The operator of a Belmont Shore restaurant has undertaken to ease any embarrassment. Under two signs that announce he'll honor certain credit cards, he has one that says:

Library Issue Revived in Report

By GEORGE WEEKS Civic Center area has been at the first meeting of the question of authorizing a bond issue for the project should be resubmitted to the voters.

YOU'RE NOT GOING TO . . .

Buster, the German shepherd pet of Dennis Faure, 12, of 3120 Sawyer St., gets the point during an early meeting session of Los Angeles County's Rabies Vaccination Month. More than 1,000 dogs will be inoculated July 21 at a clinic to be held from 7 to 9 p. m. at the Lakewood City Hall, 5050 S. Clark Ave. The shots will be administered for $1.50, the cost of the vaccine. —(Staff photo by Dave Emery.)

The opening move toward reviving the proposal for a modern library building in the Vickers brought up the issue whose net effect was that the

In his letter of transmittal Vickers noted that the June 7 election gave the $4,300,000 bond issue proposal—Proposition B—a substantial majority, though short of the 2-1 minimum.

The final count was 53,393 for and 37,802 against, or 58.5 per cent and 41.5 per cent.

SINCE THE ELECTION, Vickers reported, his office has received numerous queries "as to if and when this proposition would be resubmitted to the electorate."

His only specific recommendation was that the statistical report, which generally showed the inadequacy of the old library for a city of Long Beach's size, be referred to the committee of the whole for study.

Faced with more immediate budget problems, councilmen complied without comment.

Indications were that the Mayor and City Council's Advisory Public Improvement Committee, which has favored a library project repeatedly over a period of seven years, may be asked to take still another look.

The committee is due to be reconstituted by the new Council, probably with a strong infusion of new members.

MOST OF THE VICKERS report was an analysis of existing library structures in cities of Long Beach's population class. It was based on replies to questionnaires sent out to 29 cities and returned by 25. Of the latter 16 were found to reflect a fair comparison.

Said the report:

"The size of the city's main library is in direct contrast to our good showing in the branch system."

"Long Beach has the smallest and one of the oldest main libraries of all the cities surveyed."

"The main library structure of the cities in the survey averaged 89,470 square feet, or 60,832 square feet more than our present structure."

"Seven of the 16 cities surveyed have main libraries built since 1951. These newer libraries average 98,107 square feet in size, which would place the city's structure 69,469 square feet below the average for libraries recently constructed."

"San Diego's main library, built in 1954, contains 144,624 square feet, or 115,986 square feet larger than the present Long Beach main library."

THE SURVEY NOTED that six cities among those surveyed — Akron, Miami, Newark, Omaha, Phoenix and Youngstown — are planning new main libraries. Average size of the proposed structures is 142,238 square feet, compared with the 125,000 square feet proposed by Long Beach in the June 7 bond issue.

Average construction date of the existing main libraries in these cities was 1935. Their average size is 65,892 square feet."

The Long Beach library was built in 1909. It has 28,638 square feet.

Vickers' report added, however, that Long Beach exceeds the average in all respects in the branch library system.

The local system encompasses 58,803 square feet, compared with the survey average of 38,111. Average branch size here is 5,880, against the general average of 4,760 square feet. Long Beach's 10 units are two more than the average in the comparable cities.

40 YEARS OF SERVICE

Choir's Director Quitting With National Record

By VERA WILLIAMS

One hot night in July, 1920, L. D. Frey was leading community singing at a Chamber of Commerce dinner in the old Community Service Bldg., 3rd St. and American Ave. Dr. George P. Taubman, who then was pastor of the First Christian Church, called him aside.

"Young fellow, could you direct a choir?"

Frey, who had just arrived from Dayton, Ohio, whipped out a recommendation from Dr. J. C. Massee, pastor of the Million Dollar Baptist Church in Dayton, where for 3½ years he had been choir director.

"Come to my office tomorrow," directed Taubman.

FREY WAS HIRED as choir director of the First Christian Church, which had no choir. "We didn't talk about money," says Frey, "but I told him if I liked it I'd take the job."

Frey issued a call for choir practice. Twelve singers came the first night; 50 the second night.

He officially led the singing, for the first time, at a First Christian Church month-end meeting Sunday, July 25, 1920, in the old Municipal Auditorium on Pine Ave. pier. Now, 40 years later, L. D. Frey is resigning, effective Aug. 1, as music director of

L. D. FREY
It Started One Night

First Christian Church. "Forty years is long enough," he says. He believes he has set a national record.

"There may be someone else who has been 40 years music director of one church—but we've never found him."

FREY STRESSES that he is "resigning"—"not retiring." "I'll keep up my private teaching, etc."

Frey, a graduate of the music department of Cooper Seminary, Dayton, led singing for William Jennings Bryan on his chautauqua tours and for Billy Sunday and Gypsy Smith, evangelists.

He and his wife, Alma, have a daughter Janet, who is Mrs. Jack Aldridge of Long Beach, and one grandchild, Anita.

The L. D. Freys stay put. They have lived in one apartment, 629 Pine Ave., across the street from the Independent Press-Telegram, for 40 years.

Record Field of Beauties Slated

Miss Burma is out, but even without her the International Beauty Congress will bring to Municipal Auditorium Aug. 4 a record field of global beauties.

A total of 55 nations will be represented, compared with last year's 34, Oscar Meinhardt, executive producer of the pageant announced Saturday.

The unnamed Burmese entry was disqualified, Meinhardt said, when an annulled marriage was revealed. No one who has ever been married may compete.

Eight nations never previously represented will send girls to Long Beach. They are Borneo, Yugoslavia, Nationalist China, Jordan, Nicaragua, Portugal, Spain and Indonesia.

ALSO REPRESENTED after an absence of some years are Australia, Ceylon, El Salvador, Lebanon, Malaya, Morocco, the Philippines, Union of South Africa, Switzerland and Venezuela.

"Newcomer nations and a majority of returnee countries are with us this year because of the elimination of swimsuits from the pageant," Meinhardt said.

In previous years, some nations refused to enter candidates due to religious or civic objections to swimsuits in the homelands. The competitors this year will wear playsuits for figure judging sessions.

FREIGHTED WITH beauties from Australia, Borneo, Japan, Ceylon, the Philippines, Hong Kong and Malaya, the luxury liner Orcades is on the high seas, due to dock here July 29. The beauties are chaperoned by Mrs. Arthur Randall, chief hostess of the congress.

European and Near East entrants will board a TWA Superjet in Paris Aug. 3 for the flight to Municipal Airport.

The 10-day pageant starts Thursday, Aug. 4, when the girls will register at the Lafayette Hotel.

Other program high lights follow:

Aug. 5—Fashion show and formal banquet for delegates and members of the diplomatic corps.

Aug. 6—Opening ceremonies at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Aug. 7—International Beauty Parade.

Aug. 9—First round of competition. Awarding of trophies to Most Popular Girl in Parade and preliminary winners.

Aug. 10-11—Preliminaries leading to selection of 15 finalists.

Aug. 12—Selection of Miss International Beauty.

Aug. 13—Coronation Ball.

Man Kills Self in Wife's Yard

Ray O. Geist, 49, committed suicide Saturday by shooting himself with a .38 revolver while lying in his panel truck in front yard of his estranged wife's home, 1685 E. Plymouth St., police reported. The body is at Hunter's Mortuary. Geist had been living in the 1000 block of Wehrle Ct., police said.

BERTH RETURNED BY NAVY

Docking of German Motorship to Open Pier E to Commerce

By LEE CRAIG

Pier E in Long Beach Harbor will be used for commercial shipping for the first time next Saturday when a German motorship will dock at Berth 122 to unload 700 automobiles.

That berth was turned back to the harbor department last July 1 by the Navy, which still retains use of Berths 123-124 on the southern tip of the pier.

When a $2 million wharf construction job is finished on the western side of the pier, Berths 125, 126 and 127, next December, the Navy will dock its vessels there and return Berth 123 to the port.

PRESENT PLANS call for Berth 122 to be used for discharge of foreign autos and for open storage of suitable cargoes.

First commercial vessel to use the berth will be the German motorship Blumenau, with a load of Volkswagens from Hamburg. Two days later, the Swedish freighter Amacita will dock at 122 with 1,000 more of the little autos, according to the local agent, Winchester Agencies, Inc.

Motorist Injured

Wynand I. Viljoen, 25, of 129 Prospect Ave., suffered head lacerations Saturday when he lost control of his car, which overturned on Ocean Blvd. near Lima Ave., police said. He is at St. Mary's Hospital.

PIER E, 130 acres of filled land, was completed in 1956 in its present form at a cost of $7,600,000. Other major construction now under way on the pier is a super tanker terminal being built at Berths 118-119 for Richfield Oil Co., scheduled for completion in November.

Push Work on Phone Cable Repair

General Telephone Co. Saturday had more than 25 men working 'round the clock to repair extensive damage done by a city gas crew Friday afternoon when it accidentally drilled through four main telephone cables.

Full restoration of long-distance telephone service in the north and east areas of Long Beach, plus over 600 local services completely cut off by the mishap, is expected before noon Sunday.

The 600 telephones, dead as a result of the accident, are located south of Pacific Coast Highway to 17th Street, and from Atlantic Ave. to Cerritos Ave.

Shrine Club Slates Fete

The Lakewood Shrine Club will hold a stag dinner and floor show at 7 p. m., Saturday in Long Beach Mounted Police Club House, Palo Verde Ave. and Wardlow Rd. Guests will be El Bekal Temple unit presidents, vice presidents, captains and Ebe Johnson, director of El Bekal units. All Shriners, Blue Lodge Masons and their guests are invited.

Tom Rose will serve as master of ceremonies and Tom Johnson as chairman. J. Earl Dykstra is president of the club.

A TALENTED PAINTER, Kiki Kotsaridou, 23, of Athens, wears the crown as Miss Greece in the International Beauty Congress. She is 5 feet 8½, weighs 136, and the magic numbers are 37-24-38.

DESPITE ALL THE HEADLINES about schemes and strategies to "stop Kennedy," logic tells you that the young Senator from Massachusetts has it sewed up like a bag of salt.

The Kennedy camp admits modestly that they don't expect the lightning to strike on the first ballot. But with states such as New York, Ohio, Michigan offering him strong support and with California and Pennsylvania teetering toward him, how can Kennedy lose on the second?

At this point in the steeplechase, it's Kennedy out front, Johnson in a not-too-close second place, and Adlai, Symington, et al, strung out far back across the landscape.

But there is always the factor of the unexpected. It is that outside chance of a deadlock, of a surging Dark Horse overtaking the front-runners, that keeps the gallery watching with avid interest.

Sen. Johnson's hope rests in his argument that today's troubled world calls for U.S. leadership of maturity and experience.

CALIFORNIA'S GOVERNOR, Edmund G. (Pat) Brown has done more, probably, than any other individual to make the Democratic convention a suspenseful affair. His reluctance to arrive at a decision was told last week in seven words by a perceptive headline writer: "Brown Prefers Adlai, but Leans to Kennedy." By the time this sees print, Gov. Brown may have resolved his dilemma. The political sagacity of his decision may dictate whether he will remain Governor of California or become a member of a presidential cabinet. Indeed, there is also the vice presidency..

THE DEMOCRATS OPEN their convention in a maelstrom of controversy arising from issues as well as from the conflict of personalities. Traditionally, the Democratic party is an alloy of metals that are separate when the National Convention convenes and somehow, surprisingly, become fused with one another by the white heat of argument. By some amazing formula, harmony is congealed out of discord.

From the South, with undertones of race prejudice, come politicians talking of state's rights, and from the North, with their insufferable righteous indignation, come the liberal civil-righters, intolerant of intolerance.

Intermingled are the religious issue, pitting Protestant against Catholic, and regional prejudice, pitting Texas against the rest of the union.

From these ingredients the convention will endeavor to put together a ticket that will defend individual rights, respect state sovereignty, shun religious bigotry, abhor sectionalism, and win votes.

AFTER IT'S ALL OVER, the big question will be whether they've picked a man who is worthy of public support and capable of holding down the biggest political job in the world.

We trust that amid the ballyhoo and confusion, the convention will not forget that a President must have other talents besides the ability to smile, barter, make promises, and hire pretty girls to hand out campaign buttons.

LAST WEEK, AS THE convention managers pulled up the shades and began getting the store ready for business, a picket appeared on the sidewalk outside the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

He carried a sign which read: "Politicians, repent!"

What better advice could there be for the conduct of a national political convention?

Convention Will Hear a New Policy on Switching of Votes

LOS ANGELES.—Optimists are always coming along with ideas for applying the rule of reason to politics. There are two here — Gov. Leroy Collins of Florida, Permanent Chairman of the Convention, and former National Chairman Stephen A. Mitchell, counsel to the Convention Rules Committee.

Their joint purpose is to avoid confusion in the calling of the roll of the states. Most of such confusion arises from the hallowed practice of allowing the var-ance of the Permanent Chairman and the frequent hassles over the job.

Already it is evident that the Kennedy forces are planning first-ballot switches from strategic states with the object of making his nomination appear inevitable. It is equally apparent that his rivals would like to see some slowdown of the process so that the emotional stampede aspect will be missing or at least impeded.

Collins and Mitchell insist that everybody will profit from a solution which will convince both the convention and millions of television viewers that the count is fair and honest, with no one getting a better break than his rivals. Their prescriptions for achieving this are different.

THE PERMANENT Chairman believes he can do it on his own by a method of arranging the switches before any one of them is called. He does not want it strictly alphabetical because that might make it susceptible to manipulation. He will announce his new policy Monday.

Mitchell has been urging a change in the rules which would bar any state from changing its vote during a roll call. His plan provides for starting another roll call as soon as one is ended. Thus any change by a state must come on the succeeding roll call.

Robert Kennedy, campaign manager for his brother, has said they will oppose a policy of no switches, as envisioned by Mitchell, but that any system of "orderly recognition" to the Kennedy forces remains to be seen.

IT IS, however, the famous struggle between Sens. John Kennedy and Estes Kefauver for the vice-presidency in 1956 which prompted Mitchell to suggest reform of the procedure. Mitchell correctly says that the confusion surrounding it left many people, particularly television viewers, with the impression that Kennedy would have been named if a more orderly procedure had been followed.

Butler 'The Most' —to Demos' Dismay

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE chairman Paul Butler is "the most"—the most divisive influence in the Democratic party. Some Kennedy backers, who are Catholics, believe that Butler has done the Massachusetts senator a great disservice.

For example, Butler has repeatedly called himself a "Catholic American" or an "American Catholic." One never hears a man refer to himself as a "Baptist American" or an "American Presbyterian."

It has disquieted Catholics because Mr. Butler has insinuated that Catholics, who are Democrats, might turn on the party if Kennedy does not receive the nomination.

Two of the Catholics, who are Democrats, have spoken out against these tactics. They are Rep. Hale Boggs (D-La.) and Pulitzer Prize winning columnist, William S. White.

Other Catholics say frankly this is one of the reasons that Gov. David Lawrence of Pennsylvania, a Catholic, has so far firmly resisted the pressures to come out for Kennedy. He and his 81 vote delegation may be the key to convention victory.

Mr. Butler's other tactics have ranged from political brutality to bad manners including discrimination against delegates not for Kennedy in the matter of housing in Los Angeles.

THOSE WHO have suffered Mr. Butler's blows have included:

Former President Truman, who charges that the convention is rigged in favor of Kennedy.

Speaker Rayburn, who saved Butler's job a couple of years ago.

Sen. Lyndon Johnson.

Former Secretary of the Senate Leslie Biffle, one of the best liked Democrats, who for the first time in 40 years will miss the convention. He has gone to Europe.

William M. "Fishbait" Miller, House of Representatives Doorkeeper, who, since 1948, has acted as volunteer Doorkeeper at the Democratic National Conventions.

WITHOUT warning, Butler notified Miller that his services would not be needed for "economy reasons" and because "professional security" people would be used. It is charged that this spiteful treatment is because Miller is a friend of Speaker Rayburn.

Johnson and Symington are the best qualified to be President.

CONVENTION CAPERS

Los Angeles County's Vast Spaces Fascinate Delegates

By WALTER T. RIDDER, ROBERT E. LEE AND BILL BROOM

LOS ANGELES—The vast spaces in sprawling Los Angeles County attached almost as much interest among early-arriving delegates to the Democratic National Convention as the political maneuvering. Delegates and newsmen are spread over an area so large that many are a good half hour away from the downtown convention headquarters. Many of the better restaurants, too, are far removed from the center of things. And the taxi fares heavily tax the pocket-books.

Some delegates, in describing where they are quartered or where they ate last night, have adopted the policy of explaining simply that "it's about a $4 cab ride away." And that's not awfully far away, either.

A TIME-HONORED CONVENTION gimmick is the distribution of campaign buttons by smartly dressed, handsome young ladies. This convention, with Southern California beauties everywhere in sight, is probably setting an all-time record for feminine pulchritude.

It's perhaps typical of Adlai Stevenson's great attraction to women that the two-time standard bearer, who isn't even a candidate for this year's presidential nomination, has the most and the most beautiful young ladies enrolled in his cause. They are organized on only the most casual basis, they have practically no leadership, and they don't sport the carefully designed costumes of the ladies plumping for Sens. Kennedy and Johnson. But they are hard-working and dedicated as only dedicated women can be.

CONVENTION JOKES ARE NEVER at best particularly side-splitting, but for what it's worth here is one that's wowing the Los Angeles convention-goers:

Sen. Kennedy meets Sen. Symington and says: "Stu, you know, I had the funniest dream last night. I dreamed that the Lord appeared to me and said: 'Jack, I have chosen you to be the candidate.'"

Symington replies: "That's very odd, Jack, because I also had a dream last night, and in my dream God said: 'Stu, you're my boy.'"

At that moment, Lyndon Johnson joins the two and they tell him of their dreams. "Couldn't be," replies Johnson. "I don't remember speaking to either one of you last night."

THE KENNEDY FAMILY IS here in full force. Sisters, brothers, cousins, in-laws all are here and have active roles in the pre-convention campaign. A sizable crowd is always in the Kennedy headquarters, but it is hard to tell whether it is composed of Kennedy rooters or merely Kennedy family.

ONE WOULD THINK THAT BY THIS time everyone in Los Angeles would know what the Kennedys look like. However, one ardent Stevenson worker accosted young Bob Kennedy in a hotel lobby and pressed upon him a "We Want Stevenson" button. Kennedy declined the gift with a smile and the remark: "Not today, thank you." It wasn't until after he had gone that someone told the young lady that she had been proselytizing a Kennedy. She promised not to do it again.

CREDIT FOR THE FIRST BAND to march through the Biltmore Hotel lobby goes to a brass and guitar outfit from Puerto Rico. Its music, costumes, and marching was designed to draw attention to Puerto Rico's desire for statehood. The band made so much noise that no one could hear himself think, which prompted one observer to shout: "Instead of getting statehood, Puerto Rico should be made into a penal colony and those musicians be its first inmates."

Ike Criticized for Pay Veto

EDITOR: Is the President of the United States for all the people? Does he have the welfare of all Americans at heart? This has become more and more difficult to believe.

Mr. Eisenhower used some very strong language in condemning the much needed and long overdue pay raise for federal employees. He said it is "indefensible" by any light. Such a remark never should have come from the President. If ever a pay raise was fair and truly "defensible" it is this postal raise that he so unjustifiably vetoed and so vehemently denounced.

OUR PRESIDENT speaks of political pressure. He knows full well that many millions of dollars are spent yearly by big business and other groups to exert pressure upon Congress and other branches of the government. Pressure indeed! The lowly career government employee is at such a great disadvantage when it comes to applying so-called pressure that it is laughable to even attempt comparison.

How Stupid Can Labor Unions Get?

EDITOR: Labor union words and actions are contradictory.

They demand more pay, shorter hours, and fringe benefits. They will picket a restaurant, bootery, clothing store, or any other business selling non-union goods. At the same time, they will purchase goods manufactured in Japan where labor is far inferior paywise to that in the union. How stupid and selfish can we get?

Old Foe Has Good Word for HST

LOS ANGELES—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, one-time candidate for President, is leading an aloof life at the Waldorf Tower these days, far removed from the Los Angeles convention. Nevertheless, he is keeping a careful eye on the Democratic balloting.

Lunching with an old friend the other day, Gen. MacArthur had some pungent remarks to make about his one-time subordinate, Gen. Eisenhower, also about the man who fired him as commander in Japan, Harry Truman.

PEARSON

"Eisenhower was always weak, even as a young officer," MacArthur remarked. "I saw Truman on television," he continued, referring to the Truman statement that the Los Angeles convention was rigged. "He understands politics. He knows what he wants and he does it. He'll take Kennedy out of the race."

Johnson and Symington are the best qualified to be President.

"I remember Kennedy when he was a PT boat commander in the Pacific."

"He had a great record," remarked MacArthur's friend, "He should have been court-martialed," growled the former Pacific commander-in-chief. "Those PT boats carried only one torpedo. They were under orders to fire it and then get out. They were defenseless. Kennedy hung around, however, and let a Japanese destroyer mow him down. When I heard about it I talked to his superior officer. He should have been court-martialed."

NOTE—Kennedy's PT boat was cut in two by a Japanese destroyer on a dark night near the Solomon Islands. Kennedy, though injured, rescued all but two of his crew, led them to an island from which, after great hardship, they were finally rescued.

ONE REPORT of a close Kennedy-Butler hookup which persists among the delegates is that old Joe Kennedy has offered Paul Butler a fat legal retainer of $50,000 when he retired as Democratic National Chairman, as he will after this convention.

I asked Butler about the report.

"What you're telling me is news," he replied, "but it's good news. I'm setting up a law office in Washington and Fort Wayne after this is over and I'll need some clients."

Whatever his motives, there's no question, however, that Butler has been just as partisan for Kennedy as his Republican counterpart, Thurston Morton, who is determined not to let Nelson Rockefeller have a smell at the nomination. Actually a national chairman is supposed to be neutral. He is supposed to let the party decide the best man to run for President. In recent years neither Butler nor Len Hall nor Morton has made any real pretense of neutrality. Hall was all-out for Nixon, as against Harold Stassen, while Butler has done his best to throw the nomination to Kennedy.

MARTHUR
Keeps Eye on Demos

This aroused resentment long before Harry Truman made it a public issue on television.

The resentment stemmed from the fact that for the past 30 years the Democratic National Chairman has been a Catholic, on the ground that since the presidential nominee was a Protestant, it was only fair to put the helm of the party in the hands of a Catholic. But this year the front-running presidential candidate has been a Catholic, while the man helping him from the strategic spot of Democratic National Chairman has also been a Catholic. Hence the resentment.

Consumer Protective Agency Pushed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — have strongly endorsed Kefauver's idea.

Kefauver, chairman of the Senate antitrust and monopoly subcommittee which conducted investigations into the pricing of drugs, autos and steel, said that existing government departments — with few exceptions — represent Americans mainly as producers.

"Indeed the government abounds with departments, agencies and bureaus set up by Congress to represent producer interests of virtually every type," Kefauver said. "But there is no representation of the consumer interest."

Kefauver's bill is before a Senate government operations subcommittee, headed by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn), a cosponsor of the measure. Both senators are hoping the next Congress will take favorable action on it.

The legislation would set up a new government department whose main job would be to "promote and protect the economic interests of consumers."

The department also would be given the responsibility of representing consumer interests before federal regulatory agencies and courts. In addition, the department would serve as a "clearinghouse" for complaints from consumers who, Kefauver says, are "presently baffled by not knowing where to turn for help."

The agency also would be such things as product quality and pricing practices of corporations with assets of five million dollars or more.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

Led by Nose, Barry Happy

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK—Jack Barry—you remember him!—came to our interview literally smelling like a rose.

"Smell this!" commanded the ex-quizmaster, plucking an artificial rose from his lapel. "It has a rose smell which my company has given to it from our secret formula. You can wear this artificial rose—for months."

"Have any florists tried to assassinate you?" I asked.

Barry was busy opening up an attache case which contained even a black brassiere.

"People are fragrance-frantic today," he said. "Our company, Fragrance Process, is giving a lemon aroma to the little yellow lemon-squeeze bottles. We're going to give a scent to the ladies' underpants and to brassieres..."

WITH THE same ease that he used to ask questions on TV, Jack swept a lemon squeeze bottle—and the bra—from the attache case and put them under my nose.

"Have you got vanilla?" I asked him.

"Speaking of chocolate and vanilla," Jack replied. "It's been discovered that rats like the aroma of chocolate and bacon."

"So"—he tossed me a small waferlike object with a chocolate smell—"we can distribute thousands of these around one area, attract the rats, and have something poisonous there for them to eat and destroy themselves."

Now he was a visionary foretelling tomorrow...

"I think it would be great if one night the Copacabana smelled like roses and another night like lilacs. For that, we have a machine called a 'scentomizer.'"

You can bottle the smells you want and just change the bottle.

"Super-markets are enthusiastic," Barry said. "They can put a steak smell in a meat-market, for example."

"And there's no reason subways and buses can't be made to smell nice!"

"How about the slaughterhouse areas and smelly rivers and dumps?"

"We're working on those. Also on powder rooms."

"I trust you'll look into wrestling matches," I mentioned.

JACK MADE A NOTE, "Wrestling matches," on his napkin. "These 'scentomizers,'" he said, "will be useful in the home. If a girl wants a nice sexy smell for the television room, we've got that. It's musk."

Some people are inclined to take all this lightly. There are always people like that.

"Billy Reed, owner of the Little Club, asked me to be sure to send him the money smell when we got it. We've got it already. It's mint."

Jack got interested in smells when Barry and Enright were getting rich in TV and he wanted to invest some of it.

"It took Alfred Neuwald, a chemist who's my partner, about five years and a lot of money to develop our process by which we put the fragrance into polyethylene pellets."

Barry reported that he'll soon be off to Hong Kong and Tokyo to import some smells.

PLAYMATE GETS A MILLION

It's Tough to Keep Kids in Line in Beverly Hills

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A family can be reared in Hollywood successfully—but it's rugged, says MacDonald Carey, father of six.

"It's not the Hollywood people, surprisingly, who spoil their kids," says Carey. "It's the rich Beverly Hills crowd who come complete with indulgent grandmothers."

Carey's three boys and three girls range in age from 4 to 13. They attend the Good Shepherd Parochial School.

"A girl graduated this June from the eighth grade. Her grandmother gave her a diamond ring about the size of one Zsa Zsa Gabor wears. Imagine that."

Betty Carey told of one of her children coming home one day and reporting that a playmate had received a million dollars.

"I couldn't believe it," says Mrs. Carey, "but my son said it was so."

She checked and it was. The million was put in a trust fund the boy will get when he's 21.

"These are not movie people but oil people, bankers and other assorted millionaires who live in Beverly Hills," Carey explains.

ONLY A HANDFUL of the hundreds of offspring of filmland celebrities have gotten into public trouble.

Most stars keep their youngsters under close supervision.

Carey, veteran movie actor and star of the TV series "Gunsmoke," says he tries to bring up his family as his own was reared in Sioux City, Iowa.

The Carey children ride bicycles to school. Some of their friends show up in chauffeur-driven Rolls Royces. Some of the Beverly Hills kids, even in the lower grades, are given candy allowances of $25 per week. Carey gives his older children $1.50 a week.

"They think I'm a miser but they'll thank me when they grow up," he says.

THE CAREYS LIVE in a remodeled Old English house on a pleasant Beverly Hills street. It's a big house with swimming pool—but it's lived in as any house with six kids would be.

Everything is done family style. The whole family goes to church each Sunday. They never miss.

Instead of spending his time at a health club, Carey plays ball with his boys in the spacious backyard.

"Keeping up with this gang takes care of any waistline problems," he explains.

He's going to do a stage musical this summer—"Can-Can" at nearby Fullerton. The whole family is helping him rehearse.

"Everyone is a critic," he says, "and you can't have an actor's ego long with six kids."

Vacations are family vacations. Even long film locations are designed so that Mrs. Carey and some of the children can go along.

MAC AND BETTY married in 1941. She was a Philadelphia socialite who aspired to a drama career.

She did one play and retired to being a housewife and mother.

"As you can see," she said, the roomful of children, "Mac hasn't given me much time to continue my acting career. And I'm actually a big ham than he is."

Carey is not the biggest actor in the business but he's one of the happiest.

"I'm soft as all fathers are but Betty rules with an iron hand—often across the bottom. Kids like discipline even though they resent it at the time."

The Careys once lived above the Sunset Strip but moved out of there quickly.

"The house came equipped with an unusual number of phones. We soon found out why. Calls started coming in the middle of the night asking you know what. We figured that was no place to rear children—so we moved to Beverly Hills."

"It was about 1909 or so," recalls Sokoloff. "Stanislavsky founded his method in revolt against the stilted acting of the day in Moscow. He wanted us to act true to nature. He told us that the theater was four walls—the audience did not exist out front. And he saw to it that the audiences did not applaud."

STANISLAVSKY told him that the method was good for Moscow but not for England or the United States.

"Do not practice it slavishly," he told me, "when you go to America. It will not work there."

Sokoloff said if Stanislavsky were alive today, his favorites would be non-method actors—Fredric March, Alec Guinness, Julie Harris, Michael Redgrave, John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson.

"Brando would not get the approval of Stanislavsky because he allows his personality to dominate his acting. He is always Brando."

JULIE NEWMAR
And Talent, Too

By RICK DUBROW
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Tall girls, take heart! At 24, five-foot-10-inch Julie Newmar has a New York penthouse, the most spectacular figure in Hollywood—and talent.

The blonde actress, best known in these parts for her 38-23-38 shape, is here to recreate her prize-winning role in the movie version of the Broadway play, "Marriage-Go-Round," with James Mason and Susan Hayward.

"For the record," she said, "my measurements are actual. They're not Jayne Mansfield measurements. And I don't use lipstick because I might want to kiss someone."

MISS NEWMAR'S measurements as revealed in the film "Lil Abner" first attracted Hollywood's attention, although she was on-screen for only 90 seconds—but her talent was proven when she won an Antoinette Perry Award on Broadway for her performance in "Marriage-Go-Round."

"It's no achievement to be beautiful," said Miss Newmar. "It was an inheritance from my mother. I won a number of Miss-Something-or-other contests, stupid things like 'Miss Maple Syrup.'"

"It's what else you have that's important. For instance, I don't go only for handsome men. I like someone who excites me intellectually as well as physically. Burt Lancaster, my favorite movie star, rattles me inside. John Wayne is man himself—like a tree, and he has cute hips."

"I hate the kind of man who pull the hey-baby-what's-your-telephone-number routine right off. A man who can do anything well doesn't push himself. He stands back and waits his chance—and he gets further."

VILLAINOUS SAXON ROCKS BOBBY-SOX

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—John Saxon vows he's through with being the bobby-sox idol.

"I appreciate all the help the kids have given me to get me started," says the handsome Saxon, "but now I feel I have matured. I'm seeking mature roles."

In "The Plunderers," he is playing a menace—first step toward maturity.

DARK GLASSES A MUST

You've Really Got to 'Go Hollywood'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Ross Martin, a transplanted easterner, says his kink and fellow actors from New York are in error when they interpret the following as signs of "going Hollywood":

—Obtaining unlisted home telephone numbers

—Wearing sunglasses—(sometimes when it's cloudy)

—Dressing differently from New Yorkers.

"There is a logical explanation for each of these things," said Martin, who started on the Broadway stage.

"The unlisted phone is a necessity. For one thing, people—nice people—will call you all the time and tie up your phone. If you're in, your phone is tied up. If you're not, you should see your answering service bill at the end of the month because of all the messages."

MARTIN SAID that working in a relatively dark studio is brutal on the eyes when an actor suddenly exits into daylight. Even overcast light is rough, and it helps to wear sunglasses, he said, until eyes readjust to the new light.

He said that acting often means rush, rush, rush and long hours, so many actors simply go home in makeup and costume; they're tired, and the hour is late.

"New Yorkers think casual clothes are a little strange," Martin said, "but I think they could take a cue. My clothes are not loud but are comfortable."

Governor Sees Goody

By HARRY FARRELL
Of L. P-T Convention Bureau

LOS ANGELES — Gov. Brown, on a pre-convention tour of the Los Angeles Sports Arena, ran into a familiar figure in the person of ex-Gov. Goodwin Knight.

"Whatya doing, joining the party?" twitted Brown. Knight said he was there as a reporter. He is a TV commentator and was there setting up for his shows.

Brown hefted some California standards that will mark his favorite-son delegation. He noted without qualms his seat next to Sen. Clair Engle is numbered 13.

Then he went to the rostrum and tried it out for size. He gave a few hand waves in the manner of a convention nominee. Goodie, down on the floor as a stooge, waved back and egged him on.

Then Brown inspected his 60-foot trailer set up as his headquarters outside the arena. It is a deluxe affair with a beamed ceiling, snack bar, and bedroom.

Secret Love of Motorists Everywhere!

It probably won't surprise you to learn that most people—given a choice of any motor car in the land—would choose Cadillac.

For Cadillac is so widely acknowledged the master of motor cars that it has become a vital part not only of the American dream—but of the aspirations of people everywhere.

It is a possession deliberately created to represent design and craftsmanship at their highest levels—and to render the fullest possible measure of personal enjoyment and satisfaction.

Happily, more and more of Cadillac's "secret admirers" have this year decided to declare their intentions, to select their own favorite Cadillac model—and start driving one!

And with good reason.

First of all, the car itself provides a greater temptation to action than ever before. In the way it looks and rides and handles—it has widened even further the gulf that exists between Cadillac and other motor cars.

Secondly, the "car of cars" is now within the means of an even larger number of motorists.

Its original cost is surprisingly close to cars of far less stature and acceptance. Its dependability and reliability are unparalleled. And it is the "resale champion" of all motordom.

We suggest you pay your Cadillac dealer a visit—and let him arrange a date with your secret love.

It's Treat to Meet Beast Escaped From This Circus

By VERA WILLIAMS

A 10-car circus train will move from Long Beach to Santa Monica this week.

It includes cars for wild animals, performing animals, cars for tents, personnel, equipment, a cook car and an advertising car.

Travelling with it will be 14 elephants, including five parade elephants in jeweled robes and an elephant doing a one-foot stand on a tub. Also performing horses and a giraffe.

Made to scale by Emory H. Clements, 5602 Long Beach Blvd., the train will be displayed at the international convention of Circus Model Builders, open to the public July 16-17 in Santa Monica auditorium.

"I used to be an acrobat, trapeze artist and tumbler for county fairs, 4th of July celebrations and the like, working out of Des Moines in the early 1930s," relates Clements. "I love circuses."

HALE BROWN, who now lives in Palmdale, was his "catcher" in their trapeze days.

Clements is proud of the fact that his is a "working train." It includes a generator, a friction driver and a stake puller.

He has a rare collection of old-time circus "lithos," posters, including a 22-year-old Hagenbeck-Wallace poster.

He made his own mold for his elephants, which have pipe stem cleaner tails. He turned the trunks in various

THE ELEPHANTS, two and one-eighth inches high, represent elephants 8½ feet tall. All the animals are mounted in plexiglas bases.

Gaylord Hartman of Washington, Pa., president of the Circus Model Builders, will display a model of the Swan Wagon built in 1897 for Forepaughosills and later also used by Barnum & Bailey and Ringling.

Among the dignitaries at the convention will be Jake Posey of Altadena, who used to drive a 40-horse hitch for circuses. He is the author of "The Last of the 40-Horse Hitch Drivers."

State Parole Agents to Begin Training for Bay Area Dope-Control Program

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A line, a harmless drug which group of state parole agents shows whether a person has been using narcotics. The agents also will be trained to expand the Los Angeles unit of the state's new control project and to treat women addicts for the first time since the project began last October.

The project, involving close supervision of former addicts to keep them from re-addiction, is being expanded as part of Gov. Brown's plan to cope with the drug problem.

INITIAL RESULTS at the two existing control units in Los Angeles "are highly promising," Corrections Director Richard McGee said Saturday.

"This positive new approach to the narcotics problem indicates a way of striking the narcotics racket in its pocketbook where it hurts most, through the close control of its customers," he added.

The project works like this: Former addicts released on parole from state prison — about a third of the state's 20,000 prisoners are former addicts — are given frequent, unannounced tests with naltreatment will be kept at San Quentin Prison.

SLIGHT ENLARGEMENT is planned for an existing control unit at the California Institution for Men in Chino, and a new field unit with seven parole agents will be established in west central Los Angeles.

Women undergoing treatment will be confined at the State Women's Prison in Corona.

Navy '8' Wins Olympic Crew Trials

SYRACUSE (UPI)—A little man with a big smile and the exclamation "Thank God."

This was coach Lou Lindsey after his Navy eight walked off with a berth on the U.S. Olympic rowing squad.

The Navy men beat favored California by a length and a quarter in the final race of the Olympic competition on Onondaga Lake Saturday.

Since June 11 at Madison, Wis., the California Bear had been jinxing Navy. In a three-school race at the University of Wisconsin, Navy was second to California. The following Saturday, California beat Navy in the Intercollegiate Rowing Regatta on Onondaga Lake.

"We turned the corner at Madison," Lindsey said. "Since then the team has been on the upswing."

California's Jim Lemmon praised his own crew but called the Navy win "a magnificent row."

Navy is representing the United States in the Olympics for the third time. The Middies won the gold medal in 1920 and 1952.

Lindsey said his crews would be taking off for about 10 days before returning to the Severn River to begin training for the Olympic race at Lake Albano in Rome.

Harry Parker of the Philadelphia Vespers showed his experience in the single scull event as he let Lake Washington's Dick Bliden set the pace for 1,500 meters.

"Dick just overpaced himself," Stan Pocock, the Lake Washington coach, said. "His inexperience caught up with him. He was beat after the race and had to withdraw from the double sculls."

Parker, along with Vesper teammates Jack Kelly Jr. (Princess Grace' brother), and William Knecht, who won the double sculls berth, were the 1959 national champions and Pan-Am Game winners.

Popcock said his crews would prefer to return to Seattle for training. The young-looking Pocock took the four small boat victories by Lake Washington crews for granted and looked forward to the Olympic competitions.

Many rowing experts felt the small boat unit would be the best in U.S. history. The crews dominated the Pan American Games in Chicago last August.

Lake Washington crewmen Conn Findlay, Don Ayrault and Armin Seifert were the Lake Washington pairs with coxswain which won the gold medal in 1956 for the U.S.

Bob Kelley Says--

Stoneham Tough Man to Figure

One of the boys at the radio station is a staunch Giant fan, from the old New York days. "What's happened?" he cried to me.

"Ask Stoneham," I suggested. "He was the one who fired Rigney and brought in this Sheehan. Looks to me like the ballplayers don't care anymore, figuring the front office has given up on them this season."

The Giants have been playing in a daze for weeks, almost from the time that Sheehan came in as interim manager. Worst of all, the club made it clear that Sheehan was only temporary. Pretty hard for the club to accept him as a leader.

Thursday, Willie Kirkland swung on a 3-0 pitch with the bases loaded, and the club trailing by four runs. Even if he missed the sign, as stories go, you'd think he would have enough native baseball knowledge to go down and ask the third base coach if he were serious.

Under the circumstances, any little leaguer could tell you the "take" was the only possible play.

"I couldn't think of asking Stoneham his logic in replacing Rigney with Sheehan," the fellow at the station added. "I haven't been able to figure Stoneham out for years."

One of Horace's famous moves was signing Leo Durocher to manage the Giants. For years, Durocher had been the most hated man in the Polo Grounds, because of his long-time reputation as Mr. Dodger himself.

Those of you who recall the old Angel-Star rivalry can't begin to imagine what the Giant-Dodger rivalry was in New York.

Of course, we Angels loved to beat the Stars, and vice versa. But we hardly hated anybody.

BILL RIGNEY
Why Was He Fired?

BELIEVE ME, GIANT FANS literally hated the Dodgers, and it worked both ways.

"Would you believe it," the fellow added. "I was a great Giant fan. But when Stoneham hired Durocher to manage our club, I stayed away from the Polo Grounds for a full year."

Even the Los Angeles-San Francisco rivalry today is a honey-sweet, watered-down version of what it was between the two clubs in New York.

It's a fortunate thing Stoneham spends a good share of his time in Phoenix. San Francisco sportswriters and fans are considerably more critical than their counterparts in Southern California.

Many of them feel Rigney was not too bad a manager.

WHAT HAS amazed me about the whole matter, and I guess I'm repeating myself, is why Rig was fired when the Giants had no improvement in mind?

By his past record, extremely limited, Sheehan is not an improvement. I'm not even considering what's happened to the club since he took over. Further, when you tell a bunch of grown men their new leader will only be around for a few weeks or a few months, it hardly stuffs them with confidence.

They are being guided by a substitute, you inform them.

How can they do their best with that thought in the back of their minds?

This season's manipulation, with the Giants only four games off the lead, ranks with Stoneham's historic inking of Durocher—except that he got himself a proven manager that time.

Stage Set for Durocher's Return

HITTING THE HIGH SPOTS: Even though Horace Stoneham declared as late as Wednesday that Tom Sheehan will manage the Giants for the remainder of the season, baseball men are betting that Sheehan will become the 5th managerial casualty of 1960 very shortly.

Sheehan, it is agreed by those close to the situation, is not the man to handle the strife-ridden Giants.

Stoneham, of course, was prepared to name Leo Durocher as Bill Rigney's replacement last month, but Vice-President Chub Feeney, Horace's nephew and second largest stockholder in the club, was dead set against Leo and the two finally compromised on Sheehan.

Meanwhile, Feeney is understood to be easing his stand against Durocher and there is yet the chance that "Lippy" will be called back to take over the club before long.

Why did Stoneham and Durocher part company in the first place a few seasons ago? Especially since Leo's masterminding of the Giants' sweep to the '54 pennant and World Series crown is considered one of the managerial classics of all-time?

According to one observer, Stoneham felt Durocher was being influenced on baseball decisions far too much by his wife, Actress Laraine Day, who became very interested in the game after their marriage . . . so much so that she was regarded as the Giants' "boulevard manager."

It got to the point, the story goes, that whenever Leo and Stoneham would get involved in a policy discussion, Durocher often would say "well, Laraine says . . ."

This angered Stoneham and led to their break, but circumstances are now changed. Laraine has given Leo his "outright release" via the divorce courts. She didn't like the youth movement he had undertaken.

Stoneham and Leo are good friends again and the Giant owner thinks Durocher is one of the top baseball men the game has ever known. So, the stage appears set for a triumphal return!

SCORING OF RING OFFICIALS seems to be getting more "weird" all the time . . . so much so that something should be done about it.

Naturally, whenever human judgment is involved it is virtually impossible to agree on everything. One suggestion advanced to obtain more fair decisions, at least in major fights, is to use five officials rather than three.

Anyway, the most ridiculous situation to crop up in some time occurred recently in Detroit during a card topped by the Henry Hank-Victor Zalzazar and Wayne Bethea-King George Moore bouts.

One of the judges, a veteran of many years, employed three different scoring systems during the course of the night . . . and gave incorrect point totals for two of the six bouts.

The judge began the evening scoring on the "10-point must" system, which was discarded by Michigan FIVE YEARS ago in favor of the "5-point must."

Finally, several boo-boos later after which he used the straight 10-point system for one bout, he got around to scoring the final 10-rounder under the correct plan . . . but awarded the winner 52 points—two more than the maximum under the "5-point must!"

AS WE POINTED OUT RECENTLY, the Yankee deal with the A's for Roger Maris is considered by far the best of the '60 season.

Naturally, the A's have been criticized severely by other teams in the American League for giving the Yanks such a valuable piece of baseball merchandise.

But a top baseball man defends the A's motives in the deal, pointing out that they received a lot of talent in exchange for a youngster who had not yet answered a lot of questions about his ability.

Maris hit only 235 as a rookie in 1957 and batted .240 in 1958. Last season, though, he jumped off to a .328 average being sidelined by an appendectomy.

Upon his return to the lineup, he boosted his average to .344 when "something happened" and he slumped miserably to a .273 by the season's end.

In the meantime, Kansas City fans were so elated with his play that they elected to give him an "appreciation night" late in August.

"But," as Roger says, "by the time that night came around, I was going to bad I was almost afraid to show up. I'd had only three hits in 65 times at bat (.049).

"And I didn't do anything that night—good, that is. I came up in the last half of the ninth in the second game of the doubleheader with the bases loaded and the winning runs on base . . . and struck out."

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—Rafer Johnson set a world decathlon record Saturday in a dramatic duel that saw C. K. Yang of Formosa nearly overtake him. He bettered the record after only 9 of the 10 events.

Johnson, making a return to competition after automobile accident injuries shelved him last year, uncorked a series of sensational performances and ran up 8,683 points in the National AAU decathlon.

Johnson, making a return to competition after automobile accident injuries shelved him last year, uncorked a series of sensational performances and ran up 8,683 points in the National AAU decathlon.

Yang went into the final event, the 1,500 meter run, needing 461 points to overtake Johnson. He could have done it with a 4 minutes, 34.8 second run. He tried, but suffered muscle cramps and ran dead last in his heat at 5:09.3.

THE MEET also served as the tryouts for the U.S. Olympic team.

Behind Johnson came Phil Mulkey of Memphis, Tenn., with 7,652 points and Dave Edstrom of the University of Oregon with 7,530 points. These three will form the U.S. team.

Johnson is a fast friend of Yang and he moved to the track edge after completing competition and cheered Yang on as he made his try in the final event.

Both attended UCLA, Johnson as a graduate student and Yang as a freshman.

EDSTROM, who had scored more than 8,000 points in a previous decathlon, competed the final day with a badly injured leg.

Johnson ran up 4,750 points in the first day of competition. Saturday he ran the 110-meter hurdles in 14.5 for 953 points; got 1,029 points for his discus throw of 170-6, cleared 13-1/4 inch in the pole vault for 730 points; got 1,021 for his javelin toss of 233-3 and then jogged the 1,500 meter in 5:09.9 for 200 points.

Johnson bettered Kuznetsov's performance in 7 of the 10 decathlon events. Yang bettered five of the Russian's marks.

TWO OF Johnson's best performances came in the discus and the javelin where he threw into the face of a 13-mile-an-hour wind.

When Johnson made his long javelin throw, it boosted his total points to 8,483.

Point after point, Johnson's lead was secure. He finished with 8,683 points, 22 points ahead of Yang, 8,461.

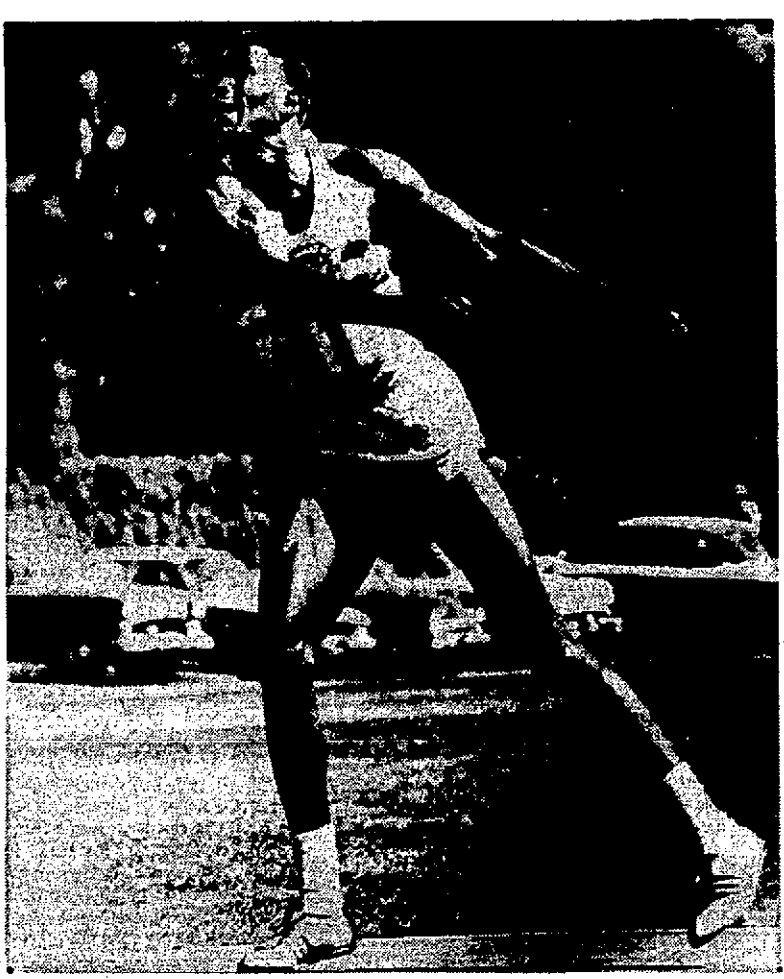

LOU SABAN'S Boston club is expected to have the biggest initial roster—118. Oakland's roster is the smallest with 70.

Monti Falls to 6-Under Burst in the nation as head pro at Lakeside in No. Hollywood.

Blue-eyed Buddy, former U.S. and Long Beach City junior champion, won one tournament and was runner-up in five others in four years on the PGA tour. He'll be heavily favored to annex his first SC-PGA title today.

"You've got to play good against Eric," said Holscher after his victory, "and I had to play my best this afternoon."

How good is illustrated by the fact that he had to match Monti birdie for birdie on three holes on the front nine as both went out in 33. He sank putts of 10, 4 and 8 feet on the first, fifth and eighth holes while Monti was connecting on taps of 4, 18 and 10 feet.

Holscher also bogied the fourth on three putts and birdied the ninth by smacking a four-wood to the green and two-putting from 25 feet.

JOCKEY QUOTES: 'BUMPING WAS ROUGH'

Were Lucky in Jam--Moreno

Pete Moreno (Tempestuous) — "Everything went OK 'till we started going around the final bend and I was sitting there with no place to go with an awful lot of horse. The bumping was rough. But we got lucky — got through — and then I felt pretty confident we were going to win it. I wasn't worried at all about the inquiry — I was surprised that it even included us. I pointed Tempestuous to the outside when I passed New Policy and knew I had a lot of room to the outside. From there to the wire I just kept riding. This is the biggest thrill of my life!"

Willie Harmatz (T.V. Lark) — "He was a runner today, but things just didn't work out. I wasn't surprised when they hung up the inquiry sign. I had to quit riding in the stretch when Tempestuous drifted out because it was getting near the heel-clipping stage. I saved ground all the way to the far turn when a wall of horses formed in front of me. I lost worlds of ground around the turn while circling the pack, but he kept right on rolling until I had to snatch him up in the stretch."

Alex Maese (Blank Check) — "We had enough to handle most of them, but not all of 'em. We had no excuses. We weren't bothered when the jam developed."

Willie Shoemaker (New Policy) — "The ground broke out from under him at the start and he didn't get away as cleanly as last time, but I don't think it hurt him too much. He ran his race, but there was pressure all the time, horses inside and outside of us giving us trouble."

TEMPESTUOUS BIDES TIME AROUND FIRST TURN

Tempestuous (arrow) is sailing along smoothly in fourth position as the Hollywood Derby field rounds the first turn of $114,800 classic. Leader Henrijan is next to rail, hidden by New Policy (7) on the outside and First Balcony (6). strides and that's all she wrote! TEMPESTUOUS was claimed June 1 from Conejo Ranch by Joe Dragna and Dr. S. E. Santoro. The owners turned over the training chores to Dragna's 27-year-old son, Matt, who had been in the business only one year.

"We figured he was a nice colt to get for the cheap price of $15,000," explained Matt Dragna, "but we had no idea he'd be good enough to win the big Derby."

"I noticed Tempestuous was sore when we claimed him, so I changed his shoes immediately. I put on leather pads and built-up his heels so that he could run more comfortably. It's really paid off!"

PAID OFF is an understatement. Tempestuous won his first race for the Dragna combine, then was an excellent second to New Policy in the Cinema Handicap two weeks ago. Matt Dragna would like to run his colt in next Saturday's $100,000 added Sunset Handicap in two weeks.

Hollypark's rage this season is $15,000 claimers. Prize Host routed Bagdad last Saturday . . . then Tempestuous today. Anybody for Caliente?

AROUND THE TURN: The meeting's biggest payoff came in Saturday's second race when Eddie Burns drove home Topple ($113.40) . . . Another goodie dropped up in the fourth heat when Gordon Lanoway brought in Talktalk ($68.60) . . . The

4-Length Win by Royal Native

OCEANPORT, N.J. (UPI)—Royal Native, 1959 filly champion, showed her class Saturday in scoring a four-length victory in the $28,950 Molly Pitcher Handicap at Monmouth Park.

Bill Hartack held the 4-year-old chestnut filly in check until midway in the race and then moved her into command to easily beat Quill in the 1 1/16-mile event.

The Molly Pitcher was the third consecutive stakes triumph for Royal Native and her fifth of the season.

Miss Orestes, who finished almost two lengths back of Quinn in third place, took the lead from Bug Brush after a half-mile.

But Miss Orestes lost command as Royal Native moved up from third place and was in front by three lengths in mid-stretch. Royal Native finished the trip in 1:43 4/5 and paid $4.00, $2.60 and $2.20. Her winner's share of $18,817 boosted Royal Native's earnings to over $138,000 for the year. Quill returned $3.40 and $2.60 and Miss Orestes $5.60.

Keenation Captures Peter Pan

NEW YORK (UPI)—Eikcam Stable's Keenation gamely held on in the wire dash Saturday to win the first stakes race of his career, the $28,250 Peter Pan Handicap at Aqueduct.

Keenation, a three-year-old bay son of Citation, displayed the speed of his sire in coming from behind an early seventh place deficit to defeat Irish Lancer by a nose in the 1 1/4-mile event.

Keenation, who failed to make the grade in four other stakes races at this distance this year, gained a half-length lead over Irish Lancer in mid-stretch and barely had enough left over at the finish to withstand his challenger's wire drive.

Keenation, overlooked in the betting, paid $47.30, $12.30 and $4.00 while covering the distance in 1:50 flat. His share of the winner's purse totaled $18,062. Irish Lancer returned $5.70 and $3.10 and Francis S. $2.40.

Special to the I. P.T. CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS—Lis Josefsen of Long Beach, Calif., won the high jump at the National AAU women's track and field championships Saturday night with an outstanding leap of 5 feet, 5 1/2 inches.

Last year she won with a jump of 5-3. She was sent to the meet by the Long Beach Century Club.

Wilma Rudolph broke the world record in the 200 meters with a clocking of 22.9. The 19-year-old Clarksville, Tenn. Negro won by five yards.

IRENE ROBERTSON, a 28-year-old El Camino College, Calif., art student, ran a 57.1 second 400 meters around the Buccaneer Stadium track for a new American record.

Evelyn Brown, a Los Angeles housewife, broke the meet shotput record with a 49 feet, 8 1/2 inch toss.

Shua Next for Red-Hot Flyers Nine

George Steffan hurled a five-hit shutout and Jack Smithman drove in two runs as the Flyers' American Legion team continued its winning ways with a 5-0 victory over San Pedro Saturday. The victory gave the Harbor League leaders an 11-0 season mark. Flyers battle Shua today at Millikan at 1:30.

In other Harbor League games, Shua bowed to Wilmington, 3-0, and Alamitos Bay staged a ninth inning rally to defeat Samuel Thomas, 13-10.

Took Up Trailer Life 3 Years Ago--Still There

By TRAILER TOM

When Betty and John George married about three years ago, they decided to take up temporary residence in a mobile home.

"We hadn't thought much about trailer living," Betty recalls, "but we had a chance to get a good one-bedroom mobile unit at a bargain, so we took it."

So, three years and one baby later they report:

"We haven't any plans now to live anywhere else."

THEIR EXPERIENCES with mobile homes—they've had two in that short period—might be of some help to people contemplating mobile home living. So we'll just pass them along.

When Sheryl, now 21 months old, arrived, the Georges found that their comfortable one-bedroom home was becoming crowded. And George, a truck dispatcher for a Los Angeles firm, loved swimming. So they decided on two major changes.

THEY DECIDED to move to a more modern park with a pool. To do this moving job, they packed their dishes, put them right back in the drawers, and "protected everything that could fall down."

Then John called a moving concern. For $12.50 they were towed the necessary eight miles to a trailer park with a pool.

The same firm would have connected utility and sewer lines, etc., for an additional fee, but John saved this money by doing the work himself.

In the new park complete with pool and recreation room, their monthly rent is still under $40.

The move took a few hours. In one day they were completely established at their new site, and John was swimming.

New Ocean Front Hotel Open

INTO FULL OPERATION

Complete opening of the new Doric Hotel Capri, 530 E. Ocean Blvd., is announced by the Doric Hotel Co. The company had been renting some rooms recently to alleviate a shortage but until now the dining, cocktail bar and some other facilities were not complete. Here is a view from the ocean side, showing the five full floors and basement. From Ocean Blvd. the structure appears much smaller.

Opening of all units of the new Doric Hotel Capri, 530 E. Ocean Blvd., is announced by hotel chain. The new structure, developed by Max Nesel of Long Beach, originally was called the Twilighter during construction.

Although some rooms have been rented the past three weeks, to alleviate a housing shortage for conventions, the Horizon Room, bar and cocktail lounge overlooking the ocean, and the Capri Grill, a dining place with cheery decor, have just been completed, said Floyd Clodfelter, president of the Doric Co.

Bill Hughes is the manager who has provided a trained staff to offer Doric hospitality known from British Columbia to San Diego, Clodfelter said.

Webster, Ralph Spielman and Gladys Judd will assist in the management. The hotel is built into the side of the bluff at Ocean Blvd., and from the street appears much smaller than it really is. On the ocean side there are five full floors and a basement.

Goes Through

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — The Loveland post office received a letter addressed merely to "The Big Squirt, Loveland, Colo." Postal officials delivered it to a firm here which manufactures farmland sprinklers. It was the right address.

Stores Set Mardi Gras Celebration

A celebration patterned after the New Orleans' Mardi Gras will be enjoyed by the customers of the Los Altos Shopping Center as the facility officially opens its mid-summer Mardi Gras tomorrow.

"Gala window decorations and masked employees will create excitement as enjoyable as the outstanding savings our customers will find in every store participating in the event," said Walter Pfeiffer, re-elected president of the Los Altos Business Association, sponsors of the event.

AS AN EXTRA attraction to customers, a 1960 Falcon de luxe station wagon will be given away on Saturday afternoon, July 16 at 2 p.m.

The two-door Falcon will be given to a lucky winner of the drawing which will be held all week at the center. Tickets may be picked up, filled out and deposited at any participating store in the center. No purchase is necessary to enter the drawing.

Pfeiffer said that the winner's name will be announced over the public address system three minutes to make himself known at any of the stores in the center. The drawing will continue until a winner has been identified.

This is the second of three such major summertime events to be staged for shoppers by the Los Altos Business Assn.

Builds Five More Barns

Construction of five new barns at Los Alamitos Race Course was started Thursday. The five barns, costing $250,000, will contain stalls for 158 horses and will provide an additional 60 tack rooms.

The new barns are part of a planned program at Los Alamitos to give the course the most modern stable area in the west. The new structures will be of concrete and steel throughout and will be fireproofed to the fullest degree possible.

Pascoe Steel Corp., Pomona, constructing the structures, said they would be completed in time for the 31-day fall racing program which opens Nov. 17.

Predicts Gain in Car Sales

NEW YORK (AP) — New car sales of 6,750,000 units in 1960 compared with 6,026,500 in 1959 are predicted by Standard & Poor's Corp.

The business and financial advisory service said total dollar volume of sales should be somewhat higher than last year. It noted that many sales will be "economy" cars, which carry a lower price tag per unit than the average new car, but the increase in the number of cars sold should make up the difference.

Pink Preferred in Face Powder

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pink and pinkish shades of face powder are the most popular with the majority of American women, 40 per cent of whom have sallow skins, reports the Variety Store Merchandiser, a trade publication.

Medium pink shades lead in this market, with beige-and-pink tones. Rachels, ivory and light round out the five main shades in skin makeup.

$6,180,000 Project Set to Start Soon

By KEN CHILCOTE
1, P-T Business Editor

First major venture of private capital attracted by the Long Beach Marina will be a $6,180,000 development highlighted by an eight-story de luxe hotel, a private marina with adjoining motor trailer court and at least two large restaurants and a yacht club.

All of the involved projects should be under construction before the end of 1960 and the initial work will be started within six weeks, reports Hugh Gibbs, AIA architect who is preparing all of the plans for the project.

The project, along Pacific Coast Hwy., is awaiting only completion of the plans and contract awards to get underway.

IN ADDITION to this major development, the Chris Craft Boat Co. plans a $386,950 regional boating center adjacent to the hotel property.

Bill Boyd of the Chamber of Commerce, said the Golden Sands Motor Hotel will be one of the finest hotels in the Southland and will provide facilities long needed in the area.

There will be 500 units ranging from apartments to single rooms in the eight-story structure. The building will be designed to provide views of the Marina and the Long Beach skyline for most rooms.

AS PART of the Golden Sands there will be a small shopping center with an international theme. While the hotel originally was designed for three large banquet rooms, Gibbs said the company which is in negotiations to operate it wants to provide banquet facilities for from 1800 to 2400 persons and these changes are being made.

A large bar will be an Hawaiian type open facility oriented toward one of the three large swimming pools. There also will be three wading pools, cabanas and recreation areas.

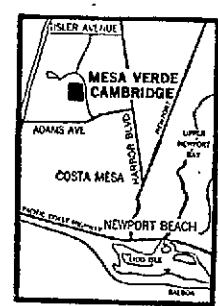

On the second floor will be TV rooms, conference suites and recreation rooms plus the three banquet rooms.

The top floor will have de luxe suites, Gibbs explained, price will follow.

Newest Mahogany Is Brown

CHICAGO (UPI) — The furniture designers who know mahogany best have done it up brown.

Those accustomed to red mahogany were surprised when 40 tones of brown turned up among the more than 150 new finishes for mahogany shown at the International Home Furnishings Market.

Mahogany had been red for so many years that people had forgotten its natural tones of tawny sherry and sunny amber that age to warm golden or deep mellow browns.

Furniture makers, however, remembered the warm, natural tones of mahogany, which seemed a natural for informal, contemporary furniture.

MAKERS OF PERIOD furniture joined in the return to the natural tones of mahogany once favored by Hepplewhite, Sheraton and Duncan Phyfe at his prime. Phyfe did use woods other than mahogany, but only in his latter years when he was turning out what he called "butcher furniture."

Not all the new browns available in mahogany are the natural color of the wood, but even the dyed ones are a far cry from the old, opaque red finish that hid the wood's beauty and distorted its natural tones. The distinctive personality of mahogany, its grain figure patterns and its pores show through the new finishes, natural or dyed.

Iron, Steel Pay at New High

NEW YORK (AP)—The iron and steel industry payroll reached a new high during the first five months of the year, the American Iron and Steel Institute said. Hourly and salaried workers totaled 629,997 compared with 600,404 a year earlier.

Oil Industry Troubled but Not Downhearted

By ELMER C. WALZER
UPI Financial Editor

NEW YORK — American motorists are paying 486,500 per cent more in motor fuel taxes than they did in 1919.

That figure is arrived at as follows: motor fuel taxes totaled $1 million in 1919. They rose to $4,866,000,000 by 1959. The latter is 4,866 times the $1 million, or a raise of 4,865 from the one. If something goes up from 1 to 2 the rise is 100 per cent. Subtract the two figures and add two ciphers, and you get 486,500 per cent.

That tax burden hurts the consumers, makes them seek compact cars which burn less fuel and hence hurts the oil companies. There are other things that hurt even more. They are heavy inventories of gasoline and other oil products that seem to be difficult to reduce. And then, there's the problem of a capacity that's 20 per cent larger than demand.

APPLICATION OF THE law of supply and demand gives a clue to the real trouble. Big supply softens prices. Added to that is rising costs which cannot be made up with supply high as it is.

Aggravating these problems is a move of Soviet Russia to dump oil into free world markets at sharply cut prices. Newsweek magazine estimates this dumping amounted to 16 million tons last year and the plan is to step up these shipments.

Fuel oil is being displaced by gas in many sections. Natural gas is an oil product but its price is held down by the Federal Power Commission.

ALSO OIL COMPANIES which one time were able to import cheap oil from the Middle East to lighten their costs are now restricted severely in their imports by government edict.

Add all these up and one finds reasons why oil company profits have declined and why Wall Street once hailed the oils as the glamor stocks now shuns them. Of course, this leads to talk that the $56 billion oil industry is on the skids.

The industry resents such talk, notes that it has had troubles before, and avers that it will solve the present ones as it has in the past.

There are more billionaires in the oil industry than in any other industry—billionaire corporations, that is. And the biggest one—Standard Oil Company (N.J.), a near $10 billion asset job—is having its troubles along with the others.

However, Leo D. Welch, Standard's chairman, already see signs of recovery. He finds less drilling of new wells, curtailment of capital spending, and improvement in management of supplies, inventories, and marketings.

"I WOULDN'T ATTEMPT to set a time as to when the industry will be back to a normal balance," he says. It might be a year or two; or it could be longer."

In the process of righting its troubles the industry is going to work on the belief held in many another industry that the consumer is king.

The consumer already is benefitting at the expense of the oil companies by the fact his gasoline bill is lower.

Now the plan is to treat him better at the gas station.

M. J. Rathbone, president and chief executive officer of Standard Oil (N.J.), and chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, the industry's statistical organization, points out that every day 12 million gasoline purchases are made at service stations across the nation.

"These millions of contacts can be either good or bad for our business," he says, "for here is where the customer gets his impression of the dealer, the station, the company, and the industry."

"WHO MAKES THESE contacts with the public? Usually it's the poorest trained member of the oil industry—the attendant. Too many times he is not a good will salesman, much less a gasoline salesman. He's the dealer's biggest problem — and he's our problem as well."

Rathbone suggests a training course for the attendants. The trained attendant will give the customer new services and improve the old ones. The industry plans also to expand its products. It could add 100 million barrels of asphalt a year to its sales if only one per cent of the semi-arid farm land of the world were treated with this product to seal in moisture.

THE INDUSTRY is seeking to have the metallurgical industry convert to oil. It is exploring petrochemicals more widely, working on new plastics from oil, advocating use of petroleum in air conditioners, water heaters, dryers, and other household equipment. And there may be a little

Pontiac to Build Small Car for '61

By BEN PHILEGAR

DETROIT (AP)—Fresh from his triumphs in the medium price field Semon B. (Bunky) Knudsen of Pontiac is ready to challenge all comers this fall in the small car battle. "There are going to be 10 makes in the field. I think I can take business from the other nine," he said in an interview.

Pontiac's entry will be the Tempest and that's as far as any official announcement has gone as yet. Like any other auto industry executive Knudsen is extremely wary about talking for the record about any advance product.

But the trade has heard the Tempest will offer the industry's first four-cylinder engine since the days of the Henry J, that it will have a transaxle, which means putting the transmission back with the rear axle, and that it is considerably different from the smaller cars which Buick and Oldsmobile, the other two medium price divisions of General Motors, will be introducing this fall.

"WE'RE NOT EVEN calling it a compact," Knudsen said frankly. "This is a well-designed smaller car for family use—one you can put the whole family and their luggage in for a trip from here to Virginia. You wouldn't want to do that in some of these so-called compact cars."

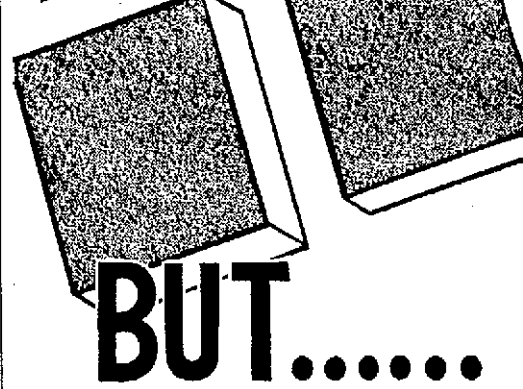

"I think a lot of people are going to be surprised about the Tempest. It's not a little car. It's a good, smaller car—a companion car."

Knudsen, son of a former General Motors president, worked his way up in the corporation and became general manager of Pontiac four years ago this month.

WITH HIS 1959 AND 1960 models he completely changed the image of the car, from one grandma might want to one young people felt they had to have.

His percentage of the shrinking medium price market has shot up accordingly. Pontiac's record volume year was 1955, but in that year it accounted for only 18 per cent of its field. Last year it took 26 per cent of all medium prices sales. Registrations through the first five months of 1960 show it taking 36 per cent.

When the future is all-electric, why buy anything but a MEDALLION home?

The Medallion Home Award is a public service created by the electric industry. It is awarded only to the one new home in five that is electrically up-to-date with ample wiring, outlets, switches and lighting.

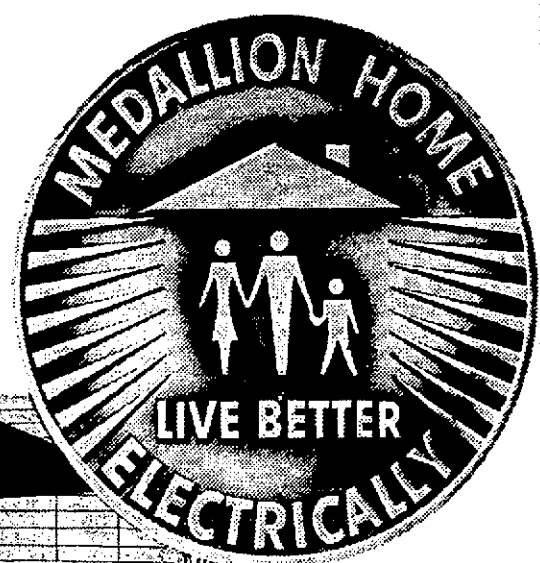

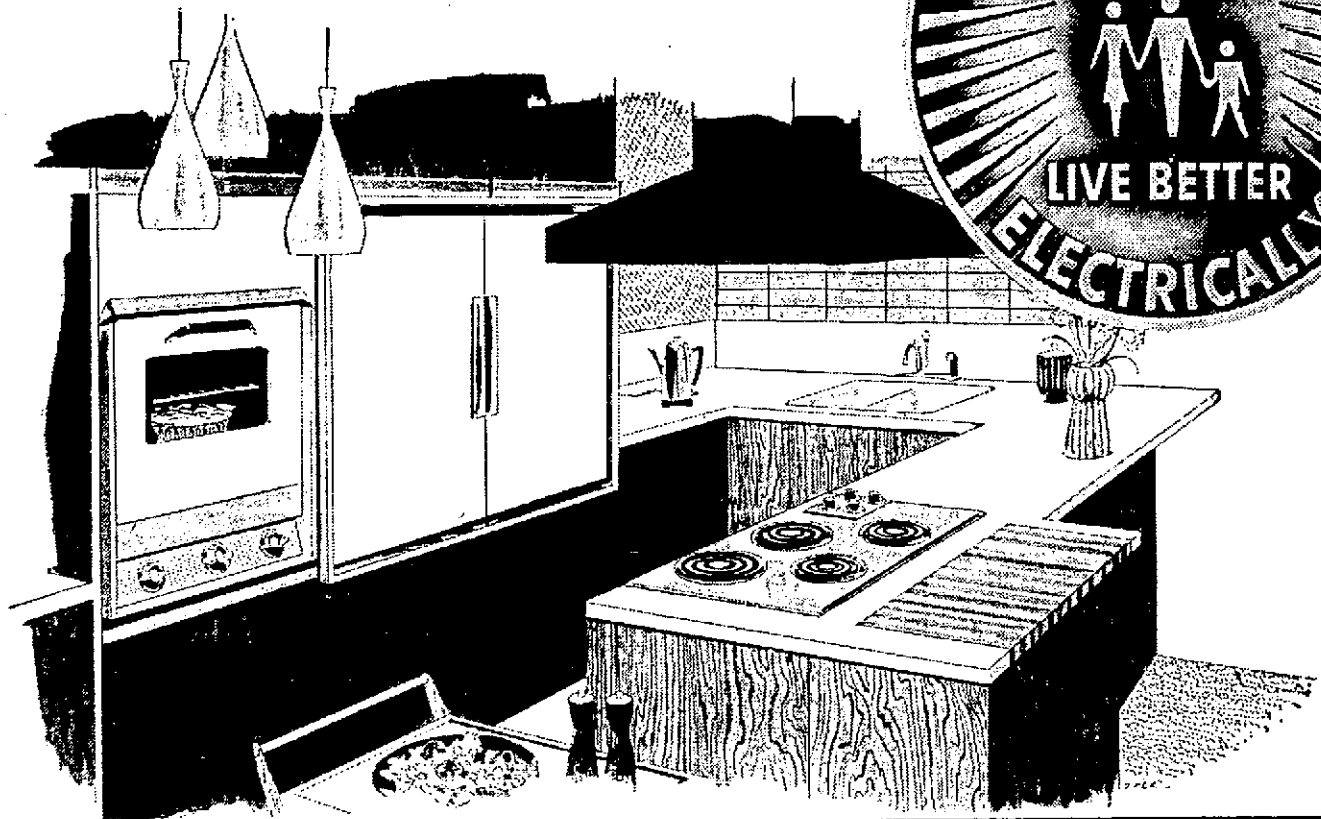

When a new home meets Medallion standards, you know it offers:
An all-electric kitchen—the new-home feature most wanted by women. It comes equipped with major electric appliances, including range and oven.

Plenty of "Housepower"—modern wiring to handle today's appliances. (The average family now owns more than 30 and will add others in the future, since the really new ideas in better living are electric.) Even the lighting in a Medallion home is planned for comfort, convenience and beauty.

A confident investment. The Medallion home offers you the best in modern living. You'll find one in nearly every price range. And because it's planned for the all-electric future, you know a Medallion home will keep its value.

When the future is all-electric, why buy anything but a Medallion home?

New Royal Coachline Homes Sales Soaring

Royal Coachline Homes, according to Mark Pitman, King Series, in Anaheim continues to sell at a rapid pace. However, an excellent selection of floor plans is still available to the home buyer, Pitman stated.

6,000 Counters to Man 4,150 Stations Today to Tally Cars on State Highways

Some 6,000 people will be counted, designed to measure out on the roads today, counting cars and proving that man is still mightier than the machine. They'll be taking part in the state's 37th annual auto count, designed to measure highway needs, improve road design and identify trouble spots. Counters will man 4,150 checking stations. Such counts must be made by people, the Highway Division said, because machines can't distinguish between cars, trucks, buses, cars with trailers and the number of axles on trucks—all of which must be counted.

IN LAST JULY'S check more than 60 million vehicles were counted on two successive days.

High was on the Hollywood Freeway in Los Angeles County, where 203,800 vehicles were tallied in one day. The low was on Ithex Pass near the Inyo-San Bernardino County line. Only five cars passed by checkers there.

Will Manage Design Firm

Donald L. McFarland, 5659 Corso Di Napoli, Long Beach, former manager of General Electric Co.'s industrial design operation, housewares division, will become managing partner in a new Long Beach, office of Latham-Tyler-Jensen, Chicago industrial design firm.

Located at 4252 Atlantic Blvd., the L-T-J firm offers West Coast clients design services in the field of product design, graphics, corporate identity, packaging, furniture and interior design, and acts as consultant on product planning. The firm also designs exhibits for museums and governmental agencies, and is currently designing exhibits for the Los Angeles Museum of Science & Industry.

McFarland served over the past 12 years in a succession of posts with G-E, as an industrial designer and as manager of product planning and manager of advance engineering. Prior to joining G-E, he was an aircraft designer with Chance Vought Aircraft, Stratford, Conn.

Realty Speaker

Raymond C. Simpson, attorney, will be the speaker at the Long Beach Board of Realtors breakfast meeting Tuesday morning at the La Ronde Rue, Clive Graham, program chairman, announced. He will discuss national and community affairs.

This new series of Royal Coachline Homes offers dwellings of 3 and 4 bedrooms, plus spacious family room and 2 baths. Sixteen outstanding exterior designs and 5 well executed floor plans are available and assure the buyer individuality in selection. The homes contain 1,360 to 1,508 square feet of actual living area. Priced from $17,800 to $19,400, the homes can be purchased from $500 to $1,250 total down.

THE HOMES are available in either contemporary or provincial styling with roofs of cedar shake, rock or shingle combination—stone, brick or marble fireplaces with gas log lighter, brick planters and concrete planter areas, handsawn and ornamental iron trim, large front porches, stone and brick exterior masonry. Some of the plans feature exposed beam ceilings in the family room. Among the extras offered in these new homes are high quality wall-to-wall carpeting, lawns planted front and sides.

The new King Series kitchens feature O'Keefe & Merritt built-in range, oven and rotisserie, plus exhaust fan and hood, in-sink-erator garbage disposal, custom stained Alder cabinets, all ceramic tile bare and sink tops.

FORCED-AIR heating, 100 amp wiring with 20 circuit electrical panel, aluminum sash screens with weatherstripping and aluminum interlocking thresholds are even more of the quality features in the new King Series.

From the Santa Ana Freeway southward take Ball Rd. turnoff. Northbound take Harbor Blvd. turn-off, east on Ball Rd. to Placentia Ave., then north (left) to South St., then left to furnished models.

From the Riverside Freeway take the Cynress turn-off, then turn south to South St., then right to furnished models.

Biggest 'Numbers Game' in Town

Independent Press-Telegram Women

And YOU Think YOUR Phone Is Busy Some Days

By IOLA MASTERSON
I.P.-T. Women's Editor

A sense of humor, with a built-in giggle arrestor, is one of a telephone operators' most valuable assets.

Anyone who answers a telephone from 100 to 125 times an hour, giving information to the public at large, would find her job unbearably monotonous without that quality. Her second most valuable trait is brevity. Unlike almost any other woman, her calls last on an average of just 35 seconds each.

This all seemed evident in an interview with General Telephone Company's chief operator, Virginia (Mrs. L. V.) Crosby, a soft-spoken, petite and attractive executive.

Actually, Mrs. Crosby assured me that the bulk of calls received are reasonable in scope and from people who are articulate in their requests. That is, until after the bars close at 2 a.m. Then the girls on the graveyard shift get set for some real doozies. They run the gamut. A familiar one goes something like this: "Saayy, me 'n my buddy we have a bet, see? Who won th' Santa Anita 'Cap in '56, hmmm, operator?" Then there's the officious, bleary-eyed fellow who is apt to demand, "Give me Elvis Presley's number, Miss. It'll be okay. I met him in the Army once."

AFTER BAR hours or not, there are always a smattering of those who take the title, "Information Operator" literally. It isn't uncommon for a day to produce such queries as "Will you recommend a good family doctor?"—or, "I'm stalled on the freeway. Please connect me with some garage nearby that is HONEST!"

Others ask the operators' opinions on restaurants, television, what's playing at the local flickers and assorted miscellaneous ad infinitum.

A real puzzler is the tiny tot who sneaks a little dialing in when mama isn't looking. It is frustrating to the limit in an endearing kind of way. How can you be firm and impersonal with a lispy little voice that just wants to confide a childish something to someone. Perhaps it was a mother who petitioned the company a while back for a private phone—with a lock on it! Unfortunately, if she was a mother, they couldn't oblige.

THERE IS one notable exception when the switchboard girls give extra curricular information and that is during World Series time. They can take time to give the latest score if they are sure they have the latest. But then who wouldn't, restraint of a saint or otherwise.

As a prelude to the interview, Mrs. Crosby escorted me on a Cook's tour of the telephone company's working rooms, hub of operations. Long rows of switchboards, ablaze with flashing lights, are manned by operators, intent on the call at hand. She told me the average age of new applicants is between 19 and 26 years of age. Newcomers aren't as apt to remain for long periods now as they were a few years ago. Some employees have been with the company for 25 years and longer.

There are 52 positions at the information center which averages a total intake of 30,000 calls a day. Busiest time, Mrs. Crosby informed me, is from 9 a.m. until noon. Nighttime is the slow time—except, of course, when the weirdies start their after 2 a.m. barrage.

A SCOREBOARD (my own definition) hangs from the ceiling in a central location in the main switchboard room. Its rows of tiny bulbs snap on and off as incoming calls register for the duration, showing the supervisors at which station each is being received.

Every information operator has six directories at her fingertips—amended daily with latest changes and covering both Los Angeles and Orange Counties. Each girl also has a list of the most frequently wanted numbers—about 250 are on this popularity poll. Hotels, restaurants, police, etc.

It was gratifying to see that the Independent, Press-Telegram's HE 5-1161 rated as one of those most often wanted.

We'll wager no one in the city knows more about correct usage of a phone than Mrs. Crosby and here are some of her words of wisdom. Be specific when asking for information. Speak up. Offer to spell an unusual name before you have to be asked to do so. Don't be coy or rude when asked.

LISTEN to the operator when she gives you the information you desire and DON'T expect her to repeat it over and over again while you painstakingly memorize it verbatim. Have a pencil handy if you can't trust your memory and jot it down. Despite the odd ones, people, in general, she says are very good.

NUMBERS Mr. and Mrs. John Q. should remember or post beside their phones are these:

Dial 0 for assistance on local calls.

Dial 110 for long distance.

Information is 113; repair service calls are received on 114.

The number to tuck into your headbone, though, and save there is the company's emergency number; any emergency. It is 116. When 116 is dialed it registers a red light on the control board and has priority over all other incoming calls.

Naturally, you should keep police, fire, doctor and other such numbers which may be needed in a hurry in plain view. But if you cannot reach these and the matter is truly one of real emergency, then dial the 116.

Why does it take so long for an operator to answer sometimes? It's because you, dear public, have every operator on the line. The operation (except 116) is a democratic process. First call, first answered basis. Be patient.

GENERAL TELEPHONE COMPANY'S chief operator, Virginia (Mrs. L. V.) Crosby (standing), checks call being received by Annette Branch at company's bustling, efficient central office, Elm at 6th St. Operators process an average of 30,000 calls a day; most reasonable, a few real "doozies."

Philly's Fine When on Diet

By ILKA CHASE

There are a couple of wry comments about two American cities with which out of town visitors are apt to agree. One deals with Boston. "I went through Boston once but it was closed." The other refers to the city of brotherly love. "I spent a month in Philadelphia one Sunday."

Recently I was concerned with the latter for I was involved in a summer stock production of Thornton Wilder's winsome, gentle and wildly funny farce, The Matchmaker.

Rehearsals were to start on Monday, so I arrived late Sunday afternoon. This was fortunate because the few restaurants that open at all on the Sabbath generally do not do so until 4:00 p. m. This is all right for the natives who presumably have kitchens, but what of the hapless traveler? He goes hungry, that's what. Still I was able to get dinner so I had no legitimate complaint.

MY REAL problem was Monday. That particular Monday, like our glorious Fourth, was a holiday. My heart goes out to Philadelphians on this great day. Chances are the restaurants that will be open they can count on their two thumbs. The one in the apartment hotel where I was staying will not be among them. Their holiday is starvation day.

The following morning I was a little late for rehearsal having gone first to the supermarket to stock up on supplies for my minute kitchenette. I had learned my lesson!

Audiences tend to think that summer theater is a lark for the actors. All that fresh air and those trees—what a treat for the poor things after the asphalt of Broadway. And it isn't that actors don't appreciate the great outdoors, it's just that in preparing a play in a week, one is under tremendous pressure and actually could do better without the diversion of all that lavish nature.

IT'S LIKE writing. People often say to me, "I suppose you work best in the country, don't you, without anything to distract you?" No, dear friends, that ain't how it happens: Perhaps in mid-winter with snow three feet deep on the ground, writing in the country is possible but at any other season to look out the window is to see a thousand things that should be attended to—weeding, watering, planting, leaf rak-

Children Ride High on Fashion Carousel

When little Miss Back-to-School steps down the ramp at the "Carnival of Fashions" show Aug. 28 in the International Ballroom of Lafayette Hotel she will be wearing a dressier-than-ever wardrobe.

That is the prediction of John Hersey, Buffums' fashion coordinator, who will commentate the show, a presentation of Symphony Juniors.

Tickets for the fashion event, which will include boys' wear, too, soon will be on sale. The show is sponsored by the Juniors as their primary fund raising event. Money from ticket sales will support the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra which performs in Long Beach four times a year.

Mrs. Harry E. Landis is chairman of the Continuance Fund Committee in charge of the project. Mrs. Martin Wolfson and Mrs. A. Ross Cash are responsible for tickets.

OTHER MEMBERS of the committee are Mmes. Leo Rauch, George Williams, John Roggeveen, Norman Greve, Ernest Lockwood, C. Wally Simmons, Robert Frankenfeld, Charles Kober, Joseph Ernst, Lew H. Mahieu, Norman Gottlieb and Mark Speizer.

The fashion carnival will feature children's clothing from size four to teen wear, but a few matching mother and daughter sets also will be shown.

"Emphasis is placed on the old-fashioned, early American and Victorian look this year," said Hersey. "Braid and lace trims and the use of velvet, washable, of course, and fur promise a high fashion look for the lower grades."

Provincial prints, aprons and tunics are news in small fry styling for fall. The leggy look is important, too. Tights in coordinated colors will be a wardrobe must, he added.

Hersey, who will show a collection of school clothes guaranteed to make the roughest member of the playground set clothes conscious, also has planned to lace the showing with a little bit of circus fun.

TUMBLERS and clowns, interspersed among the 30 young models, all children of Symphony Junior members, will turn the fashion runway into a midway during the show. Programs designed to represent little circus trains may be unfolded and worn as gay hats. Musical entertainment will be provided by members of Symphony Junior and door awards will be offered.

The newest fashion-wise colors of grape, gold and olive green will be seen throughout the collection, which will include sleepwear, playclothes and everyday school outfits.

For boys, Hersey sees a brighter and more colorful season. Plaids and bulky knits will round out their fall wardrobes.

Troth Note Links Wright-Kennick

David Kennick, son of State Assemblyman Joseph M. Kennick and Mrs. Kennick will claim Sallie Wright as his bride in an Aug. 27 ceremony.

News of the engagement and forthcoming marriage is being made known by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wright of this city.

Miss Wright was graduated from Long Beach State College where she was a member of Delta Zeta Sorority. She teaches first grade at Catskill Ave. Elementary School in Wilmington.

Her fiancé, also a LBSC graduate, earlier attended San Jose State College.

Officers' Wives Preview Pageant

A behind-the-scenes glimpse of the Long Beach International Beauty Pageant will be given members of Fleet Officers' Wives when one of the assistant directors, Marvin Cloyd, is guest speaker at the club's July luncheon at Allen Center, Thursday.

A social hour at 11:45 a.m. precedes the 12:30 p.m. luncheon. Reservations may be made with Mrs. O. M. Moore.

NOT EVERY YOUNGSTER gets a carousel all to herself, but when you are as pretty as blonde little Miss Diane Cash, and only 2½ years old—well, all sorts of nice things happen! Hospitable Mrs. Harry Landis, continuance fund chairman, Symphony Juniors, offers you great big lollipops; nice boys like 9-year-old Gary Wolfson hold your carnival balloons; and lovely ladies like

Ben Neal, Gloria Nichol Wed

Los Altos Methodist Church provided a lovely setting for the recent wedding of Gloria Ann Nichol, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Nichol, 610 Havana Ave., and Benjamin Wesley Neal, son of the Rev. and Mrs. J. Wesley Neal, Hollywood.

For the double ring ceremony performed by the bridegroom's father, the bride chose a floor length wedding gown fashioned of mousseline de soie by Adeline, with a portrait neckline, trimmed with swiss organdie medallions, and short tucked sleeves. Graduated nun's tucks emphasized the beautiful bouffant skirt, and a three tiered hand-rolled silk illusion veil was held in place by a flat bow of mousseline de soie.

THE BRIDAL bouquet was of phalaenopsis in a large spray of stephanotis.

Annette Spargo, maid of honor, carried Tallisman roses and wore yellow embroidered batiste. Bridesmaids Beverly Nichol, Jane Turnquist, Sherry Crook and Eve Rutishauser wore blue embroidered batiste and carried yellow rose buds.

Sheree and Linda Hauth, nieces of the bride, served as flower girls.

The bridegroom honored David Neal as his best man, and chose Ira Rosenstein, David Hoel, Ronald Neal and Edward Russ to seat the 250 guests.

Mrs. Benjamin W. Neal

FOLLOWING the ceremony, Mrs. Wallace Crook, Pattie McSwain and Audrey Nichol Hauth served as hostesses at a reception in Los Altos reception hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Neal were graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School; Mrs. Neal, a member of Alpha Theta Phi sorority, attended the University of Redlands and her husband was graduated from the University of California, Berkeley.

Following a honeymoon trip to Carmel, Monterey and Yosemite, the Neals are residing in Long Beach.

Keeps Theater Date

ing—one has to be tied with cables to the typewriter to get any work done at all. The city with nothing to see from the window but the apartment across the street is more conducive to output.

THE SAME thing happens at rehearsals. Within the dark and musky walls of an old theater there's nothing to focus on but the play.

In The Matchmaker I play Mrs. Levi. Sam Levine who was in the cast, had played his part for a year in London in 1954 so he was more or less able to recall his lines but he had played in a regular theater and the Playhouse in the Park where we were in an arena. Theater in the round, of which there are now so many, presents special challenges of staging. We were lucky in that our director was Nina Vance, the young woman who has won fame for herself by her work in the Alley theater in Houston, Texas. She is able and charming and working with her was a pleasure.

But just as actors have to learn a new technique for arena theaters so, we feel, should audiences. If there is such a theater in your community and the players must make their entrances and exits down ramps along which you are seated do not, I beg you, as one woman did to me on my entrance on opening night, extend your program into the aisle hissing, "Please autograph this." It can lead to mayhem.

WHEN Jessica Tandy was appearing at The Playhouse she had an even more hair-raising experience. One scene took place with her in bed and during a moment when the action was centered on another section of the stage two ardent female theater lovers placed their programs on the coverlet with the coy request that she sign them then and there. Footlights and the proscenium arch are most actors' preference, for, like the cages in the zoo, they protect those enclosed from the ardent and the idiotic.

I will say about Philadelphia, however, that the city fathers turn out in force on the opening night of a new season and we had a special dash of glamour in the person of Princess Grace of Monaco who was back at the old homestead visiting the folks and who came to the opening with several members of the Kelly family.

The Wild Waves Say

By JOLA MASTERSON
L. P. T. Women's Editor

DADS OF brides have to be very patient following the nuptials of their daughters while they listen to mothers of brides as they recount the things they wished they had remembered to do.

No exception is Copeland Green. "Don't worry, dear," He has been assuring Jerry that the things she forgot to include in the story of Meredith's wedding to Don Wiberg were, although charming, merely the spin-drift from a large breaker. Jerry doesn't know we know it but what bothered her was that she failed to list Gay Prichard, who gaily presided at the guest book during the reception, and dad, Hugh, who added so much to post-wedding festivities by providing his dashing red 1922 Cadillac to drive the wedding party from church to reception.

Frankly, Hugh is more to be censured than praised. He could have wrecked the reception. The men in the crowd loved that old car so much they could scarcely be snaggled away from it long enough to be dutiful over punch and cake.

IN THAT city that avoids 13th floors like the plague, Las Vegas, Ann and Bob Croxson were ensconced on the Sahara's 23rd floor last weekend. It was really only the 22nd and no luckier than any other.

"ANNIVERSARY Waltz," that tune on the flip side of Lohengrin, was theme song of the night a few days ago when Marge and Larry Whiteneck were given the surprise party treatment on their silver wedding date. Guests, who brought everything from champagne punch to smiles and a gift, were Marguerite and Kingery Whiteneck, Rose and Don Carson, Gladys and Paul Reddow, Marie and Al Duffee, Lois and Jim Lowry, Ann and Rex Fluke, Hope and Charlie Lewis, Frances and Ray Hamby, Dorothy and "Bud" Huddleston, Olive and Carl Reiner, Artie and Jim Treadwell, Lola and Lew Walton, the honorees' daughter, Laurie, her date, Ron Critser, and Marge's mother, Mrs. Racie Goodwin.

HAWAII, en garde! Here comes Ross Wattelett for a "madcap holiday" amidst your fair islands. He leaves Monday and will spend one glorious day in your paradise during annual U.S. Navy Reserve duty. When the cruise is over and nothing remains but a glowing memory of Polynesia, he and Dorothy will entrain for a visit with Dot's grandpa in Minnesota which boasts a few pretty nice islands of its own.

IMAGINE spending the Fourth on a yacht off the French Riviera. Or, for that matter, even the 12th or 33rd! That's what young J. R. Craig, Norma and John's son, did. He's abroad with his aunt and uncle, the Robert Campbells of Santa Barbara, who chartered a yacht for summer cruising off the Riviera, the French inland waterways and then, later, through the Scandinavian waterways. When the weather grows cold enough there's talk they'll head for Switzerland and skiing. At this point the air around my typewriter is so green with envy it looks like pea soup. Pass me the crackers, mater, it's the only decent thing to do.

HOME LAST Sunday from a pleasure trip, flavored with a soupcon of business, came Betty and Joe Kesler and son, Bill. They traveled by Domeliner, with Jean and Clyde Dunlap and their youngsters, Diane and Tom, to New York, doing the town together before going separate ways. The Keslers took in Connecticut, New Jersey and Washington, D.C. enjoying marvelous weather all the way. The Dunlaps were due to return Friday, their wanderlust sated, temporarily.

MANY A bowl of good stuff plus plenty of cold fried chicken, potluck style, was consumed at Deda and Howard Patrick's home last Monday. The Glorious Friends enjoyed their beautiful pool, suppered themselves, then took to the vantage point of the garage roof to watch the nearby Virginia Country Club's fireworks display. Among those present were Bernie and Jim Crosby, Helen and Ferris Dangberg, Helen and Charles Bennett, Ruth and Mark Keller, Billie and Jim Shiveley, Marilyn and Barry Hearn, Sandra and Mike Patrick, Nita Dunn and sons, Jim and Jerry.

THERE WAS more than fireworks to celebrate the Fourth in Springfield, Va., this year when a Christmas birthday mother, Carol (nee Sundquist) and Major Jim Bowman became parents of a daughter, Carol, former P-T reporter and her brother, Chuck (Jolly Cholly) Sundquist, I.P.T. photog were both born on Christmas. For the record I'd like to add that Chuck has never gotten out of the habit of giving zany yule gifts.

MY FAVORITE story this week is a little vignette in the lives of June and Clark Heggeness. Since two Sundays ago black sheep of the family and hound in the dog house is their basset. They had just settled in their pew at church when they noticed a polite little ruckus at the back and there was their dog, fugitive from the backyard merrily intent on finding them as he sniffed his way up the rows. Three times the usher evicted the gregarious pooch while June and Clark, eyes studiously averted, pretended with might and main they knew him not. On the hound's fourth try they broke down, before God and everybody, and personally escorted him to a more appropriate setting.

NOW THAT July is in full production, its turning out some pretty good dates. For instance, Bob and Jean (Montgomery) Abernethy are here for a month from home in Washington, D.C. where Bob is a reporter for NBC radio. He's here to cover the Demo conclave with his fellow broadcasters. They've taken an apartment at 1213 E. Ocean Blvd. for the duration. To do justice to their presence, Virginia and Franklin Waters hurriedly arranged a gathering of old friends for a dinner party Thursday. Spur-of-the-moment or not, it was a bands playing, flags waving type welcome.

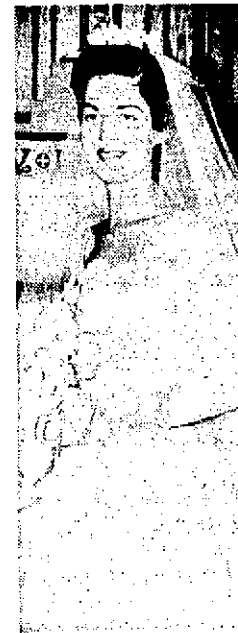

GIVE CREDIT to July, too, for the current visit in town of one of the Navy's finest scrambled eggs men, Ted Griffin, wife, Evelyn, and their daughters, Joy and Jan, from his commander duties in Virginia Beach, Va. They flew in by jet Tuesday to visit his mother, Maude Griffin. Following a two week vacation here, Ted will prepare for new duty, this time in the Mediterranean.

Benediktsons Celebrate Silver Day

More than 100 friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver L. Benediktson, 14 38th Pl., gathered at the couple's home recently in honor of their silver wedding anniversary.

The Benediktsons, who were married in Minot, N. Dak., have lived in Long Beach for the past 12 years. Clarence Knutson introduced the brief program which preceded the reception. Taking part were Mrs. Robert P. West, organ prelude; Mrs. Don Gilson and Mrs. Ross McPherson, duet, and Lorene Johnson, poetry reading. The Rev. Orval Averkamp led a prayer. Serving in the reception line were Marie LeRossignol and Frank Garrety. Mrs. Clarence Knutson and Rose Benediktson assisted at the refreshment table.

Attention to Diet Always Important

During the summer months, be as careful about your diet as you are in the winter. Don't decide to slip through the summer on a series of salads and cold drinks. You need lean meat, fresh fruit and vegetables, fish, cheese, eggs and some milk, just as you do in winter. You should have some hot food every day.

Masses of white summer blossoms transformed All Saints Episcopal Church into a garden setting for the recent late afternoon ceremony uniting in marriage Katherine Doris Duer, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Duer, 2475 Vuelta Grande Ave., and the late Mr. Duer, and Charles Howard Coy, son of Mrs. Howard W. Coy, 36 Virgil Walk, and the late Mr. Coy.

The Rev. Hiram B. Crosby performed the double ring service in the presence of 150 guests.

The bride was radiant in a gown of cut Chantilly lace styled with a chapel train flowing gracefully from the shoulders, and with the neckline accented in iridescent sequins and seed pearls. The same accents adorned the regal crown which held her silk illusion fingertip veil. She carried a cascade of phalaenopsis and stephanotis centered with white orchids. Ernest T. Lamb, a family friend, escorted her to the altar.

PRECEDING THE bride were Mrs. Clifton S. Jones Jr., matron of honor, and Patricia Brinkernoff and Beverly Blaylock, who wore silk organza gowns in crystal aqua and matching crowns trimmed with pearls holding their short veils. All carried cascades of yellow gladioli interlaced with satin ribbons and net.

Serving as best man was Gordon Kerley, and ushering duties were handled by Dr. Anthony Mentas and Phillip Jaffe.

FLAMINGO Garden Room at Allen Center was scene of a reception after the ceremony, from whence the new Mr. and Mrs. Coy left for a honeymoon in Hawaii. After July 12 they will be at home in Long Beach.

The former Miss Duer was graduated from Jordan High School and received her degree in education from Long Beach State College. She is a past vice president of Bachelorettes. Her husband is an alumnus of Wilson High School and USC where he was affiliated with Sigma Chi, and now is a member of Trojan Alumni Assn.

LONG BEACH STATE COLLEGE EVENTS

by PLACER MINER

Five Long Beach State organizations whose stock in trade is service to their school get an unexpected chance to pile up some credit hours soon.

Blue Key and Statesmen, men's service-honor groups, and Califa and Tillicum, their 49er feminine counterpart, will have a hand in activities surrounding the U.S. Olympic Team's tune-up meet in the Veterans Stadium Aug. 5.

Also on hand, probably looking as much as helping, will be several members of the LBSC track team.

The fellows will serve as ushers during the meet, and the girls take over as hostesses for a seafood dinner which follows in the Long Beach State cafeteria.

MORE THAN 60 Rome-bound athletes and a large assemblage of coaches, trainers, local fans, and sports VIPs will be on hand—probably the most talented track-and-field outfit to ever hit the LBSC campus.

Playing a big part in preliminary planning is Bill Tilney, president-elect of the student body who is getting an early start in his campaign to make LBSC even more of an integral part of the community.

We trust that the U.S. Olympians will have a profitable meet in Long Beach and that they will take with them to Rome memories of a pleasant evening on the Long Beach State campus.

Surprise Fete for Bransons

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Branson who were married recently in Las Vegas, Nev., and now reside in Long Beach, were honored with a surprise shower at the home of the bridegroom's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Branson, 4308 Deebayar in Lakewood.

Large white wedding bells decorated the dining area and a pink and white wedding cake centered the table. Cocktails, music and dancing were followed by a mid-night lunch.

Announcement is being made by Mrs. Zigmor Harris, president of the Long Beach chapter, Brandeis University National Women's Committee, of their forthcoming annual Garden Party Fiesta on Tuesday at 1 p.m. The affair, under the guidance of Mrs. Max Coonen and a capable committee, will take place at the attractive home of Mrs. William T. Stine, 1470 Bryant Dr.

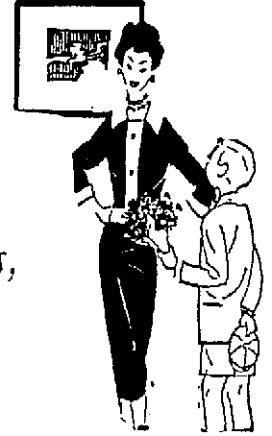

Entertainment will be provided by the Lily Aguilar Spanish Dancers. They have performed in various places throughout the U. S. and Canada, including the Hollywood Bowl, Disneyland, Pomona State Fair, Calgary Stampede, for USO and various Marine bases.

Mrs. Sidney Stern, membership vice president, asks that each member bring a prospective member to help get the club year off to a good start.

NATIONAL Committee for Brandeis is not a fund-raising organization. Funds are realized from membership dues and special contributions to a book fund.

Good California Wine Is Inspiration for 'Ah' Party

The bouquet wasn't all flowers at Betty and "Bix" Bixby's Wednesday. Most of it stemmed from bottles containing six kinds of vintage wine provided by Mary Catherine and Jack Taylor from their Mayeama Winery in Napa Valley.

The wine tasting party went, from left to right, through rose to vermouth and in-between appreciative sips were taken of a most special gold-medal winning Chardonnay.

Among the sip and ab-ers were Avis and Paul Dudley, Bessie and Louis Reese, Joanne Losch (Ed was in San Diego, poor dear), Bunny and Bev. Riley (she in a vivid red Mexican cotton she had made—beautiful), Margaret and Jack Graye, Marje and Bud Young, Marge Gilbert, Rod Mullinex, Bee and George Hart, the Jim Carrolls, and a few more happy-to-be-theres.

July Gallery News

By VERA WILLIAMS
Independent Press-Telegram Art Editor
Seen for the first time on the West Coast, an exhibition featuring "Sculpture of Negro Africa" will open Tuesday in Los Angeles Municipal Art Gallery in Barnsdall Park, Vermont Ave. and Hollywood Blvd., and continue through Aug. 7.

The exhibition is 79 pieces, lent by private collectors and galleries in California, New York and Pennsylvania.

While not considered a survey of all cultures, the exhibition includes 27 major tribes. These are located in three broad geographical areas: French Sudan, the Guinea coast of Northwest Africa and the Congo comprising West and Central Africa.

Hours are 1 to 9 p.m. daily and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

A RECEPTION will be held today from 2-4 p.m. at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. This function, held once each month by the volunteer group, "The Friends of the Museum of Art," is planned for the Museum exhibitors in each particular month and intended to provide an informal atmosphere for artists and public to meet. Refreshments will be served and the public is invited.

The Art Rental Gallery opens a new exhibit of works available for rental. Paintings in various media and sculpture will be displayed and may be taken for three months. Rental activities are in the upstairs east gallery.

Seen for the last time today is the exhibit circulated by IBM, "Three Centuries of Printmaking in America." This exhibit of historic American printmaking contains more than 100 works with intaglio, relief and planographic processes represented.

Current exhibits showing through July 31 are Bernard Maybeck's retrospective (architecture), paintings by the Women Painters of the West, and the imaginative photography of Jini Dellaccio.

Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday - Friday; 1-5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Closed Monday.

OPENING with a reception from 3 to 5 p.m. today, paintings by Frank Woelfel will be shown until Aug. 2 in the Gambit Gallery, 23 39th Pl.

GEOFFREY HOLT will exhibit painting in the Ruth Bach branch library, 4055 Bellflower Blvd. through the remainder of July and August.

WILLIAM J. BARTKO has an exhibition during July in the Laguna Beach Art Gallery. The gallery is open daily, noon to 5 p.m.; Sundays, 1 to 5 p.m.

WINNING entries of $6,000 in cash prizes and

This Sunday I am diverting from music, because I have been on vacation. Figuratively speaking, I have been living in Valhalla, which is the name Richard Wagner gave to the mountainous abode of the Gods. For the Canadian Rockies are indeed just that! The great snow-bedecked crags sparkling in the sun, mile after mile, were like dramatic music carved in rock.

The flight by jet plane was an experience also for the gods. In a jet there is no motion at all discernible, and no noise or vibration. One glides as though in a vacuum. The beautiful blue interiors of the plane vie with the blue of the heavens. The 21,000 feet altitude took us through cloud formations that were fantastic.

FROM VANCOUVER we went to Jasper Park Lodge in Jasper National Park, the largest national park in Canada which covers 4,200 square miles. The Lodge itself is a modern glass structure with framework of huge logs. From the wide verandas can be seen the most spectacular views. Entirely encircled by snow-covered mountains, the guardian of them all, Mount Edith Cavell, towers 11,000 feet in front of you, clothed wholly in white snow, with dark, dramatic bands of strata accentuating her beauty.

At our feet lay the spruce-bordered lake, emerald green, placidly reflecting the snow-splashed mountains. It is called Lac Beauvert, which is French for "beautiful green lake." Inside the Lodge were two enormous lounges, picture-window flanked, cosily arranged with light wood furniture.

Everywhere were flowers—great bouquets of stock, delphinium and huge Canterbury bells. A massive bison head surmounted the tremendous fire-place, always glowing with a cosy fire. At the end of the second lounge is the beautiful dining room whose great plate glass windows bring in the scenic wonder. Rustic cottages dot the wooded area and contain comfortable bedrooms and baths for the guests.

ALTHOUGH I have made many excursions through the Alps, the 150-mile drive purchase awards at the recent Outdoor Art Festival will be displayed through July 17 in the Los Angeles City Hall Tower Gallery. Top prize money went to Morris Broderson, Los Angeles, whose oil painting "Catcher at Bus Stop" won a $1,500 cash purchase award.

RESPONDING TO public request, Los Angeles County Museum is open two evenings a week during the current "Claude Monet: Seasons and Moments" exhibition. The public now may see the Monet show from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesdays and Fridays. Regular Museum visiting hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, except Mondays.

The Monet exhibition, which comprises 100 landscapes, seascapes and river scenes by the French master of Impressionism, will continue through Aug. 7.

from Jasper to Lake Louise was the most thrilling journey I have ever taken. Many of the mountains, packed solid with glaciers, seemed forever frozen, and indeed, snow does remain the year round on many. Others rose up in solid rock like mighty citadels, beautifully sculptured, mile after mile. Lush green forests of spruce, cedar and pine sprawled high up the slopes, lending a magnificent setting to the glistening snow.

These forests are the habitat of many wild animals. We saw mountain goats with their young, picking their precarious, perpendicular way along the steep trails. Huge black bears came right up to the car to be fed. One old fellow flopped in the middle of the road to leisurely scratch himself, while two-way traffic halted. Many deer and elk grazed at us unafraid, for hunting is forbidden in the National Parks of Canada.

Shakespearean Festival Lures Tourist to Canada

Stratford Shakespearean Festival of Canada in Stratford, Ont., provides a real tourist lure including as it does drama, music, painting and Canadian handicrafts.

Plays slated to run through Sept. 17 include "Romeo and Juliet," "King John" and "Midsummer Night's Dream." From July 15 to Aug. 14 "H.M.S. Pinafore" of Gilbert and Sullivan will be given daily except Sundays and Mondays, and weekend concerts feature Glenn Gould, piano; Oscar Shumsky, violin; and Leonard Rose, cello, resident artists, the CBC and National Festival Orchestras as well as morning classical jam sessions and informal chamber concerts.

CAKLE QUIZ The Fresh Egg and You

Do you know a good egg—when you taste one?

The egg industry has gone to a lot of trouble to prove that most of us when faced with the opportunity to prove we know a fresh egg from an old one, a right-from-the-ranch egg from a storage egg, just can't tell the difference.

In fact, out of 5,129 egg consumers attending the California State and Los Angeles County Fairs, 84 per cent couldn't tell the difference between an egg which had been stored for 2 days from one which had been stored 49 days.

Each person participating in the test was presented with two eggs, cooked to individual preference. Each pair of eggs represented combinations of storage periods of 2, 21, 35 and 49 days at 55 deg. F., the storage temperature recommended by the University of California poultry service division.

THE FLAVOR of the first egg was judged by the consumer as excellent, good, fair, poor, or very poor. The flavor of the second egg was judged against the first as being much better, slightly better, the same, slightly worse or much worse.

The results? Eggs that had been in storage for 49 days were considered just as fresh as the ones in storage for 2 days. Only 3 to 4 per cent of the eggs in each storage group were considered to be poor or very poor in flavor.

The egg industry also was interested in the cooking preferences expressed by those participating in the egg tests. Twenty-eight per cent of the consumers preferred fried eggs; 25 per cent, scrambled; 19 per cent, soft-boiled; 14 per cent, poached; 9 per cent, hard-boiled, and 5 per cent, no preference.

Dear Abby In Dutch With Pen Pal

By Abigail Van Buren
DEAR ABBY: I have a pen pal in Holland. We have been writing to each other for three years. I enjoyed learning about his way of life and his country and he enjoyed learning about mine.

I am engaged to a man who doesn't approve of my having this pen pal after we are married. He doesn't give any reason except that he just doesn't want me writing to another man.

Should I do as my future husband says and give up my pen pal or should I refuse?—PEN PAL

DEAR PEN PAL: Whether your future husband is "silky" in his objections is beside the point. Good marriages are made of little sacrifices for the sake of harmony. So give up this pen pal in Holland if it will get you in Dutch.

DEAR ABBY: For 17 years I have lived with this terrible secret. My mother died when I was born and I was carted around from relative to relative. Nobody wants me. Nobody loved me. When I grew to womanhood I gave myself to many men. I mistook their desire for love.

Finally I met a good man who really loved me. I never told him about my past. He married me and gave me a good name. We had four children. Our first baby was born terribly deformed. I knew it was God's way of punishing me for my past sins. Should I confess to my wonderful husband, who treats me like a queen, that

I know the reason for our crippled child?—TORMENTED WIFE

DEAR WIFE: God does not "punish" mothers by sending them imperfect children. Sainly mothers frequently bear "deformed" babies, and many perfect babies are born of wicked mothers.

The bride, who chose a silk organza and Chantilly lace wedding gown with chapel train, carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis, gardenias and white orchids.

Brunches Announced

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Horse, Cattle Man 'Rides' Kitchen Range

The first in a series of brunches sponsored by Ebelle will begin this Wednesday at the Ebelle clubhouse.

Mrs. Jerome Brockman, chairman and her Group J committee will serve from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Bridge and canasta will be played in the afternoon.

Mrs. Sadie Tippet and Mrs. A. P. Howard are in charge of reservations.

Birthday Party

Belmont Shore Chapter 589, Order of Eastern Star, will have a birthday party at its meeting Wednesday in Belmont Shore Masonic Temple. Phyllis Bostwick will be chairman. The chapter will be dark July 27.

The nickname speaks for itself—this is J. W. "Curley" Burr, today's Chef of the Week.

Born in Manhattan, Kan., Burr came to North Hollywood in 1934, and Long Beach in '35. His close proximity to the native naturalness of the Kansas prairies, cattle and horses, made him instinctively gravitate into the meat business. His first affiliation was with a large packing plant in Kansas, then in Los Angeles. In 1938 he and his brother, Dale, went into wholesale meats, supplying restaurants and hotels.

PEARL HARBOR shook him up completely, so he hustled right out and enlisted. He landed in the Navy, and contrary to business precedent, in the commissary department. He made chief in 1943, and received his discharge in '45. And guess what! It may sound like a broken record but he went into the meat business. In 1942 he married and ever since his wife, Nellie, has gone right along with his varied interests.

The Burrs live in the country (Los Alamitos) where his hobby is raising and racing quarter horses. Theirs was the second leading stable in the nation last year, with 12 head of quarter horses on the track. All told, the ranch boasts 20 horses and two dogs.

HE'S A BIG hunter of small game, and he devotes a month of every year to his home state, Kansas, while the pheasant and quail are up-and-at-'em.

Quite naturally, Burr is a member, and a past president, of the Long Beach Mounted Police. He has belonged to Elks Lodge 888 since 1940, and is active in the Knights of Columbus. The Chamber of Commerce and the Long Beach Business Men's Assn. claim part of his time, also.

Now that we've devoted this article to his cattle and horses, Burr comes up cooking a leg of lamb. Here's his recipe for barbecue sauce.

Barbecue Sauce for Lamb
1/2 cup water
1/4 cup vinegar
2 tablespoons sugar
1 1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
1 tablespoon dry mustard
1 small onion, minced
1 large slice of lemon
1 tablespoon butter
Simmer 20 minutes, then add:
1/2 cup catsup
2 tablespoons Worcester-shire
1 1/2 tsp. liquid smoke.
Baste lamb with sauce, allowing 30 to 35 minutes per pound for roasting.

MOLLY MAYFIELD

Wife's Mustache Must Go

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD: It isn't that I don't love my wife, because I do. But there are several things that irritate me to the point of no return. And yet if I mention them, she flies into a fury.

Trusting she can't turn on you with eyes blazing, I thought I'd let you suggest to Peggy that she do something about the little mustache (it's not terribly noticeable, but in bright daylight does show up), and that she pay more attention to that slip which is always just barely showing.

Also, as long as we're at it, ask her, for heaven's sake, to stop poking at the toothpaste tube in all directions. Why not roll it neatly from the bottom?

Also, what about cleaning my razor after she has used it—or better yet, getting one of her own.

Amen.—FATHER.

DEAR FATHER:

Why not buy a tube of toothpaste of your own? And buy her a razor? And maybe some new slips that are shorter? (Every woman can use a couple of new slips, you know.)

As for the little mustache, Well, Peggy, how about it? —M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD: In our office is a woman with a rule-or-ruin attitude. While she is efficient and capable in her work and really needed by the company, she is also officious, loud, determined and a thorough buttinsky. It may sound silly, but I've conceived a violent dislike for her and I simply can't get her off my mind.

Every time she walks by my nerves go gr-r-r-r! I get along with everyone else but this one particular person.

How can I talk myself out of this feeling?

—FILE CLERK.

DEAR FILE CLERK:

I don't think you can talk yourself out of this one. You are literally going to have to THINK yourself free of this prejudice. And the best way to do this is to get to know the girl better.

Try to see her oftener, talk to her more and generally get to understand her better. Nine times out of 10, antagonism can be erased in this way. Try it and see. —M.M.

Oswald Jacoby Singletons Not in Bid

I am going to finish up this series of Blackwood hands with an interesting example of how the convention almost went wrong.

The game was match point duplicate and after South had located one ace and two kings by means of Blackwood he counted 13 top tricks. Seven hearts and two in each of the other suits. Hence, he bid the grand slam in no-trump to get that extra 10 points.

Unfortunately for South he had failed to allow for one thing. A singleton ace opposite a singleton king will produce only one trick, so when the dummy hit the table South saw that his 13 tricks had become only 12.

IF SOUTH had contented himself with a seven heart bid he would have had an excellent play for that contract. All he would have to do would be to establish dummy's fifth diamond.

At seven no-trump things looked bad indeed. However, there were two chances. The queen of diamonds might drop on two leads or there would be a squeeze if the queen of diamonds and the long spade were in the same hand.

The squeeze worked. South simply ran off all his hearts. He discarded two diamonds and two spades from dummy and the last heart squeezed East out of his spade protection.

Now South cashed the ace of diamonds; went over to dummy with the king of spades; discarded one spade on the king of diamonds and then found that the rest of his own spades were good.

Old West Distorted

By DOUGLAS DILTZ

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Movie and television audiences have been "hood-winked" about the Old West and have a greatly distorted impression of what it was really like, claims an authority on the subject.

"The contemporary western takes true characters in history and proceeds to Hollywoodize them," said veteran writer Sam Peeples, one of the country's leading authorities on the Old West.

Peeples, who scribes the "Overland Trail" series on NBC-TV, said that almost everybody has the wrong impression about western life. This is due, he said, to the fact that movies and TV have contrived too much and have warped the facts.

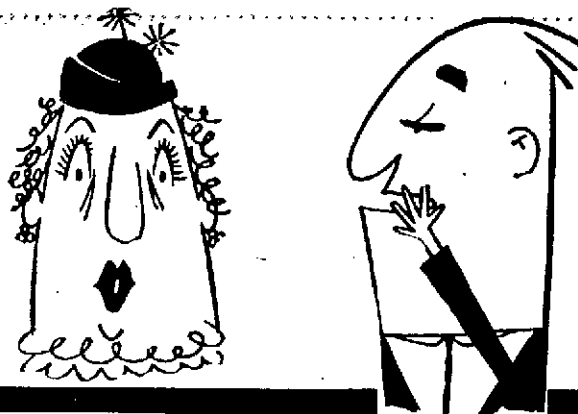

THE WRITER of some 20 hard-cover western novels sets his sights on what is probably the biggest misconception of all.

"For one thing," he noted, "I don't know of a single instance where two fast gunfighters stepped out into the street—as strangers—and shot it out."

THE WRITER goes on to say that as another example, he knows of no bounty hunters, as such, in the Old West.

As for the fastest gun in the West, Peeples said it was an outlaw and not a lawman, as audiences are led to believe.

"The real gunfighter and the man reputed to be so fast on the draw that his movements were unbelievable, was John Wesley Hadden. He named 41 men he killed in gunfights and told of waking up screaming because he was haunted in his sleep by their faces."

ALL-STAR BASEBALL at 11:45 a.m. on channel 4. Dodgers Manager Walter Alston pilots the National League. The manager for the American League is Al Lopez of the Chicago White Sox. The game is in Kansas City's Municipal Stadium. The second game, on Wednesday, will be in New York.

Bert's Eye View

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

Automation has thrown its hat into the televised political ring.

This week's TV coverage of the Democratic National Convention will employ more than a hundred million dollars' worth of electronic gadgets, gimmicks and gismos.

American Broadcasting Company cameramen will roam the floors with "Creppy-Peepies." They're not a new kind of breakfast cereal.

What they add up to are mobile miniature television broadcasting stations. Each, operated by battery and transistor, consists of a camera and transmitting units.

And you can take them lightly. They weigh only 16 pounds each.

THE NATIONAL BROADCASTING COMPANY will use a "VIP Train" to transport political figures to floor cameras or studios in the Sports Arena.

The train will consist of an electric towing tractor and three cars.

There are cameras that peek around corners and lenses that turn shadows into sunlight.

But the most important new development this convention is video tape, according to Paul Levitan, news director for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

"IN 1956, WE MIGHT HAVE BEEN DOWN on the convention floor with an important, half-hour speech," he said. Ten minutes after the speech started, perhaps one of our newsmen would contact us and say he had cornered a delegate who knew about a secret vote switch.

"What could we do? It would have been grossly wrong to cut away from the speech.

"We would need to ask our newsmen to try and hold the delegate until the speech was over.

"In the meantime, two other newsmen might contact us with equally good leads."

Levitan's point was that, with video-tape, the speaker could speak, the delegate could tell his secret and the other two newsmen could cover their equally good leads at the same time.

With video-tape, each "scoop" could be presented slap-bang pronto any time following the speech. They'd have each scoop, not on film which required extensive processing, but on instant video tape.

SOME OF THE CONVENTION'S GIMMICKS will not be electronic. David Brinkley, NBC, claims that many of the "spontaneous" ovations for a candidate will be performances by hired Hollywood unemployed actors.

ABC, which will use enough equipment to outfit 10 complete television studios, has also provided an ionized rest haven for dignitaries.

That's right—ionized.
Frank Marx, vice president in charge of engineering, had the ionized room created after reading medical reports. He learned that negative ionizations stimulates a sense of exhilaration. It contributes to clearer thinking and more positive attitude.

Just why Marx would want the politics to sound more positive than they already do is not made clear.

THE IONIZED ROOM also has an oxygen bar. Politicians stale from smoke-filled caucuses can step up to the bar and order a couple of oxygen whiffs—on the house.

Marx decided on the oxygen after reading how it helped U. S. hockey players prior to the finals during the Olympic Games.

"If it peps up athletes, why not politicians?" he reasoned. NBC has developed an electronic push-button editor which will enable them to almost instantly decide which of 32 cameras' footage should be shown right away or later.

ABC has a pilot-stick lever with which they can move an inset picture to any position on the screen.

CBS has taken special precautions regarding one human factor, lodging for some 300 newsmen and support personnel. Albert Bryant, director of office services, said:

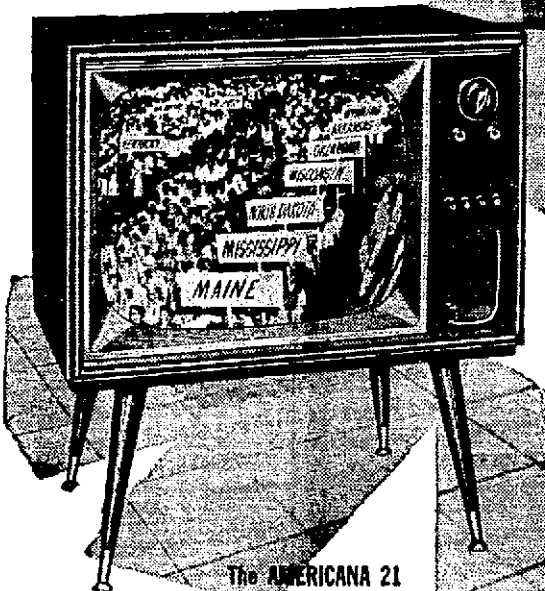

"This year we don't want another Pat Watkins to arrive at the hotel to discover that SHE has been billeted with a group of male video engineers."

Parks Parka for Sex Appeal Role

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Success of "The Untouchables" has inspired another television show based on the roaring 20s.

In fact, that's the title—"The Roaring 20s."

Why the 20s roared more than any other decade has not been determined. But unlike "The Untouchables," which roars with gunfire, the new one roars with sex.

Providing the sex appeal is

"The repairman can't come to night—I guess we'll have to go to the movies!"

Dorothy Provine, who formerly starred in the now defunct "The Alaskans" series.

"MY ROLE IS every actresses' dream come true," she said between takes at Warner Brothers studios. "I sing, dance and wear the most fabulous wardrobe you've ever seen."

"All my dresses are beaded, spangled and tassled. One gown cost $1,800 for a single dance sequence."

Dorothy, a pert blonde with mischief in her eyes, plays a flapper in a New York speak-easy when bootleg liquor and gangsters were in style.

CO-STARRING with Dorothy are Donald May and Rex Reason who play a pair of daring newspaper reporters.

Dorothy fired up a cigarette in a foot-long, bejeweled holder, explaining it was part of her costume.

To get a feeling of the manners and morals of the 20s, the pixie-faced actress studied five or six movies a week—all of them based on the era.

"I went to the public library to read the papers and magazines of the 20s," she said. "The fashions were out of this world."

"I'VE BECOME a real nut

on the 20s. Right now I'm looking for a Stutz Bearcat or some other ancient car to ride around in. It will be good for the series, and me, too."

Will Dorothy play the same free-wheeling, raucous voiced character of "Rocky" that she portrayed in "The Alaskans?"

"Absolutely not," Dorothy cried.

"My name is 'Pinky' in the new show, and I've even changed the way I sing. My voice is softer and sexier, and instead of singing those old-fashioned frontier songs, I sing ballads and torch songs."

"The dances are a lot of fun—the Charleston and the Black Bottom give me plenty of opportunity to work off excess energy."

"Any way you look at it, 'The Roaring 20s' is a big improvement over wearing boots and a parka in the old series."

LET'S GO FISHING with Tom Malone on 9 at 8 p.m.Executive Approves
Summer Television

By BERNARD GAVZER

NEW YORK (AP)—Sounding off about boring TV shows and tasteless commercials is almost a national pastime, particularly in these dog days of reruns and reruns.

So let's hear from a man on the inside—who has been in TV as an executive of a network, a client and now in a high position with an advertising agency. (Since he was letting his hair down, which is hard to do with a crewcut, he'll be nameless.)

"FOR THE 13 WEEKS of summer, we know that the sets in use are down about 40 per cent. How can you possibly expect a sponsor to spend $100,000 on a show that loses that much of its audience? The audience shrinks because of the long daylight hours, outdoor activity, vacationing, pleasant weather and so on—not because of reruns," he says.

What about the slamming shows get from TV critics? Does this reduce the audience for a series that gets bad notices at its debut?

"I THINK THE WHOLE area of the reviewers (he won't call them critics) is really suspect. In the first place, some of them don't have the background and are simply reporters who get assigned to do the TV reviewing. In the second place, from some reviews I've seen, I suspect that the person writing about the show never saw it."

As for the vanishing live show and the equally rare live drama, he says:

"They did not as a general rule do as well as comedy and adventure. Clients wanted comedy and adventure."

"PEOPLE WOULD RATHER laugh than anything," he says.

Commercials—that is, network commercials—are at a higher level than ever, he insists, although he sides with viewers who find "the personal products advertising especially tasteless."

The really poor commercials, he says, are the products of local stations and are hard-sell ones "sponsored by used car dealers and such."

He concludes:

"TV is better than the public thinks it is and we who are responsible think it can be better than it is."

New Idea for Old Films

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK (UPI) — After some 35 years of hitting all of the high spots and a few of the low ones in show business as related to the dispensing of comedy, Ken Murray is as surprised as anyone else that he has come up with something "new."

Not, of course, new in the absolute sense (what is?), but new in application and with a twist that is unique with the case, it probably would bore everyone else. So I brought this film along and sold Paar and his producer on the idea of doing a sequence of the old films with some comment by myself.

"I WAS ASTOUNDED at the audience reaction. It was one long laugh. Why, this should be good for any number of short spots or even as the nucleus for some spectaculars."

The whole thing stems from a Murray hobby of long standing. He's a nut about collecting film, much of which he shoots himself, although he is not above buying up old newsreels and other footage when he runs across something that strikes his fancy.

Murray. The comedian has gone back home to Hollywood to work on the idea after testing it successfully in New York.

"THE USE OF some old film clips on Jack Paar's NBC show started out simply as my idea of how to make a guest appearance a little novel," the comedy star said. "Frankly, I was on the program to plug my new book, 'Life On A Pogo Stick,' which tells how I got this way. I didn't want just to sit there and be interviewed or do a comedy routine.

"I figured watching something like that would bore me, and that, since that were

Political Wagon Train Peoples Choice TV?

By FRED DANZIG

(United Press International)

The two political conventions will knock at least 162 night-time TV shows off the air in the weeks ahead.

While this is all right with me, experience has shown that such wholesale pre-emptions invariably anger a portion of the electorate. Not everyone is happy when, say, Maynard Krebs is pre-empted by Thurston Morton, or Ozzie Nelson is bumped by Paul Butler.

Therefore, I advise the successful nominees to put together an acceptance speech that registers, above all, a deep awareness of the hardships created by the TV schedule changes for some dial-twisters.

These speeches might sound like this:

★ ★ ★ "MY FELLOW VIEWERS:

"To Tell the Truth, as I Face the Nation tonight and prepare to Meet the Press tomorrow, I am humbled by the thought that the Man and the Challenge are now cast together for some fateful adventures in paradise.

"As I embark on this political Tightrope, I promise that my campaign wagon train will visit every Video Village, from 77 Sunset Strip to 21 Beacon Street, from the Bourbon Street Beat to the Alaskans. We'll travel the station breaks full circle, by Riverboat or Whirlybird, and be seen by Hawaiian Eyes and other Americans of all ages, be they December Brides or the Romper Room Set. My Person-to-Person Bold Journey travels the High Road and we are Ruff and Reddy to give all issues an Open Hearing.

"WHILE IT IS TRUE that People Are Funny, Maverick-like voters, I am confident that in November, after my Day in Court, you will Play Your Hunch when asked, 'Who Do You Trust?' Your ballot Bonanza will make me the triumphant, happy candidate.

"What's My Line? Simply this: I will not lead this nation into the Twilight Zone. We will not tremble in a moment of fear. As we Search for Tomorrow, we can be sure that our 20th Century Progress remains Untouchable, and characterized by Open End opportunities for all.

"When you step behind closed doors next November, remember that it is your Reckoning that can make me the People's Choice. Am I to be America's Mr. Lucky? Is the Life of Riley to be ours? Or is your sweet Music for a Summer night merely a dirge-filled dance party that sends me, politically, into Tombstone Territory next fall? The Verdict Is Yours."

Wonderful,"

'Daniel Boone' May Match 'Davy Crockett'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Walt Disney has dipped into American history again to come up with a hero to match his great success with Davy Crockett. This time it's Daniel Boone.

With characteristic thoroughness, Disney has researched the life and times of the great wilderness pioneer, who will come out a flesh and blood character instead of the legend of history books.

DEWEY MARTIN

Dan'll will join the line-up of heroes on the Walt Disney Presents TV'er next season, along with Texas John Slaughter, the Swamp Fox and Zorro. To play Boone, the producer hired an actor he has long admired—Dewey Martin.

"I've been trying to get Dewey to work for me for a long time," Walt explained. "But he didn't want to get tied down to a contract. The Boone deal appealed to him because he isn't stuck in a series."

"The role was what did it," said Dewey. "This is the best character I've had to play since 'The Big Sky'."

DEWEY IS COMPACTLY built and may not fit the usual conception of Boone. "But I've done a lot of reading about him," the actor said, "and I found out he was exactly my height and build."

The only difference is that Boone may be the impetus that Dewey needs to get him into the winner's circle. A top-flight actor who reminds you of John Garfield, he has never reached his potentiality during his dozen years in Hollywood.

"My best break was 'The Big Sky,'" he recalled. "I got lots of offers after that. But I was tied up to Howard Hawks, and he took off for Europe. For 18 months, I waited for him to do something with me, but he never did. By the time I got free, it was too late."

Dewey is faced with a dilemma in the Daniel Boone TV films. He naturally wants them to be successful, but not to produce the kind of tidal wave that engulfed Fess Parker.

"The good thing about it is that Disney doesn't believe in sequels. That's why he never did a series on Crockett. We'll just make four or six stories and that will be that."

'Magoo' Sees Politicians

Leaders at the Democratic Nominating Convention will be eyed three days this week by a man who can't tell the difference between a horseshoe and a barrel hoop.

"Mr. Magoo" has been signed by CBS, channel 2, to conduct an "after-hours" convention show on Monday through Thursday between 9 and 10 p.m. The near-sighted cartoon character is sure to take a dim view of the whole proceedings.

HE IS EXPECTED to be in good voice, that of comedian Jim Backus, the man behind the myoptic-sighted Mr. Magoo's vocal chords.

The program is called "Caucus With Backus" and Ken-

'Greatest TV Show' on Earth Starts

TOWER rising 80 feet will provide 12 micro-wave systems for television coverage by KABC of Democratic Nominating Convention at Sports Arena. How it works is explained by newsman Ed Fleming to Peggy McLaughlin, Democratic Convention hostess.

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

An estimated 125 million Americans are expected this week to watch Part One of "The Greatest TV Show on Earth."

No one is quite sure how the nominating cards will fall at the Democratic National Convention but almost everyone wants to see them dealt.

The second part of the two-ring political circus will be presented the week of July 24 when the Republicans take the nominating stage.

FOR VETERAN TV and radio commentators, it is the unexpected that lends zest to memories of previous conventions.

Bill Leonard, CBS, recalls cornering Republican delegate Terry Carpenter of Nebraska at the 1956 Republican Convention. The Nebraska delegate had just thrown the convention into an uproar by nominating "Joe Smith for Vice President."

Leonard learned there was no "Joe Smith" and that Carpenter simply had wanted access to the speaker's platform to urge an open convention.

RAY SCHERER, NBC, laughingly remembers Senor Romani of Puerto Rico at the Republican Convention in 1952. The senor insisted that the three-man delegation from Puerto Rico be polled.

David Brinkley, NBC, never will forget the 1956 Democratic Convention. Sen. John F. Kennedy was in the bathtub in his hotel room when he heard the news that he was getting votes for nomination as Vice President.

"He came out to the television set with a towel wrapped around himself to watch and see what happened," said Brinkley. "By the time he got himself dried off, Kefauver had beaten him."

ADLAI STEVENSON'S arrival at the 1952 Democratic convention brought a problem for Paul Levitan, CBS. The problem—where to put the camera to catch the arrival—was solved when Levitan received permission from a Chicago Stockyard Inn occupant to put the TV eye there.

"From the window in that corner room, we had a perfect view of Stevenson," said Levitan. "When I turned around to see what the occupant of the room was doing, he was watching Stevenson on television."

WILLIAM R. McANDREW, NBC, remembers when the network was past time for a station break during the 1956 Democratic convention. He sent word to House Speaker Sam Rayburn asking for a brief respite.

Rayburn muttered:

"Those dadgum 'tube' people—always trying to hold up the works."

But he "held up the works" for the station break.

Other memories:

In 1952, pigeons invaded the Democratic convention and one sat down next to Mrs. Harry S. Truman.

Bill Henry, NBC, called off the names of 67 persons who consecutively congratulated Dwight D. Eisenhower after his nomination in 1952.

A New York actor named Irving Fisher, threw Republican hotel headquarters into confusion in 1956. Fisher, who had portrayed Harry S. Truman in the Broadway hit, "Call Me Madam," came for a visit—in his Truman make-up.

OUR COVER

Lawrence B. Smith, painter of "Little Girl in a Gallery"—one of two dozen living pictures to be presented at this year's Pageant of the Masters at Laguna Beach — probably was expressing his own bewilderment through the little lassie when he made his visit to a modern art gallery. The little fourth-grader is doing her best to understand. She may be the same little lady who ventured into the gallery with her mother and stared incredulously at the modern artist's effort which hung on the wall. "What is it, Mommy?" she finally asked. "It's supposed to be a horse," replied Mommy. To which the small, mystified one quickly asked, "Well, then, why isn't it?" More about Laguna's Festival of Arts and Pageant of the Masters on Page 9.

NEXT WEEK

Three-quarters of a century ago, the acme of social acceptance for man was to be selected as a member in good standing of his community's volunteer fire brigade. Today, volunteer firemen would seem to be a thing of the past—almost. Southland magazine found some volunteer firemen—and very capable ones, at that—in Palos Verdes. Next week, we'll tell you how they operate in these modern times.

La Reina Rule

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like the background of LEIB. H. L., H. A., B. L., Long Beach.

H. L., H. A., B. L.: LEIB: This ancient German surname is rooted in the Old High German word "Lib" meaning "life." Personalized in this early given-name, it described "Lively, animated one." Descendants of the original ancestor baptized Leib handed his complimentary cognomen down through the centuries. Although the Leibs were among German nobility, I have not been able to find their coat-of-arms at this time.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you give the origin of SQUIRE and SQUIRES and explain their shield, an elephant head with a coronet around the neck. H. A., MRS. L., Long Beach.

H. A., Mrs. L.: SQUIRE is derived from the old English root word "Squier" meaning "shield bearer for a knight-at-arms." SQUIRES, with the added "S" is for "Son of Squier." Remote records of late 13th century Cambridge list John Le Squier, an ancestor. The Squire coat-of-arms, held by family branches in Essex and London, has a silver chevron between three silver swan heads on a black shield. The Squire crest at the top of this shield is composed of an elephant head with a ducal coronet around its neck. The elephant head symbolized wisdom and courage. The ducal (Duke's) coronet around its neck indicates that the forebears were in the military service of a duke.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please publish data on MOLINE, possibly formerly MOLYNEAUX. A. L., Long Beach.

A. L.: MOLINE, a French surname, represents a medieval "Molinier" or "miller." MOLYNEAUX is a dialect spelling of Molinier. Several old French towns are called Moline, or "place of the mill." The Moline coat-of-arms has a golden watermill wheel centered on a blue shield. The Molyneux lineage shield has a golden cross-moline on an identical blue shield. The cross-moline has the end of each arm flared into two curving points.

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly give brief genealogy on HIGH-TOWER. MRS. J. H., Wilmington; A. W., Long Beach; M. H., Garden Grove.

J. H., A. W., M. H.: HIGH-TOWER goes back a thousand years to this family's English home, landmarked throughout (Continued on Page 18)

Beauty Discovers It's in a Tight Spot!

Three of the belles in "Bells Are Ringing" are real "stand-up gals"—they wear gowns in which they can't sit. From left, Sandy Warner, Valerie Allen and Nancy Walker.

HOLLYWOOD GLAMOUR gets caught in a squeeze play when a bevy of beauties find themselves in such a tight spot.

The gals who appear with stars Judy Holliday and Dean Martin in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's upcoming "Bells Are Ringing," screen version of the Broadway musical just can't sit down.

The reason: Fashion designer Walter Plunkett had them figure-hugged in the form fittingest, gossamer flimsiest gowns seen on the CinemaScope and color screen.

THERE'S VALERIE AL-

LEN, dimple-chinned daughter of a former Ziegfeld Girl, who is being tagged as "Tomorrow's Ava Gardner." In "Bells Are Ringing" she undulates in a nude soufflé gown that stirs the imagination but leaves little to it.

10 Little Dollars and How They Grew!

By Robert Hazelleaf

WITH THE thought in mind, "It takes money to make money," hundreds of investment clubs have sprung up across the country. There are dozens of them in the Southland, the majority learning to "play the market."

Generally, 15 or so persons get together, decide how much per week they want to invest, then hold meetings to plan where the money is going—what and when to buy, when to sell, and what to do with the profits, if any.

That's the way Quatra Corp. began five years ago. Today, it bears little resemblance to the ordinary investment group. Instead, it's an organization of diversified men putting their money into diversified and interesting ventures.

THEIR WEEKLY investment is a bit higher than that of most clubs, but the 25 Long Beach area men in Quatra settled on $10 a week. Simple arithmetic shows a group total of $13,000 annually.

That, of course, is a prime secret of success. Ten dollars a week invested by individuals wouldn't have much significance. The larger sum has definite possibilities.

Harry Cohn, a charter member, explains, "We decided the $10 would be throw-away money, money we could afford to lose. Actually, it's no more than a lot of men spend on bowling, penny ante or other pursuits. Quatra has simply become our hobby."

Before readers become confused by the name, the corporation members are the first to admit they don't know what, exactly, it means. At an early meeting, someone suggested it might be Latin for "twenty-five." Then, they have learned since, it might not. But "Quatra" has a nice, intriguing sound and piques the curiosity, so the name has stuck.

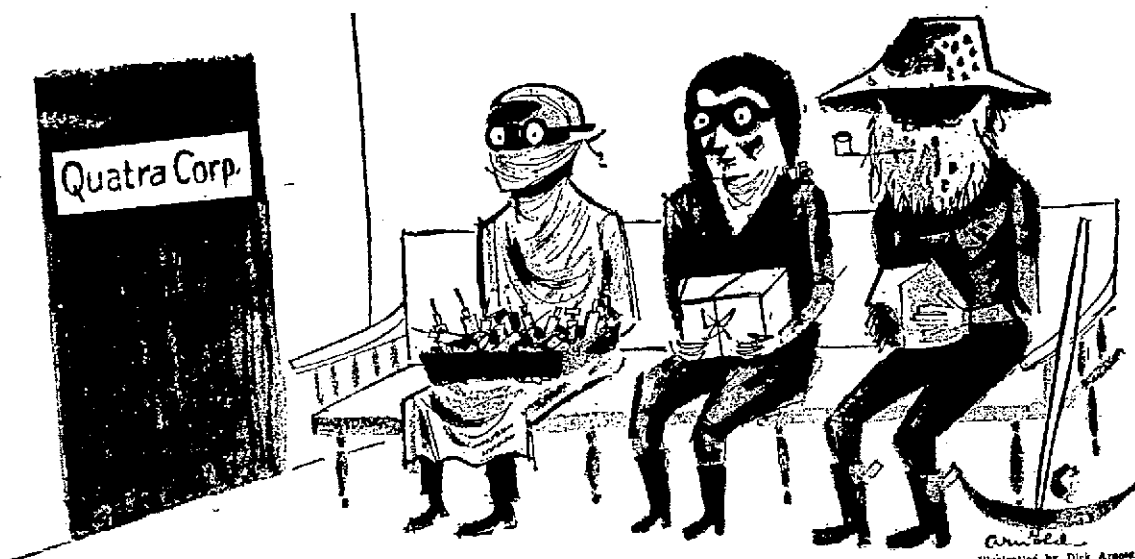

THE MEN began, as most investment clubs do, by dabbling in the stock market. Those days, following incorporation, are long since gone. Today, only 5 per cent of their funds are in stocks. The rest is invested in some rather imaginative fields.

Port Holiday, for one, is a super de luxe marina and beach club on Nevada's Lake Mead, within easy commuting distance of Las Vegas. The location is one of the very few parcels of privately owned land on the 5,000-mile shoreline, and will be designed as a place for family fun. "This is the kind of investment we like," the members say, "because it's going to be a fine, permanent facility anyone can be proud of."

Another investment, to show the group's diversity, is a nickel-in-the-slot auto-driving game for arcades and other public places. And while on the subject of mechanical items, how about funds advanced to a micrometer manufacturer?

THEN THERE are first and second trust deeds. With the help of Burt Smith, a real estate broker in Quatra, the club acts as direct investor, rather than buying discounted notes. Along with these loans, the group keeps a sharp eye out for additions to their real estate holdings.

Apparently the club, through trust deeds and land, might seem prosaic. To offset this, Quatra, at one time, owned "pieces" of top Broadway plays, including "Most Happy Fel-Quatra Corp. invests in many things . . . Broadway play, marina, even a quicksilver deal.

la," "The Lark," and "A View From the Bridge."

As one member says, "We didn't make much money, but think of the glamour!"

Current president of the club is Dr. Paul Hartstein, a charter member. Though 20 of the 25 original members are still in Quatra, their enthusiasm runs every bit as high as it did on their first meeting.

"THE MORE diversified our investments become, the more interested we become," Dr. Hartstein says. "Actually, the education we've received has been worth the $10 weekly we've put in."

The opportunity to learn can well be an incentive to all investment clubs. As with Quatra, members of other clubs can get an education in finance, learning by doing. They can acquaint themselves with many of the pitfalls that may beset investors, what precautions should be taken when extending credit to new ventures. And, of course, they can make money.

Jim Barnett, an advertising man-turned-merchant, stresses that "Quatra is happy to assist other clubs in organizing, besides being on the lookout for new investments. We can help both investors and men with ideas."

ENGINEER MEL STONE adds, "We've tried to keep our group representative of several businesses and professions. Among us are an attorney, two certified public accountants, another engineer, a physician, a veterinarian, and, somehow, three dentists."

The club's policy manual states that Quatra will strive for "maximum diversity with amicability, ability to attend meetings, and a reasonably narrow range of age and income to promote unanimity of interest."

Since paid-in capital has reached about $60,000 and book value is in six figures, Quatra doesn't throw money around.

SUPPOSE, for example, a company needs funds to finance a shopping center in Arizona. If Quatra is interested, a committee is appointed to "wring it out." The attorney will determine legal points. An accountant will examine financial standing and fiscal policies. The realtor will examine growth potential. The ex-adman will consider promotional possibilities.

If the committee reports favorably, the idea will be turned over to the 25-man club for a vote.

"A quorum is 13 men," Dr. Max Gatov explains, "so we always have a majority in attendance. But our average is much better than that. In (Continued on Page 25) trek was the finding of a weather-beaten golf tee right on the summit—it looked as though "Ike" had already been there!" Mrs. Verwoerd muses with a twinkle in her eye.

THE WAY TO THE SUMMIT was rough and jagged and as she ascended, some of the oldest rock formations in the Canadian Rockies crumbled beneath her grasp. Fortunately, this Canadian-born climber had been groomed for just such a precarious situation; as a child she lived in Prince Rupert, B. C., which is in a veritable "sea of mountains," and there learning mountain climbing was a necessity.

On the climb up Mt. Eisenhower, the slender hiker's breathing became labored under the strain of carrying the unusually heavy load in the high altitude. The equipment included cameras (as she is a scenic and wildlife photographer), the time capsule, a hammer, rock drill, some sand, cement, and water for burying the capsule in the rock. As the air got thinner and the going got tougher, the thought of turning back never occurred to her because she had a mission to accomplish, and the will to succeed.

She says, "I just told myself to calm down and breathe deeply. That seemed to do the trick because my breathing became more normal again and we went all the way to the top!"

THE PROPER way to breathe is all-important to the marathon swimmer, too, Greta Anderson agrees, and that is one of the first things she teaches the pupils at her new swim school in Los Alamitos. She has ventured all over the world in quest of new distances to swim and records to break. The Olympic champion is the English Channel record holder, and the only person who has attempted and accomplished the 42-mile double crossing between Catalina Island and the Southern California mainland. "This swim," says Miss Anderson, "has been my most challenging."

The preparation for this great "challenge" began when she first learned to swim in her native Copenhagen at 15. "Only a strong-willed person can be a successful marathon swimmer," she believes. "Each successive distance swim builds up the mind, as well as the body, for the next and longer distance. One of the biggest problems on these swims is boredom. I think anyone doing the same thing for more than 26 consecutive hours would get tired of it—no matter what!"

"It was after 23 hours in the water that I began to get a little discouraged, and feel sorry for myself," she confesses. "Cold and tired, it dawned on me that I, alone, had gotten myself into this situation, and that I alone must get out of it. So, with the help of God, I kept going, and three hours and 53 minutes later reached the Catalina shore."

REACHING UP INTO the "wild blue yonder" for her adventure is localite Barbara London. Control towers all across the United States "clear the airplanes" when she and her fellow Powder Puff Derby fliers take to the skies! As board member and executive secretary for this annual All-Women's Transcontinental Air Race, Mrs. London has flown in the race 11 times since it started in 1949. She says, "Just getting the feminine entrants, who range in age from 16 to 66, organized and off the ground is a project in itself."

A native of the state of Washington, the stately dark-eyed brunette took up flying while attending Washington State University in 1939. She holds the rank of major in the Army Air Force Reserve, and during the war flew planes for the Ferry Command.

"I WAS FLYING an open cockpit trainer plane, and it was snowing hard. As the toy towns slipped below nothing looked natural—everything was white, and all the towns began to look alike. It was very cold, and difficult to hold a map on my lap with the wind blowing so hard," she recalled.

"Suddenly, I realized I must be far south of course, blown by the wind and completely off the map. By reversing the course and heading due north, I managed to get back on course; still cold, but more alert from then on."

While following her true course in her "search for adventure," each of these members of the fairer sex has found a formula for successfully weathering times of stress. Whether on the land, in the sea, or in the air, the formula is, "keep calm, keep going, and keep your trust in God."

Olympic Swim champion Greta Anderson has swum Catalina Channel both ways.

THE FIRST astronauts to land on the moon will undoubtedly be male, but that doesn't mean that the masculine sex has a monopoly on adventure. Several Long Beach females will attest to this because they not only love excitement but they search the land, the sea, and the air to find it.

A woman who has searched the land for adventure, and went 9,390 feet high to find it, is Agnes Verwoerd. On Aug. 28, 1957, she and her husband, Jacob, made the rugged climb to the top-most peak of Mt. Eisenhower, Banff National Park, Alberta, Canada, to bury a "time capsule."

"This 14-inch-long torpedo-shaped, red, white and blue capsule contained about 150 assorted microfilmed documents dealing with present-day and historical events and labeled 'not to be opened till 2057,'" says Mrs. Verwoerd. "We buried the capsule and then erected a cairn above it to honor President Eisenhower, for whom the mountain was renamed in 1946, as a pathfinder to world peace. The most amazing discovery of the mile-high

Agnes Verwoerd climbed 9,390 feet to the top of Canada's Mt. Eisenhower to plant a time capsule in honor of U. S. President as world peace seeker.

Pageant of the Masters rubs off on the youngsters of Laguna Beach

Junior Learns About Art

By Verner C. Beck

HOW SHOULD you go about getting the small fry interested in art? Do as it is done in Laguna Beach—thrust him against art every chance you get. First thing you know some of it has rubbed off on the youngster and he begins to cast a critical eye on whatever painting or drawing crosses his line of sight.

His comments may be unpolished, but they are original.

This method of becoming acquainted with art in early youth, according to the people who are responsible for success of Laguna's annual Festival of Arts and Pageant of the Masters, works every time. Old-timers in the Festival of Arts have seen babes in arms squirming about as a figure in a famous painting during the Pageant, and years later the same person, now in maturity, posing in another famous picture, and holding more still than originally.

There are many persons in the 1960 Pageant who have been in it for years, and they insist that as long as they remain in Laguna Beach they will continue to pose or be of help "back stage."

THE FESTIVAL of Arts and Pageant of the Masters realizes that without a living, virile love of art, Laguna Beach would become just another ordinary beach town. Which is why the organization gives the kids all the chance in the world to pose in living pictures, and to also win handsome cash scholarships if they meet certain standards in their high school art efforts.

In the past the Festival gave two $1,000 scholarships. Last June the organization gave one $2,000 scholarship, and next year will give two more $1,000 scholarships to local high school seniors. The board of directors has also made it possible to grant post-scholarships to Laguna graduates who are now attending art school and need financial assistance.

All of this encouragement is netting handsome results from the young fry. Competition for a spot on the Living Picture program is keen among the little boys and girls—they come faithfully to rehearsals, and also use gentle persuasion on papa and mama to pose in pictures so the whole family can come down to Irvine Bowl together.

THE PRODUCER appreciates entire-family participation because his cast for the summer program of 24 or 25 pictures calls for a crew of approximately 300 men, women and kids, including make-up experts, wardrobe workers, wig adjusters, dressers, posers and stage crew.

The cast members give their time—asking as a reward only the right to be in a picture and to participate in the cast dinner-party given annually at close of the Pageant.

Even as the Festival and Pageant develop the small fry are not forgotten. On the grounds and free, with all material, is a free-for-all art class open every afternoon in which the boys and girls may draw to their hearts' content. The finished (Continued on Page 22)

Charles McGee and Melannie York rehearse Cydney's "Delightful Promise."

Youngsters not only are important participants in the Pageant of the Masters. They also are interested in the Arts Festival, as is this tot surveying paintings on display.

Stevie King, who will pose in Norman Rockwell's "Enrollment Day," gets a few pointers on his role from Marybelle Tilt, Pageant make-up director.

Adults, of course, will get into the 24 tableaux to be presented. Nan Blair and Eric Soderstrom pose in Jean Honore Fragonard's "Love Letters."

Barbara Makes a Doll Dress

Without a pattern and without a design, a young girl with a wish to make a doll dress encounters plenty of obstacles, but Barbara Lee Riehl, 9, of 410 Harwood St., Orange, is not one to be frustrated. She sketches her own designs from observing current styles and trends in doll clothing in the stores. Then there is the problem of sewing—she can't use her mother's electric machine. But Grandma has an old-time machine that she can operate ... so, it's off to Grandma's she goes and sews. She cuts around the doll's slim torso with careful snips and threads the machine for the big deal. Sewing on the button also poses a bit of a problem, and then comes the fitting and the alterations. It's quite a big chore making a slenderizing dress for dolly, but it's a job well done, as you can see.

(Pictures and story idea by Edna Ward Hicks)

First Step: She gets the material and cuts the skirt—it'll be pencil-slim.

Now then, how to sew it? Why, surely! Off to Grandma's to use her machine.

Barbara now sews a fine straight seam, the pride and joy of all dressmakers!

Only by instinct does she sliver off the hemline—but the result is right.

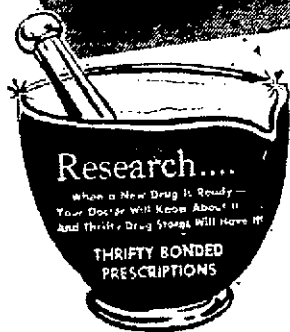

And now it is finished! Dolly will be pleased and Grandmother will be proud!

SOUTHLAND HOMES

Something Old, Something New

The 62-year-old remodeled Al Dragos home at 2310 Carroll Park South has been furnished to retain its old-fashioned charm and to allow for use of the best today has to offer.

By Stella George

ABOUT 62 YEARS ago a two-story frame house was built in the exclusive area of Long Beach now known as Carroll Park. Today the home still stands with all its former dignity plus a brand new face lift, and is the charming residence of Mr. and Mrs. Al Drago. It is located at 2310 Carroll Park South.

The original house was frame. Now white stucco, it retains all the fine lines of former days on the exterior, while the interior has been remodeled where necessary for modern living. The entry hall offers a true old-world welcome. To the right the wine-carpeted stairway leads to the first landing. Directly ahead a 60-year-old white wrought iron table stands beneath a handsome mirror. The hall leads to the dining room and kitchen, and a doorway to the left leads into the living room.

WHEN THE HOUSE was built, what is now one large living room was two rooms: living room and dining room, with the fireplace (as once was the custom) in the latter. The present living room is furnished in such a way that it captures all its old-fashioned charm. A mahogany grand piano is in one corner. A green Victorian couch with matching chair, plus another chair upholstered in pale rose add to the authentic decor. On the practical side (as befits a home with small children) the marble top table is, in reality, a plastic design marble, highly durable as well as good looking. A TV set faces the couch. The fireplace is flanked by mahogany bookshelves and mantel. Subdued wallpaper in pink and gray tones seems to be "just right" in this "old-new" room.

The dining room, which was once a downstairs bedroom, is petite but delightfully and invitingly formal. A cherry dining room set is enhanced by cherry paneling. The rose and gray tones of the living room are carried out in the adjoining room with a paper of a different design.

Originally a frame structure (top photograph), the "face was lifted," done over in stucco. Old lines were kept.

Enclosed back yard is planned for children's play and adult entertainment. Floor is suitable for outside dancing.

THE KITCHEN in the Drago home is as new as it is old. A functional built-in breakfast unit takes up little space in one corner. The cuckoo clock on the brown plaid wall announces that it is noon in June in 1910, but the modern sink in the far corner is a 1960 unit in all its streamlined efficiency.

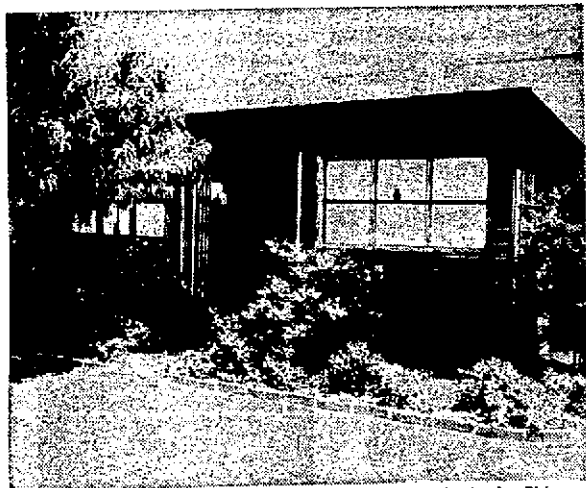

Upstairs are the master bedroom and two smaller bedrooms. Pink and blue flowered paper adorns the wall of the little girl's room, and future plans include a canopied bed with all the trimmings. The boy's room is more masculine, with grey paper and simple furnishings. The master bedroom with wide windows and gay, frilly curtains looks out upon the garden beyond.

The big back yard in the Drago home has lent itself well for decorative and functional purposes. Just outside the kitchen, there is a fence-enclosed patio with furniture and a floor suitable for dancing. Beyond, a garden is resplendent for children's play, with swing and other necessary equipment. In the rear of the yard the Dragos have built an enclosed rumpus room, complete with barbecue pit and other essentials for entertaining. Redwood on the outside, and cherry on the inside, the enclosure is perfect for company and family use.

THE PRESENT home is, in many respects, a far cry from the stately old residence which once stood on the lot. From the point of view of smooth, modern living, it has every necessary requirement; however, the 1898 slow-tempo atmosphere still prevails in subtle, interesting ways. The light fixture, for example, in the entry hall is extra wide in order to cover up the old time gas light outlet; ceilings are higher than in many modern dwellings; the stairway is reminiscent of a by-gone era.

The Drago home is truly one of our city's treasured heirlooms. Housing a happy family, as it has in the past for over half a century, it stands among a few others of its kind as a living reminder of old Long Beach as it was in the horse and buggy-dirt road days—up to date yet charmingly old.

Antique stove, believed to be one of 12 of the kind ever made, still works for the Thomas E. Carrs, 153 Argonne Ave.

By Helen L. Gillum

PLEASANT memories of fire flickering through isinglass windows, with winds wailing and snow drifting outside, are awakened by the parlor heating stove of about 1860 (pictured). The old stove now occupies a corner of a very modern playroom, where party hamburgers are cooked to perfection on its one-lid top. The Thomas E.
Carrs of 153 Argonne Ave., who own the oldtimer, also appreciate its rosy glow and old-fashioned warmth when chill winter mists drift in from nearby canals.

It was on Feb. 7, 1745, that the "Boston News Letter" carried an advertisement regarding the "New Fashion

Fireplaces or Stoves from Philadelphia." This paper also announced as "Just published, an account of the New - invented Pennsylvania Fireplaces."

Thus was introduced Benjamin Franklin's revolutionary contribution to the ages-old problem of heating the home. For, although crude stoves and furnaces in one form or another have been used for centuries (a well-preserved cast-iron cooking stove was found in the Han tombs of 220 A.D.), Franklin-type stoves have been the generally accepted kind in America since their inception 215 years ago. Carr's parlor heating stove is one example

Grandma Kept Warm

in the myriad step-by-step improvements developed by stovemakers and inventors since then.

FRANKLIN'S STOVE was actually a sort of cast-iron fireplace. It was designed to sit inside an already existing fireplace. It was supposed to save fuel while providing more heat than the conventional fireplace. An open fire still burned on an iron hearth, but certain features were combined to save fuel, increase heat, and eliminate smoke and drafts.

However, the sizes and shapes of the stoves differed considerably with the various fireplace openings. And, because Franklin never patented his idea, ironmongers and furnace-makers everywhere were soon making stoves of every conceivable kind.

Franklin neglected getting a patent on his stove because he felt that his idea should be shared with others.

THE CARRS' antique stove is in very good condition. They keep it black and shiny with much polish and "elbow grease." The stove is of the three-legged variety, popular in the 1800s but not too available now.

It has two sets of sliding doors on the front and a large fuel door opens at one end. The name "Alice" appears just above the upper set of doors. "Abendroth Brothers, New York," is lettered just below. The castings are unusually fine, and it is decorated with scrollwork in a conventional mid-Victorian design. It is said that only 12 of this particular stove were ever made.

The officer again turned to the bride and groom

By Ruth E. Riley

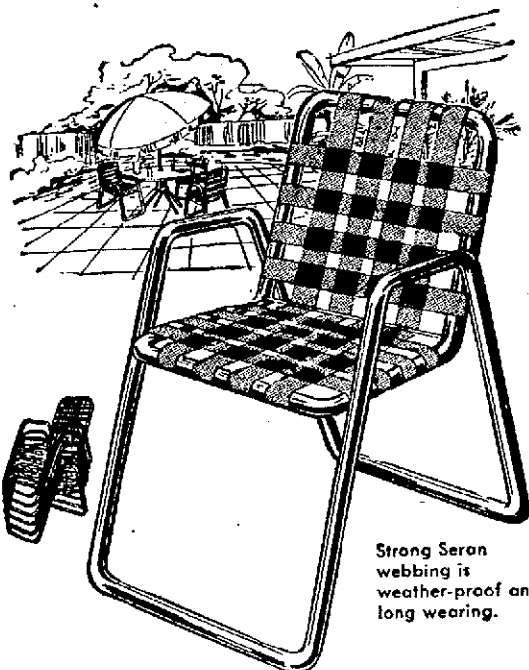

THE WEDDING MARCH ended as the couple, dressed in their Salvation Army officer uniforms, met at the center of a small stage. The hall was filled for the two were popular with those they met in the course of their work.

The couple were in their late 30s and both seemed calm and smiled at each other, then at those assembled.

A high-ranking Salvation Army officer faced them, prepared to conduct the marriage ceremony.

ing to those assembled, began a short dissertation on the seriousness of marriage, terming it a lifelong commitment to be entered upon only after "considerable consideration."

"Because of this," he continued, "I feel that we should not let this couple go further until they have heard the studied opinions of several qualified persons. I shall, therefore, call upon some of you present to express your honest opinions."

"You, John," continued the officer, "what do you think about marriage?"

AN EMBARRASSED 16-year-old boy got to his feet and stammered, "Well, I do not know a thing about it, but I'd like to try it sometime."

As the boy sat down applause filled the hall — and laughter. The officer next turned to an elderly couple seated well down front.

"Mr. and Mrs. J—— have been married almost 45 years," he said. "We will now hear what Mr. J—— has to say about matrimony."

"MATRIMONY, as you have said, should be entered upon only after both parties have given the matter considerable thought," began Mr. J. "I recall as if it were yesterday," he continued, "what the minister said as he shook my hand following my own marriage to my wife here. 'Son,' he told me, 'you are now the head of a household. And Mary here now is the neck upon which that head will rest. And never forget that the neck has power to turn the head.' Well, all I have to say is that I've been turned a good many times in this past 40 years."

When the applause and laughter had died down the officer spoke again. "I feel," he said, "that someone who has bypassed marriage might also have something to say which this couple should hear. Miss M., what would you like to tell them?"

MISS M. GOT to her feet. She was a pleasant faced woman perhaps 50 years of age.

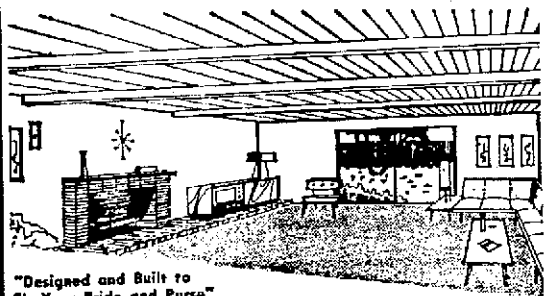

"About all I can say is that I began my work with the Salvation Army 25 years ago, and since then I have been so busy helping folks who got married and then needed help that I've never had time to try it myself," she told the assembly.

When the hall again was quiet the officer turned to the bride and bridegroom.

"Are you," he asked, "after hearing these several viewpoints, still certain you want to be married?"

The couple declared that they were. And so, without further ado, the wedding went forward.

Stop the sun from robbing your pool of chlorine!

New dry Guardex won't burn out in the sun—keeps on-killing germs and algae long after liquid chlorines quit!

Now the best chlorine for your pool—Guardex—is also easiest to use! It's dry. Pours from a 2-oz. foil packet. Dissolves instantly. And unlike liquid chlorine, Guardex doesn't lose most of its strength after the first few hours—even under the hottest sun. It maintains a higher level of active chlorine that gives you constant protection—keeps your pool clean and pure 24 hours a day.

And Guardex also protects your pool. It won't plug up filters or lime heater tubes—can't cause scale like other chlorines. Guardex takes up to 90% less storage space than chlorine bottles. Just six cartons (16 packets each) give you enough chlorine to last the whole summer long. Get Guardex from your pool chemicals dealer today.

the neighborhood by its "high tower," once used as lookout point to observe the approach of enemy armies or marauders. No other data is available on this interesting surname.

DEAR MISS RULE: Do you have the source of HEUGHEBAERT? A. H., Long Beach.

A. H.: HEUGHEBAERT is a Flemish Belgian surname which was once a medieval baptismal name identical in origin with the English "Hubert." The source was "Heughe" or "Hugh" meaning "mind or mentality," coupled with "Baert" or "Berht" describing "bright" or "brilliant." The resultant "Heughebaert" (of brilliant mentality) is a name to be proud of in any age. No coat-of-arms is recorded for this lineage.

DEAR MISS RULE: Could you give genealogy on GREENWELL. MRS. E. J., MRS. G. G., Long Beach.

E. J., G. G.: GREENWELL describes the ancestral home of this proud old English lineage, "Grene-Welle," or "at the green spring." The Greenwell family manor house was at Greenwell Ford in Durham, north England. Among descendants was General Sir Leonard Greenwell, noted 19th century military leader. The Greenwell coat-of-arms has two blue bars placed between three red ducal coronets on a golden shield.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give information on McNOWN. E. M. T., Long Beach.

E. T.: McNOWN is an Irish and Manx surname based on an early Gaelic clan title. The source, Mac-An-Eoghain, is delineated as "Sons of the well-born one." Some descendant generations of this Gaelic Irish clan migrated to the Isle of Man in the channel between Britain and Erin, providing the Manx branch of this family.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like the origin of LIPHARDT. L. L., Long Beach.

L. L.: LIPHARDT is a German surname derived from the archaic warrior title "Lip-Hardt," translated as "Philip-brave." "Lip" was a nickname for Philip meaning "lover of horses." Descendant generations sired by the original "brave Philip" used his name in its original spelling.

DEAR MISS RULE: Do you have data on SCOTT? Mrs. D. P., Downey; J. C., Long Beach.

D. P., J. C.: SCOTT was "Le Scot" in 13th century England, for "the man from Scotland." In the Hundred Rolls records of 1273, Walter Scot of Yorkshire and Roger Le Scot of London were listed. The coat-of-arms of the Scotts of Scotland has a gold star and two crescent moons on a diagonal blue stripe across a gold shield. The unusual, poetic Scott family motto "Reparabit cornus phoebe" means "The moon shall again fill her horns." John Scott, of Scotch forebears, came to Bucks County, Pennsylvania in 1720. His son was Commissary General in our Revolutionary War, and was great-grandfather of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, wife of our 23rd President.

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif., for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

Eva Clark's name in lights was nothing new in 1925 when this photograph was taken at Broadway-53rd St., New York.

By Charles W. Crutcher

EVA CLARK could sing either mezzo-soprano or coloratura; they called her a "lark."

King Albert of Belgium gave her a medal. She played two-a-day Keith vaudeville in principal cities in the United States and Canada. She toured Europe, India, China, South America. She was in Ziegfeld's dazzling "Follies" and "Frolics" (once every girl's dream).

They were happy days for Eva. But she was never stage struck. Friends who knew her then says she was most un-theatrical. She always was more interested in the people who trouped with her than in her own career.

IT BEGAN when she was a little girl in San Francisco and watched a friend, a dancing instructor, teach new steps to pupils.

"I didn't take dance lessons, I absorbed them," Eva says.

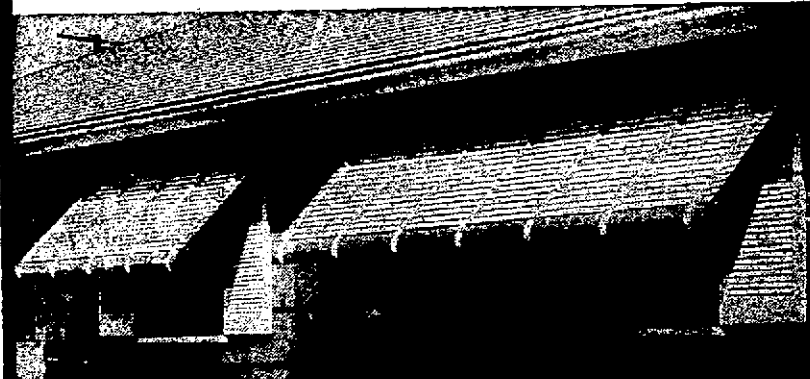

Her opportunity came when she was booked in an act at the Multnomah Hotel in Portland. The manager of the act called her and said the soloist was ill—Eva would have to sing or the act must be canceled.

EVA KNEW the words to two songs: "Aloha" and "I Love You Truly."

"You've heard of God-given song?" she asks. "I produced

HOW TO Make Concrete Edging-Mowing Strips for Your Lawn, Garden

CUT SIDES and bottom of form (left above) from 1x4-inch boards. Sides are four feet long and the bottom 1½ inches longer. Use wood scraps for ends. Space inside edges two inches apart on the bottom, four inches apart on top. Nail end pieces in place. Several forms speed work. Turn the form over. Plane down excess (above) from lower edges of sides—plane until you've made them parallel to lower edge of end piece.

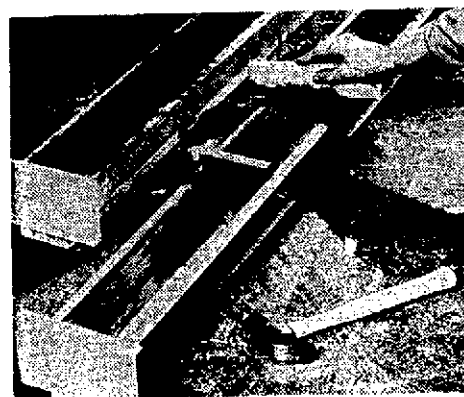

FASTEN BOTTOM to the ends and sides (left) with rustproof aluminum nails. Wood won't split and nails won't bend if you drill tiny pilot holes for them. Make several forms so you can cast more than one strip at a time.

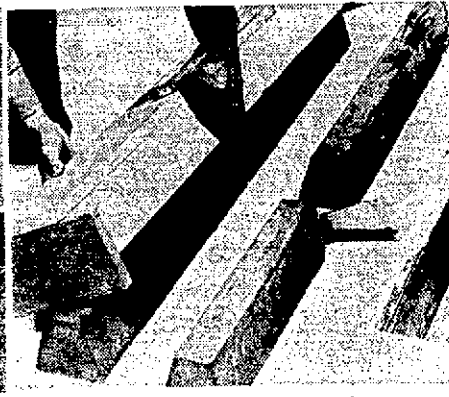

BRUSH FORMS with creosote if you're going to cast many of the strips. Creosote soaks into the wood, helps prevent rotting and warping. Brush on a grease or oil, too, before pouring the concrete. Old crankcase oil, or kitchen grease—either will help you remove the dried strip from form easily.

BE CERTAIN of solid strips by making concrete in a ratio of three parts sand to one part cement. Take care when adding the water to the dry mixture of sand and cement. If it's added only a little at a time, you'll avoid making a batch that's either too soupy or too firm—both hard to work with.

FILL FORMS evenly with mortar—screed off any excess with straight edge of small board moved in sawing motion. If strips shorter than full length are needed to complete your edging, or to form curves, tack a small wedge into one end of the form as shown here. Oil wedge, too.

REMOVE CURED and ready-to-use strips from forms in about three days. Best way to get them out is to turn form over—tap lightly. Clean out the forms with whisk broom and damp cloth before you begin casting job again. Dried debris, if left in the form, will "scar" the surface of new strips.

 product isn't idly tossed aside, it is hung on a clothesline so the rest of the moppets and the big folks may admire and comment.

ALSO ON the grounds, and perhaps the most interesting of all, is the Junior Art Gallery in which is exhibited the work done by all grades of pupils in Orange County schools from kindergarten through high school. Several of the paintings and pictures from this Junior Gallery have found their way into the homes of famous Hollywood celebrities and others not quite so noted.

When the Festival of Arts opens to the public on July 16 it will make the 25th annual presentation. It began at a time depression was hitting everybody where it really hurt—the pocketbook. Among the hardest hit were the artists of the small community, for, they pointed out, art is one thing a family can do without when the cost of groceries is considered. But they proved to be quite determined not to let anything get them down. So they voted to have a little art show on their own. This show consisted of hanging their paintings on a backyard fence for themselves and wayfarers to admire. The artists became amazed when a few of the sojourners actually paid cash for some of the paintings. Thereafter, the painters strove harder and better to display their wares, and one day along came Roy Ropp, a real estate operator, and likewise an artist, with the suggestion they add a tableau to the display. This one tableau grew into the Pageant of the Masters now observed in Irvine Bowl annually by great numbers from all states of the Union, and even from foreign lands. The Festival continues for 30 busy days, closing Sunday night, Aug. 14.

A GREAT percentage of Laguna residents have something to do with preparing and presenting the Festival and Pageant of the Masters. They come from all walks of life, all ages, and all imbued with one desire—to be a "part." And more and more the artists come—also to be a part.

Ask the artists why they came to Laguna and they will say it is "because of the iridescent sunsets, the breaking waves, the coves, the rocks and the trees, the hills, the sea and the gulls." With all the Festival and Pageant activity and the talk and the painting by the artists always dining in their ears, it is small wonder that the small fry become imbued with a deeper appreciation of art at a very early age. Thus Laguna strives to protect its reputation as an "Artist Colony."

Irvine Bowl, the home of the Festival, is a six-acre tract at the mouth of Laguna Canyon, property deeded to Laguna Beach by the late James Irvine, pioneer California rancher and patron of the arts. An outdoor stage faces a natural amphitheater of amazing acoustical perfection, and a severely modern hyperbolic paraboloid restaurant graces the exhibition grounds. Juvenile entertainment is not overlooked—a puppet theater remains filled throughout afternoon and evening, with the adults inclined to take the space away from the moppets.

THE 1960 Pageant of the Masters is striving to stress the silver anniversary of the spectacle with a program of 24 Living Pictures, closing nightly with the reverent and traditional "The Last Supper," by Leonardo da Vinci, and Vann Newinger, baritone, singing "The Lord's Prayer." The season's dramatic spectacle is produced by John Callan, a long-time resident of Laguna Beach, and veteran of the Pageant of the Masters stage.

Callan has selected the following for the 1960 offering: "The Clock," E. Falconet; "Innocent Age," Sir Thomas Lawrence; "The Music Party," J. Ochtervelt; "Lot and His Family Leaving Sodom," Peter Paul Rubens; "French Figurines," 18th Century; "Madonna and Six Saints," Sandro Botticelli; "Lamp of Life," 19th Century Medallion; "Courting Days," N. Meunier; "Enrollment Day," Norman Rockwell; "The Sculpture Gallery" and "Doubtful Promise," Cydney; "Lest We Forget" and "Love Letters," Jean Honore Fragonard; "Thanksgiving," Doris Lee; "Forever Panting and Forever Young," Allan Clark; "The Music Lesson," Thomas Hart Benton; "The Wyndham Sisters," John Singer Sargent; "Treasures of the Orient," Chinese Porcelains; "Classic Rhythm," A. von Munchhausen; "Ball at Versailles," V. de Paredes; "Little Girl in a Gallery," Lawrence B. Eva displays a medal given to her by Belgian king in 1919.

She Was a Ziegfeld Star

Gold by Order of the Crown."

SHE WAS PRAISED for her songs in "Sun-Kist" and "Satires of 1920" on a cross-country tour, which led to New York.

With the St. Louis Municipal Opera, she sang feminine leads in "Vagabond King," "Bohemian Girl," "Student Prince" and "Rose Marie." Before she could sing "Indian Love Call" she had to get permission from Arthur Hammerstein, producer of "Rose Marie."

IN 1925 SHE returned to New York, and did alternate shows in Flo Ziegfeld's "Follies" and "Frolics" at the Amsterdam.

"Tall women were selected for show horses in those extravaganzas. Their beautiful clothes did the rest."

Now, in her Long Beach dress shop (1828 E. Broadway), Eva Clark recalls her gorgeous Ziegfeld gowns.

Eva worked with Will Rogers in his first "Frolics" skit.

DO YOU KNOW how Will's famous "All I know is what I read in the papers" came about? Eva does.

"We toured on a chartered train during a Follies run. For a gag, Will would buy a newspaper, put it under his arm and walk through the train.

"Members of the company would ask 'What's the news today?'"

"Will would say 'All I know is what I read in the papers.'"

Eva took a fling with the Orpheum—she was with it for six years in "Cycle of Song"

She has poignant memories of the Orpheum. She watched Alla Nazimova emote in "That Sort," about a divorced wife robbed of her only child.

EVA'S ACT followed Nazi-mova's.

"I would be crying so hard it was difficult to go on."

There was a time in Brooklyn when Eva's act preceded Elsie Janis' impersonations.

Eva shared billing with Sessue Hayakawa in "The Bandit Prince."

"I used to beat Sessue at penny ante," she says.

She remembers Nora Bayes introducing "My Man." She remembers Larry Semon in "Wizard of Oz." She remembers Ann Harding, Bert Wheeler, Olga Petrova, Ethel Barrymore, Toto the clown and Vincent Lopez Orchestra.

Eva holds membership in the Ziegfeld Club of Hollywood.

of beads swath Sandy Warner, who rose to fame as "Miss Exotica" on record covers. Her dress was so tight that she could barely lean much less sit.

For sheer elegance Nancy Walters' ombre satin, without room for a wrinkle, wins major honors and so did Nancy when she danced into a movie contract.

TALL, LITHE champagne blonde Donna Douglas wears tissue-thin jersey which stays affectionately close to her curves. Donna is the girl who backed into Hollywood via "Career" in which she was seen only from the rear. Now you can view her from every direction.

Other belles-on-their-toes include New York model Susan Avery in white satin and jeweled gloves, Karen Scott in a satin and lace knee-snug formal, Suzanne Ames glittering in 14-karat gold lame.

Only one not caught in the fashionable squeeze play of the new film is Leona Gage ("Miss USA-for-a-Day") who was able to sit down in a full-skirted flowered chiffon frock. Leona won her title only to lose it 24 hours later because she forgot to mention that in addition to her alabaster skin, rich chestnut hair and brooding dark eyes she also owned a wedding ring!

fact, the permanence of our group is almost a record among investment clubs."

WHEN A COMMITTEE is ready to report on a project, the members know they are in for a grilling. Searching questions are asked with attendant lively discussions from the floor of the dinner meetings, held every two weeks. From the incisive questioning, it's hard to believe Quatra is made up of "part-time" investors.

"To show how faithful we are about dues," the president says, "Ira Kay, former international president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, once mailed his dues from Austria. Jim Hix, an airplane pilot, once made his deadline with a quick check from Singapore."

Despite the many investments the club has made, Quatra's permanent part-time secretary, Mrs. Evelyn Ferris, keeps it all straight for each meeting. Each member receives a complete rundown on meetings a day or two after they are held. This way, they can be sure of the status on every item in their portfolio.

BUYING INTO the group would entail cash amounting to 1/25th of the club's net worth. Though it's a substantial sum, there is a waiting list for membership.

"We even have a League of Nations," it was explained. "Dr. Al Weil is in charge of that. He maintains liaison with other clubs for an interchange of ideas."

The ideas can include pooling of funds for an investment too large to be handled by a single club, or merely an exchange of helpful hints.

Before rushing out to join an investment group, remember it isn't necessarily all quick profit. Consider Quatra's experience:

SOME TIME AGO, the club was given the opportunity to buy quicksilver in Mexico to be sold in the United States at a handsome profit.

Like most investments that have "gone sour," the quicksilver looked like a good bet. Somehow, Quatra's Mexican contact and the $500 invested became as elusive as the product. Neither were heard from again.

"But we learned," says the club's president, "and we think it was a cheap lesson, at that. We've gained a lot of knowledge since then."

SO THERE we have an investment club. Is it worth while? Quatra's membership is unanimous in thinking so. "With any reasonable success, especially in Southern California, we should be worth close to a million dollars in another 10 years," Dr. Hartstein predicts. "If not that, at least we'll have a nice nest egg toward retirement."

There is no doubt the members believe in their club. At a recent tallying-up, it was learned that most of them have invested additional money, aside from that in Quatra, in several enterprises. They have not been sorry.

When California Had

The William B. Ide adobe house, built near Red Bluff about 110 years ago, now has been made into a state monument.

By Vera Williams

WILLIAM B. IDE, whose Bear Flag Republic gave California its official emblem, was honored in memory recently.

The adobe house in which he lived more than a century ago near Red Bluff was made a state monument. An historical parade and barbecue commemorating the event, and the formal dedication ceremony were attended by state dignitaries, pioneers, the descendants of pioneers and school children.

The Bear Flag Republic, created in June 1846, lasted only 25 days, but it helped bring California into the union six months later.

American settlers, alarmed by reports that the Mexican government planned to drive them out, organized at the William Moon ranch in Tehama County at the upper end of the Sacramento Valley.

AFTER MEETING with Gen. John C. Fremont (then a captain) and with Kit Carson, they pressed on to Sonoma County.

There other settlers joined them and the group raided the home of the Mexican governor, Gen. Mariano

a President

Guadalupe Vallejo, at Sonoma.

Vallejo surrendered without a struggle and Ide became the republic's first and only president, serving until American forces seized Monterey. Navy Lt. Warren Revere, grandson of Paul Revere, arrived in Sonoma July 9 with the Stars and Stripes, and the Bear Flag emblem was lowered.

THE ORIGINAL Bear Flag is said to have been made from either a flour sack or a piece of a woman's skirt. The emblem carries likeness of a grizzly bear.

Ide later served as a one-man government in his part of California. At one time, he is said to have held 15 public offices and to have administered the oath often to himself.

He once filled all the court offices at the trial of a horse thief.

Found guilty, the horse thief was sentenced to death and taken to a nearby jail for safekeeping. By the day set for the hanging, however, he was gone—pardoned by the governor who neglected to tell Judge Ide what he had done.

Ide died in 1852, alone except for a stranger who is said to have robbed him. No likeness of him is known to exist.

The exact spot where he was buried is not known.

BOOK REVIEWS

When a Tiger Stalks a Goat

LOWER YOUR HEAD to pick up, for example, your handkerchief and you will observe that I too have you covered . . . From under the table you can only give me a painful wound. If I see the slightest sign of you raising your pistol above it, I will kill you. Is that clear?"

Thus two deadly intelligence officers who survived World War II—one determined to kill the other for a crime he did not commit—come face to face for the first time in Geoffrey Household's gruelling suspense novel "WATCHER IN THE SHADOWS" (Atlantic-Little, Brown, $3.95).

One, an Austrian aristocrat who spied for British Intelligence at Buchenwald, first senses danger when a package being delivered to him explodes and kills a postman; then his dog dies of poison spread for him. Grimly facing the challenge of killing or being killed, the hunted resolves that "if one is going to tie out a fat goat for a tiger, it is essential to let the tiger think he has found it for himself."

And so the hunt becomes a protracted duel with the tiger, a fanatical murderer who was once a clever Resistance leader, stalking his prey in and near London, by foot and horseback, through the Sussex countryside. Sometimes the adversaries are so close they can hear each other's careful breathing; at times they lose contact only to meet again in some strange, unexpected way. The goat, experienced though he is, comes to know the madness of fear and the reader is left breathless from stark tension by the time the two settle their differences in a trail of blood.

Household, always a master of suspense, has written the most gripping novel of his long career. It is the latest Literary Guild Selection.

"THE LOST TREASURE OF COCOS ISLAND" by Ralph Hancock and Julian A. Weston (Nelson, $5): When rebel armies were about to converge on Lima, Peru, in 1821, state and church officials hastily loaded a huge fortune in gold and jewels aboard a British merchantman which retreated quickly to sea. The treasure, estimated worth at least $60 million, was never returned; instead, the perfidious officers and crew sailed direct to Cocos Island, 550 miles due west of Panama City—according to all available evidence—hid it so well that scores of treasure hunts since conducted on the island have ended in failure. Sir Malcolm Campbell, the British racing driver, headed a quiet quest in 1926. Count Felix von Luckner also attempted to find it. The first authorized expedition of importance—the island is owned by Costa Rica—was led by Capt. Charles M. Wilkins of Long Beach when he put out from San Pedro in February, 1938, aboard his 150-ton auxiliary schooner. Several expeditions were headed by Charles W. Williams of Manhattan Beach. The late Julian Weston probably knew more about the island, the fortunes buried there and the searches made to find them than any other man. Hancock, also an authority on Cocos, took Weston's material and traces the island's history and the searches made to recover the fabulous prize it guards so well. Like most chronicles about lost treasure, this is compelling reading.

GEORGES BLOND

The strange story of a legend—of the famous chief of the Imperial Japanese Navy whose exploits included the destruction of Russian sea power in the Russo-Japanese war in 1904-05—is told by Georges Blond in "ADMIRAL IGO" (Macmillan, $4.50). It is the first full-length biography of the famous militarist.

"A MINNESOTA DOCTOR'S HOME REMEDIES FOR COMMON AND UNCOMMON AILMENTS" by John E. Eichenlaub, M.D. (Prentice-Hall, $4.95): What with the cost of ailing skyrocketing, this certainly is a useful book to have around. Dr. Eichenlaub unhesitatingly urges his readers to consult a physician when the need for one is indicated, but he does maintain that very few people can go to a doctor for every sniffle or misery, and that many of these ailments can be relieved or cured with home remedies. He points out, too, that learning to spot illnesses and complications make prompt medical care cheaper and better. Hence, he dedicates this book to keeping bodies fit, and gives exact directions for hundreds of simple home remedies, tonics, and counteractants with which to meet or avoid some 200 mild and serious ailments. In any home library here is a book which will be consulted dozens of times each year.

"INSIDE THE VATICAN" by Corrado Pallenberg (Hawthorn, $4.95): "Even if one is not a Catholic one cannot but admit that the Church of Rome is a great fact, one of the greatest which humanity has known since the beginning." So writes Pallenberg, baptized a Lutheran but now not even a true believer, at the outset of this objective inquiry into the spirit and substance of the Vatican, world headquarters of the Roman Catholic Church. He describes internal and external operations of the Holy See as he attempts to "record facts, data, curious episodes, things not too well known and small secrets I hope will interest you." There are more than 30 photographs, among them several of Pope John XXIII.

"WASHINGTON: A MODERN GUIDE TO THE NATION'S CAPITAL" by Michael Frome (Doubleday, $3.95): Washington, D.C., is one of the world's most-visited cities, but thousands who go there, drive along Pennsylvania Ave. to see the Capitol and other government buildings, cross the Potomac, gawk at the Lincoln Memorial and come away saying they have seen "everything." To read Frome's guide to this intriguing city is to know how wrong they have been. One of the leading travel authorities in the country, he devotes chapters on spots most people do not know exist and he writes so interestingly that you enjoy every word, even if you never go. But if you do plan such a trip, it would be tragic to overlook this splendid touring special. Maps and illustrations are by Stephen Kraft.

Thumbnail reviews of late books:

"SEX HISTORIES OF AMERICAN COLLEGE MEN" by Drs. Phyllis and Eberhard Kronhausen (Ballantine, $5): Based mainly on the personal histories of some 200 students at an all-male college, which were part of the requirements for a course in marriage and family life education, answers such questions as where the young adult of today learns what he knows about sex, what he does to satisfy his basic need in the face of severe social restrictions, and what the college man really thinks of petting.

"SHORT STIRRUPS: THE STORY OF DOUGHBELLY PRICE" with an introduction by Richard G. Hubler; illustrated by Don Louis Perceval (Westernlore Press, P.O. Box Sexsational!

Laden with heavy overtones of sex in the Kinsey pattern, Irving Wallace's "THE CHAPMAN REPORT" (Simon and Schuster, $4.50) last week shot to fourth place among the nation's best-selling fiction titles. The slick novel first appeared in late-May and deals with a survey of "Sexual Patterns of the Married Female" among members of a woman's club in an exclusive community near the UCLA campus in Los Angeles. Wallace lives in Los Angeles.

41073, Los Angeles 41, $5.75): Undersize, Doughbelly Price has spent a lifetime trying to prove he was a man. The result, a character who had tried—and done—just about everything including creating humor everywhere he went.

CHECK THIS LIST of paperback originals (first time to appear in book form) for good reading.

"CAROL IN A THOUSAND CITIES" edited by Ann Aldrich (Gold Medal, 50c): The twilight woman, as she sees herself and is seen by such writers as Sigmund Freud, Guy de Maupassant, Simone de Beauvoir and others; an anthology of 13 stories.

"PIECES OF THE GAME" by Lee Citford (Gold Medal, 35c): A treasure of $2 million in silver in the bottom of a bay recovered by American POWs by Japanese saboteurs; and one of the divers returning to the Far East city to hunt for a girl he lost in the shuffle.

"What are the best restaurant guides for Europe?"

EVERY TOURIST bureau in every country has a restaurant guide. (Tourist bureaus are listed in Manhattan section, New York City phone books. Newspaper libraries and phone companies have them.)

They are free. Some are better than others—the British Travel Assn., 680 Fifth Avenue, New York City—has one of the best.

The ones you pay for: TWA Travel Tips for (Name of Country)—35 cents each—are excellent pocket-size information books on eating, shopping, sightseeing. Pan American Airways "New Horizons"—one of the best for ALL countries served by PAA.

"Europe-Ho" is a fine European restaurant guide. One dollar from London Chop House, 155 W. Congress, Detroit 26, Mich.

"... the name of a good travel agency in Tahiti where we can plan a trip to the Cook Islands?"

POROI TRAVEL AGENCY. Papeete, Tahiti. (M. Poroi is the Mayor of Papeete.) They know all the ways to all the islands.

"Would you advise overnight roadside camping in Mexico?"

NO. HOTELS are inexpensive. Mexicans are very rigid in their customs.

"Where is the best information on travel to Eastern Europe?"

AIR FRANCE has free booklets on travel and tourist regulations for Czechoslovakia, Roumania, Poland, Hungary and Bulgaria. (683 Fifth Avenue, New York City.) Covers entertainment, shopping, currency, car rentals, driving requirements. Hotels and calendar of events in various cities.

For Russia, American Express seems to have most complete information. You can also write INTOURIST, the official Soviet Travel Bureau, 355 Lexington Ave., New York City. Yugoslavia: write their tourist office at 509 Madison Ave., New York City.

Want Fun, Senior?

By Fred Taylor Kraft

Independent, Press-Telegram Travel Editor

AUGUST will find Mexico in the midst of harvesting and merrymaking, and who has a happier holiday celebration than our good friends South of the Border?

The leading fiesta—Virgin of the Assumption—comes off Aug. 15 throughout the Republic, and especially at Tlaxcala. As the Virgin is identified as patroness of the cornfield, churches and crosses are decorated with corn. Only after the Virgin has been properly thanked is it permissible to partake of the harvest. After that it's all whoopee.

Samples of a few of the other August doings:

Aug. 1-6: Celebration honoring the "Christ of the Chapel." Caravans of pilgrims arrive from nearby villages to take part in the fair which features bullfights and displays of famous sarapes. Buy yourself a sarape, senior!

Aug. 5, Ixtantepec Nieves: Festival including fireworks, fair, and dancing and singing in the streets.

Aug. 8, Paracho: A big feast during which groups of senioritas dressed in China Poblana costumes (Mexico's national dress) parade, leading a bull on a rope. Rockets, dancing and singing follow. Since Paracho is the "guitar" capital of Mexico, guitar strings will be humming!

Aug. 13, Mexico City: Celebration of the 438 anniversary of the fall of Tenochtitlan, capital of the Aztec empire and site of Mexico's capital. Aztec descendants in colorful costumes perform in the heart of the city.

Aug. 21, Zacatecas: All work is suspended for a full week's holiday and there'll be a wild carnival featuring dancing, food, drinks, betting, and amateur plays.

Aug. 22-24, Cordoba: A gardenia-scented festival commemorating signing of the treaty which gave Mexico its freedom from Spain.

Aug. 25, San Luis Potosi: Fiesta featuring dancing, sky rockets and serenading.

All this, senior, plus Mexican hospitality.

WEEKEND GADABOUT: Antelope Valley will be jumping next Friday-through-Sunday with its Pearlblossom Sunshine Festival. The community will select a Mr. and Miss Suntan (a local physician will check all tans entered for authenticity), and there will be starlight dancing, an art show, "after 50" talent bee, and western variety show.

Crestline, in the mountains above San Bernardino, holds its Pioneer Trail Days next Saturday and Sunday when residents relive pioneer days with Old West costumes, western parade, fast-draw contest, horseback square dancers, pie-eating, and a water pageant at dusk on Lake Gregory.

San Diego, which advertises itself as "where California began," marks its 191st birthday Saturday with its Trek to Serra Cross. A procession led by a costumed Father Serra proceeds a mile from Adobe Chapel to Serra Cross in Presidio Park. Indians from adjacent reservations will join in ceremonial dress.

IF YOU'RE HEADED Alaska way this summer, an announcement by Lee Johnson, director of the division of tourism and economic development for the State of Alaska, may take a load off your mind. He says: "The transportation companies serving Alaska—steamship, rail and air—all have reported that space is available on most of their schedules throughout the season. Surveys reveal also that the once-critical hotel accommodation situation is considerably improved and that for the most part desired quarters can be secured with reasonable advance reservations." Many new hotels and motels have been built, and improvements or expansions have been made to those previously built.

Puerto Rico Bids for Tourists

WITHIN the past decade, Puerto Rico has grown into one of the world's most popular tourist centers. Last year alone, more than a quarter of a million visitors added another $50,000,000 to the commonwealth's economy, establishing tourism as one of the leading industries in Puerto Rico's vigorous economic development program.

Puerto Rico tourism began in 1949 as an experiment when the commonwealth government built its first modern luxury hotel and leased it to Conrad Hilton. The success of the Caribe Hilton prompted the start of Hilton International and presented Puerto Rico with a new and rapidly growing industry.

In 1959, capital investment in Puerto Rican tourism soared past the $50,000,000 mark to keep pace with the commonwealth's continuing demand for new hotels and other tourist facilities.

MORE THAN 20 major projects, scheduled to get under way during the coming year, will double the existing physical plant of tourism on the island by 1962. New investments totaling more than $68,000,000 promise to add 2,400 first class hotel rooms along with other tourist facilities.

At the current rate of growth, an estimated 310,000 tourists will visit Puerto Rico in 1960.

SAN JUAN'S International Airport, opened in 1955, is currently undergoing a $4,600,000 expansion program designed to boost its capacity from 1,000,000 to 2,500,000 passengers annually.

Puerto Rico has been brought closer to us time-wise with the institution of jet service from the West Coast to San Juan via New York and Miami. Long Beach tourists now can reach sunny Puerto Rico in about nine hours. First class jet fare is $441.60 round trip; tourist fare is $332 round trip.

GOING PLACES With the Sloanes

NEW YORKERS say that outside of New York it's all Connecticut, though not one in 20 Americans lives in Gotham. But with one in four Danes living in Copenhagen, it might more accurately be said that outside of Copenhagen it's all Aalborg.

What's more, there are few sights worth seeing in this compact country not within a day's round trip of Copenhagen.

A few hours to the west by forced drive and forced draft ferry, on the island of Funen, lies Odense, Denmark's second city. Here you can see the street and house where Hans Christian Andersen may or may not have been born.

Less than 25 miles north of Copenhagen, across a lovely rolling countryside dotted with half-timbered thatched-roof farmhouses, lies Elsinore and Hamlet's Kronborg Castle.

But Copenhagen itself is the place most Americans have been looking for, a rare sparkling gem of a city with a charm as mellow as a Danish blue cheese and as bright yet subtle as a sip of akvavit.

TWO IMPRESSIONS quickly etch themselves on the visitor's consciousness—motion and color. Thousands of bicycles stream through the city ridden by old people and children, policemen and postmen, pregnant women with babies strapped to baskets, businessmen with briefcases dangling from handlebars. Special lanes have been built for them on most thoroughfares.

Color drenches Copenhagen. A string of five blue tree-bordered lakes arches through the heart of the city. Skiffs with bright red, yellow and blue sails dart between flocks of swans, watched over by apartment houses with gay pastel awnings on their balconies.

Baskets and boxes of flowers peek from every window—even in office buildings—and scores of flower stands spring from and bring life to the cement expanse of City Hall Square.

The heart of Copenhagen is Tivoli Gardens, a crazy combination of Disneyland, Coney Island and Central Park without the thematic self-consciousness of any of them. Ringing with screams from the roller coaster and echoing with symphony concerts and parades, it is the synthesis of everything Danes love. There are 23 ever-jammed restaurants, including some of Copenhagen's finest, funhouses and ferris wheels, playground and picnic grounds, pagodas and pantomime theater.

BY DAY TIVOLI is a pleasant floral garden, by night a madhouse of milling thousands, and on weekend midnights it explodes with its own exuberance in a shower of spectacular fireworks.

From the teeming harbor to the majestic square called Kongens Nytorv runs a picturesque inlet known as Nyhavn, perhaps Copenhagen's most photographed sight. A shelter for fishing boats, it is lined on both sides with colorful 18th century buildings housing seamen's beer joints, beatnik cafes and that venerable Copenhagen institution, Tattoo Jack. Here, too, Hans Christian Andersen once lived.

And on the line of little streets from City Hall Square to Kongens Nytorv known as Stroget, there are the fascinating shops full of silver, porcelain, glass, antiques and surprises such as Pipe Dan (13 Vestergade). Familiar to more than 5,000 North American customers and countless others, it may be the world's most unique pipe shop.

Home-canned vegetables are best approach to real thing in off-season. Above, ingredients for succotash relish.

FOOD

A Canner's Favorite

By Mildred K. Flanary

Independent Press-Telegram Home Economics Editor

HOME CANNING provides a store of vegetables that are the next best thing to fresh produce in the off-season, but home canners must be sure that vegetables are very fresh, clean and are canned as soon as possible after harvesting.

Succotash relish is a good "canner" and uses mixed vegetables and is a new version of old-fashioned corn relish. Beans may be substituted for part or all of the cabbage called for in grandma's recipe, or try this one:

Succotash Relish

- 7 cups corn
- 4 cups green beans
- 1 cup celery
- 1½ cups onion
- 1 cup sweet red pepper
- 4 tablespoons salad oil
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2 tablespoons powdered dry mustard
- 2 teaspoons tumeric
- ½ cup water
- 3½ to 4 cups vinegar
- 1½ cups sugar
- 1 tablespoon celery seed
- 4 or 5 drops Tabasco Sauce
- 1½ tablespoons salt
- 1 clove garlic.

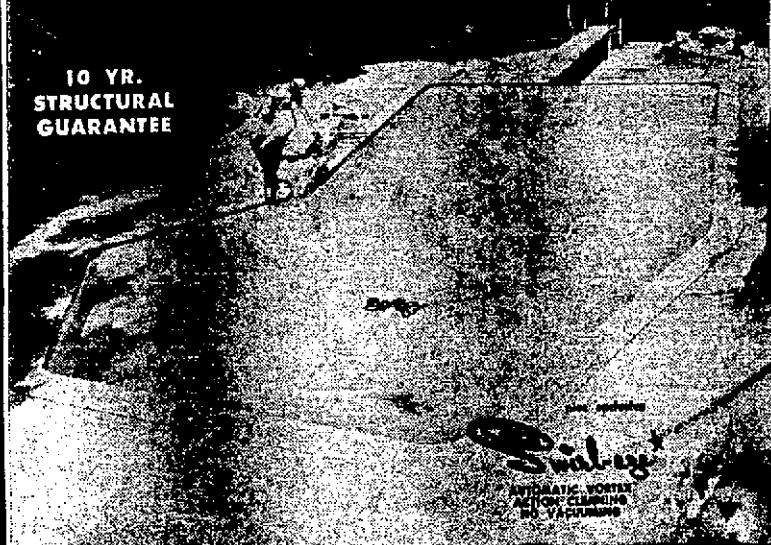

Cover corn with boiling water. Boil 3 minutes. Drain. Cool, cut from cob (do not scrape) and measure. Cut beans into small pieces. Measure, cover with boiling water. Boil 5 minutes. Drain. Chop and measure onion, pepper and celery.

Pour salad oil into kettle, add flour, mustard and tumeric. Mix. Add water a little at a time and stir until smooth. Add 3 cups vinegar and cook until mixture coats spoon. Add vegetables and other ingredients except remaining vinegar. Cook over low heat for 20 minutes. If sauce becomes too thick (should be "runny"), add more vinegar. Pour hot relish into half pint or pint jars. Put lid on jar, screw band tight. Process pints 15, half pints 10 minutes in boiling-water bath.

(NOTE: The word "succotash" comes from miselk-quath, an Indian term meaning ear or whole kernels of corn. Originally, succotash was made with fresh corn and shelled beans. Nowadays, both vegetables are just as likely to be canned or frozen, and the beans lima or green.)

A Professional Offers Some Tips

By The Shutterbug

TOD STROMQUIST is a professional photographer who tried hard to look like an amateur camera fan.

"People abroad are used to American tourists with cameras," he explained just before his departure for Europe. "They treat them with courtesy and custom officials are inclined to be lenient and even helpful. Natives and local officials are apt to be indulgent with their whims in photographing almost anything and are more cooperative. But professional photographers are likely to be examined for scrupulously, more questions are asked and fees for services are larger."

It isn't hard for Stromquist to look like an average tourist on his current trip. He's accompanied by his wife, their 18-month-old son and his mother-in-law. They bought a German-made station wagon to be delivered at dockside on their arrival. They chose an ocean crossing because they carried, besides luggage, a great deal of 16mm movie equipment plus the entire film supply for their six month trip.

"THAT'S ANOTHER thing I discovered from previous trips," he added. "Families traveling by car across borders have an easier time going through customs than when flying or going by train. I would have to explain the large supply of film and my professional equipment every time we handled the luggage. They're rarely disturbed or questioned when we go by car."

Stromquist specializes in educational films. On his present assignment for Coronet Films, he'll shoot three reels on medieval history in France and Germany and three reels on eastern Europe in Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary. He'll shoot about 3,000 feet of color film for each reel which will be edited down to a final 500-foot, 15 minute version.

FOR THE amateur movie maker, Stromquist offers these tips:

Use a tripod, equipping it with a pan head to eliminate the jerky panning that mars most home movies. A wide angle lens and a light meter are also necessary accessories.

His experience illustrates how an amateur photographer turns pro. Ten years ago, on getting married, he and his wife planned a honeymoon in Europe. They wondered how they could defray some of the expense through Stromquist's interest in photography. To show the caliber of his work to prospects in the 16mm film field, they prepared a script and shot a film on their home town, Chicago.

ONE OF those approached, Coronet Films, detected ability in the sample and suggested that they could use some footage on Alpine glaciers. The Stromquists rerouted their trip so they could make the shots suggested. Their efforts were successful. They were given a script on music, another area in which they had a personal interest and some skill. This successfully accomplished, they found themselves on regular assignments as professionals.

In the past 10 years, they've been abroad five times prior to their current trip, have shot 70 educational films which have won 15 awards at various American film festivals.

TRAVELERS SELDOM take all the pictures they'd like to, and often are forced to miss some scenes because of lack of time, bad weather, inaccessibility, or other reasons beyond control.

Out of the past come the educational films of today. Here's a scene recreated for film by photographer Tod Stromquist.

To supplement personal color slide collections, commercial slides can be a valuable source. Slides of most localities can be found at photo stores and souvenir shops throughout the nation.

Another source of supply is the large number of mail order slide dealers. A quick survey of the classified section of any major photo magazine will provide names and addresses.

For outstanding color shots of the American Southwest, and especially of Arizona, an excellent source is the collection of photos built up by Arizona Highways, monthly magazine published by the Arizona Highway Dept., Phoenix. A catalogue of hundreds of scenic color slides is available from the magazine on request.

PET PARADE

There's Lots of Joy in a Toy

By Eleanor Avery Price

NOBLE LADIES of the past in both Europe and the East helped create the popularity of most of the toy dogs. The tiny pets were sought after for the pleasure and amusement of the royal women who enjoyed carrying them in the folds of their gowns and in their arms while in their carriages.

So loved were the toys that the ladies often refused to pose for portraits unless one of their elegant little pets was pictured with them. Rare old paintings attest to this fact. It is interesting to note, also, that the tiny dogs were depicted on tapestries, potteries, embroideries, temples, as well as carved from various materials.

Athanasius Kircher, describing the ancient custom of footbinding among oriental ladies, tells how very important wee dogs were to the morale of the modest, grave, confined women in the words, "—and to pass away their time, they sport with little dogs."

GENTLEMEN of the courts also enjoyed having the toys about. One of the most famous references to small dogs and man in Chinese history concerns Emperor Ming of the Tang Dynasty (A.D. 713-755) whose favorite beautiful wife, Yang Kwei Fei, upon seeing her Imperial master suffering the indignity of defeat at chess with a prince, contrived accidentally to loose her tiny dog upon the board. The pieces were upset and the game ruined, but the Emperor was delighted.

Both Eastern and European monarchs from earliest periods used toy dogs extensively as state gifts of esteem to diplomats and foreigners the nobility thought deserving. Monarchs also had a lucrative business in small dogs, with prices running high.

SINCE MOST toy dogs came to us from people of wealth, culture, and refinement, they are still regarded seriously by most people who keep small dogs as pets.

Mrs. Nelda Davis, 4412 E. Lavante St., expresses the universal regard for toy dogs thusly:

"My dogs are little people. They like to be cradled by my ear to tell me in their own way how happy they are and how much they love me. They are dainty, affectionate companions, are fond of riding with me in the car, and we have such fun together, my Japanese spaniels and I. Through them I meet many people with warm, lovable personalities, some of whom become my friends. Those of us who have toy dogs really have a wonderful bond, and we enjoy exchanging experiences."

Mrs. Davis's hobby of raising Japanese spaniels paid off beautifully at the recent Harbor Cities Kennel Club Show. Her Nel-Da's Tinker Toy of Sa-Oka won best of breed, going over imported dogs and specials.

San Fernando Kennel Club's sanctioned match will be held today at City Park, San Fernando, with judging to start at 1 p.m.

PASANITA OBEDIENCE Club holds its practice match today at Brookside Park, Pasadena.

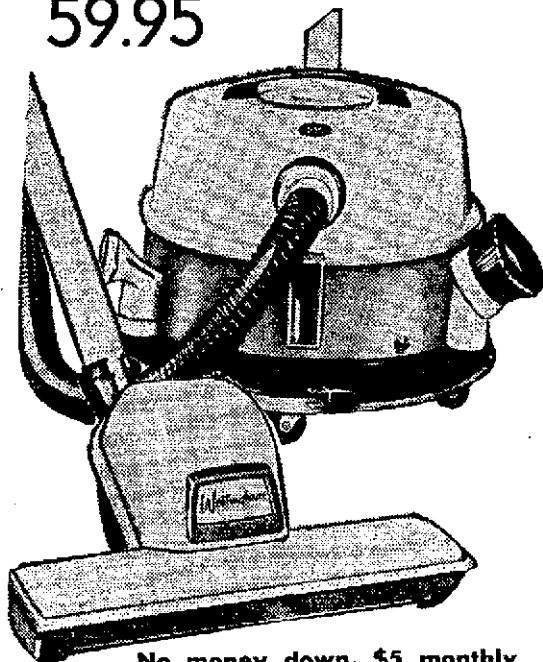

BOXER CLUB of Southern California presents its Specialty Show and Obedience Trial July 16 at North Hollywood Park. On July 17, Orange Empire Dog Club holds its show and trial at John Galvin Park, Ontario.

Mrs. Nelda Davis has spent 10 happy years caring for Japanese spaniels—quiet and very charming companions.

Keep on Planting for Color

By Joe Littlefield

ALL OF US yearn for some color in the garden and flowers to cut for indoor table decoration. One way to satisfy this desire is to plant summer blooming annuals and set out some perennials for more permanent color for the next two or three years.

One of the perennials that is becoming increasingly popular is Vinca rosea mixed, known as perennial vinca. The single flower, a half inch in diameter and pink or white with reddish eye, profusely cover the two-foot plants. Once they start blooming in the spring, they'll continue far into the fall. Even though they may be considered tender, they stand lots of sun or half sun and half shade. Should they freeze in the winter, they can be replanted inexpensively in spring.

Some gardeners plant them in the sunny annual flower bed, tucked in throughout the whole area.

They're attractive planted as husky, edging plants along a driveway or between a walk and a wall.

the showiest combination possible. Asters in back row with dwarf French marigolds are showy, too.

Coleus with showy foliage, begonias, impatiens, upright fuchsias actually bushes, all brighten shady garden areas. Set the coleus in more protected shady garden spots away from winds so they won't dry out too rapidly. Work in peat moss, leaf mold, compost soil, or planting mix much into soil for these shade plants to provide loose loamy soil.

MANY GARDENERS, cultivating a few tomato vines for the enjoyment of strictly fresh fruit, have had tomato bud drop. This problem should be solved by now as the weather warms up, both day and night.

We recommend planting tomatoes well into July. You'll help them develop heavier root systems, by setting the plants in the bottom of a six-inch hole. Gradually fill soil in as plants grow. The covered trunk area, too, sends out masses of roots, helps develop much sturdier root systems. Give plants deep watering, but don't water them too often. A spread mulch material conserves moisture by preventing sun rays from penetrating into the soil and evaporating the moisture.

Be sure to use tomato vegetable dust for control of pests and fungus diseases. Dust every five days to a week. It's a known fact, pests transmit fungus diseases by puncturing tomato leaves and infecting plants.

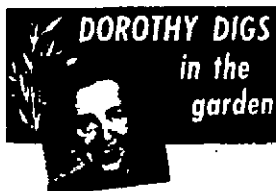

Tips on Gardening

TIPS FOR THE WEEK . . .

Constant cultivation helps keep down the weeds. Weed eradicators are effective if used according to directions. But in many instances hand cultivation will be found the safest method for getting rid of pestiferous growth. Don't cultivate too deeply or you may injure the roots of the ornamental plants. Weeds can be controlled most easily if knocked down in their younger stages.

For a real burst of color in your summer garden plant the Giant African Marigolds. The plants grow to a height of from two and one-half to three feet and the flowers often measure six inches across. One flower is often a complete flower show all by itself.

By Dorothy Jonson

Midsummer is the time when worms and caterpillars of all species appear.

For vegetables such as green lettuce which is usually infested with cabbage worms, be sure to select a spray or dust that will not be poisonous or detrimental to the food. You really don't have to tolerate a material that has to be applied two or three weeks before the vegetables are ready to pick because there are materials that can safely be used up until the time of harvest. Frequently it is last week or two before picking the food that insect life is most destructive.

For your ornamentals you can, of course, use sprays containing such materials as Malathion, Dieldrin and other more toxic materials, but be particular what you use on backyard vegetables.

Tomatoes are one of the most popular garden vegetables. I'd like to remind you that overhead watering frequently causes rotting of the fruit on the vine. Tomatoes should always be irrigated by long, slow, deep irrigation.

Pleat Trees

First things that should be planted around the average new home, before or after the lawn is in, are trees. These are permanent landscape features, and will contribute to the pleasure of your family for as long as you live in the house.

To round out the landscaping around a house, the gardener should choose preferred kinds from both the large, shade-tree class and the smaller-statured ornamental flowering kinds.

LARGE SHADE TREES

Water--But Right!

Walking sprinklers are automatic and relieve the home owner of spending valuable gardening time in watering.

By Bob Gilmore

WATER is the most important single factor in maintaining a summer garden. Every intelligent gardener will agree to that but many do not realize that there is a right way and also a wrong way of watering plants.

Light sprinkling which simply wets the surface is not only expensive but usually does more harm than good. It is the moisture deep in the soil that sustains plant life during the long, hot summer.

The soil should be watered to a depth of from three to four inches. Plant roots do not actually seek for a source of food and drink; they simply remain in the area where these nutrients are available.

WHEN TO water remains a controversial subject.

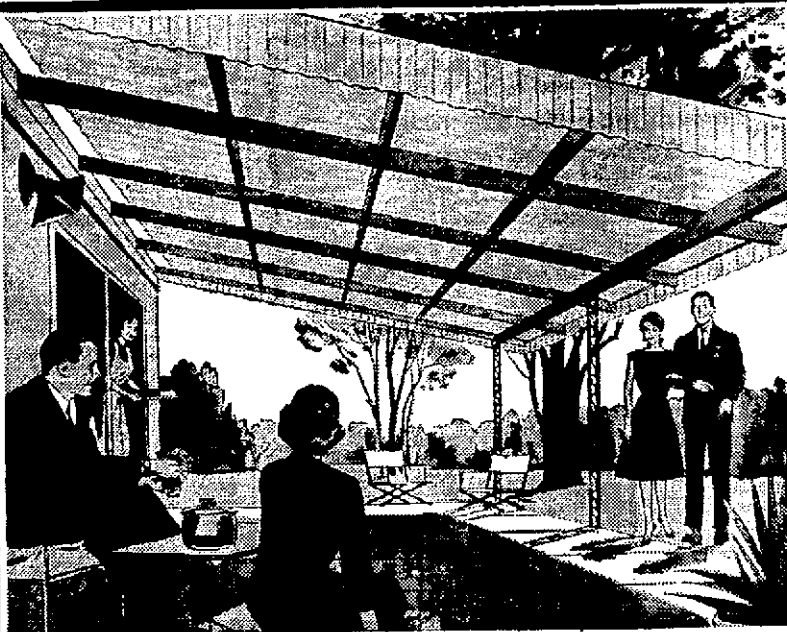

Perhaps the best compromise is to water early in the morning. The temperature is still cool so loss from evaporation should be negligible. If sufficient moisture is placed in the soil there should be enough to carry the plants through the hottest part of the day. Overhead sprinkling during the morning hours is recommended for cooling the atmosphere and for raising the humidity, if only temporarily, for plants such as fuchsias.

Popular Plant

Although the African violet was first commercially developed about 1923 in Los Angeles, it has spread in fame and popularity until today it is recognized as the most popular house plant from coast to coast. Any gardener who has been bitten by the "violet bug" can tell you why growing these plants is such a rewarding hobby. The flowers are white or variegated as well as many shades of purple and pink. Their funny, heart-shaped leaves grow in rosettes.

New developments are constantly being offered. Prepared potting soil mixes are available at C.A.N. nurseries.

Soil mulches are also a part of your summer watering program. The materials most widely used are leaf mold and peat and these aid in conserving moisture. Peat has a tremendous capacity for storing up water, releasing it gradually to the plant roots. American peat or peat humus also contains a fairly high percentage of organic nitrogen. Mulches are especially recommended for plants such as camellias, azaleas and fuchsias which thrive in a moist environment and which suffer if deprived of water during the summer.

KEN McCONNELL
Botanical Wonderland

WELL, SIRS and mesdames, Ken McConnell has done it again. Once more he has developed a new idea in the restaurant field — and again he has come up smelling like a rose.

Starting July 15, Ken's Pancake Parade, a magnificent, modern building at 3918 Long Beach Blvd., will become a botanical wonder spot. On that day the restaurant will display the first 25 flower arrangements in Ken's new series of flower show contests.

The shows will run for 20 weeks, with a different category of floral display starting at the restaurant each Friday. The contests will be open to all amateur flower arrangers wishing to compete.
All varieties of arrangements will be featured in the contests, which will have three different judges each week.
The contests will be directed by Mrs. Blanche Irvine of Laguna Beach, floral arrangements' instructor at Orange Coast and Fullerton colleges.

TWENTY-FIVE FLORAL arrangements will be accepted each Friday for each weekly contest. The exhibitors will be required to register in advance at the restaurant and choose their categories. At the conclusion of the contests, the grand prize winner will receive a mink stole. The winners of the weekly contest will receive ribbons. In addition, each qualified exhibitor will receive a free meal at the restaurant.

Restaurateur McConnell features two dozen varieties of round-the-world pancakes at his restaurant. All are light, fresh and delectable, topped with creamery butter and the finest syrups and jams. His menu also features seven unusual chopped sirloin steak dinners, priced from $2.10 to $2.85, such as the Paul Bunyan Steak, the Russian Steak,
Polynesian Steak, California
Steak and so forth. These dinners include fancy desserts and remarkable salads topped with quail eggs, miniature ears of corn and stuffed

BIGGER THREAT THAN EVER

A DIRECT TELEPHONE LINE between the White House and the Kremlin is more important today than ever, according to a spot check by PARADE of public opinion across the nation.

When PARADE's Editor Jess Gorkin suggested on March 20—in an open letter to President Eisenhower and Premier Khrushchev—that a direct telephone line be established between the White House and the Kremlin to reduce the risk of accidental war, the response in favor of the idea was overwhelming.

Thousands of letters, telegrams and phone calls poured into PARADE's office. Such leading figures as Senators Symington and Humphrey, and The American Legion's National Commander Martin B. McKneally voiced their approval. The Soviet Union's two leading newspapers Pravda and Izvestia reprinted the letter in full.

Since then the avalanche from the summit. Since then the bitter personal attacks by Premier Khrushchev on President Eisenhower. Since then a new sub-zero temperature in the Cold War. Since then a state of military alert on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

But the idea of the emergency telephone line persists. Responsible officials of both the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. have privately told PARADE that they hope the idea will not be dropped.

A reluctance exists on both sides to resume talks. But the open phone line between the White House and the Kremlin was never intended to by-pass the work of the diplomats, or be a medium for casual chit-chat between the heads of state. It was conceived as an international fire alarm, to be used only in those dire emergencies that involve the survival of the world.

If a country is determined to make war, it will make war—and no telephone call will stop it.

BUT PARADE's suggestion—as was made clear—was concerned with a wholly different problem, one that mounts daily as the world moves ever further into the nuclear space age. That problem is not a war by design but a war by error. Truly a war that nobody wants.

Here and on page 4 are some opinions that may stimulate you to form your own opinion about this vital proposal.

Four Washington observers comment on the direct phone line

Lyon Tyler

Washington lawyer and former FBI official

"If world leaders can outmatch the speed of their missiles with communications, they may be able to prevent the earth from being burned to a crisp by mistake."

Donald Ludlow

British foreign correspondent

"The direct line is a better idea than ever. The Russian threat to attack with rockets the base from which the U-2 came makes the risk of accidental war greater."

Rev. Gordon Fournier, W. F.

Catholic missionary official

"An open telephone line could be of great importance in preventing an accidental war. It would add to the security and the peace of mind of millions of people."

Paul Duncan

Former aide to Senator Lister Hill

"PARADE's proposal is fine, but doesn't go far enough. The hot-phone line should be extended to other chiefs of state who are involved in the nuclear-missile age."

Americans say: It's feasible and may save countless lives

Joe B. Thornton, Fort Worth (Tex.) accountant

"I'm appalled that such a line doesn't already exist between two atomic powers such as the U.S. and Russia. Telephone communication is so extensive in the world today that a direct line is entirely feasible. And if any other line of communication could be devised that would be more expedient than the telephone, then that should also be used. In view of the collapse of the summit meeting, any available measures to prevent accidental war—no matter how remote—should be considered. The cost of such a telephone line would be infinitesimal compared to the cost of human lives lost in a nuclear war. Any chance, no matter how slim, is worth considering."

Eve Mitchell, Montclair (N.J.) telephone worker

"A direct line is a perfect idea. I would be 100 per cent for it. I am certain the United States would be very diplomatic about using it. But the question in my mind would be whether the Russians would use it in good faith. I have a feeling that Khrushchev wouldn't call us even though we might call him."

Herman Edelsberg, Washington, D.C., lawyer

"So long as we live in a divided world, in an age of push-button, split-second atomic weapons, there will be the haunting possibility of a war nobody wanted. Someone may misread the signs; someone may push the wrong button. No precaution should be neglected. PARADE's proposal of an open wire between the White House and the Kremlin is one such precaution—and a wise one. Of course no machine is fool-proof. But when the atomic 'fire alarm' goes off, we ought to be sure it isn't a false alarm. An open wire for emergency use may provide the means to make an instantaneous cross-check."

Sophia Lindahl, Indianapolis (Ind.) occupational therapist

"Anything that will help produce a harmonious relationship between nations is worth a try. Even though the summit meeting failed, I think that any head of government should be too big a man to let personalities and antagonisms stand in the way of averting catastrophe. And besides, Russian and U.S. diplomats are still on speaking terms with each other. So even if Khrushchev and Eisenhower never speak to each other again, the idea would still work. Somebody in the offices of the Kremlin could call Washington, or someone on our side could call them. A war on purpose would be terrible enough, but a war by accident would be tragic."

Ronald Amberg, Union (N.J.) scissor finisher

"It would be a way to talk to the Russian officials in private. In this way they couldn't turn conversation into propaganda. Perhaps the two world powers should talk about how to settle spy flights, atom bombs and so on. They could decide something and then let the world know. As for preventing an accidental war, there's no doubt such a telephone could prevent war, if we could believe the Russians."

Frankie Stephens, Fort Worth (Tex.) secretary

"Before the summit meeting, I thought it would be a good idea. Not since the summit meeting failure. I don't think that a direct line between Eisenhower and Khrushchev would serve the same purposes. We don't know the person who is actually in power in the Kremlin. I feel that Khrushchev was overruled—that's what brought about the summit failure. But if Eisenhower knows who is really in charge over there, then the idea of an open telephone line between both capitals is a good idea. It could prevent an accident from causing a war nobody wants."

'SOS LOVE FIELD'

Through the night came the frantic call—from a courageous mother forced to pilot an airplane for the first time in her life

by SID ROSS and ED KIESTER

One of the most courageous stories of 1960 is the recent ordeal of Mrs. Beth Morgan Black, of Dallas, Tex. An incredible series of circumstances pushed her into a situation from which there seemed no way out. She has now recovered from her night of trial. Here for the first time PARADE presents her complete story.

DALLAS, TEX.

ON THE EVENING OF May 14, a Texas oilman named Spencer Black took off his private plane, a Beechcraft Bonanza, from Meacham Field in Fort Worth. At his side in the cramped cockpit was his tall, red-haired wife, Beth, 39. The couple had spent a pleasant day visiting and sightseeing. They were hurrying back through the darkness to their five children in Dallas.

Outside the stars twinkled brightly. "I love flying at night," Black said exuberantly. "Everything is always so much more beautiful." His wife smiled faintly but said nothing. She felt very cozy, gazing out at the lights of the cities below.

Suddenly her husband stopped talking. A strangled gasp came from his throat. He pitched against his wife's shoulder, and his hands slipped from the wheel. He gasped again, violently. His head snapped back against the seat.

"Darling, what's wrong?" cried his startled wife. "What can I do for you?"

Death in the Evening

She cradled his head against her, reaching across him to steady the wheel with her right hand. Minutes passed. She waited for him to revive. His breathing seemed shallow, almost inaudible. She caught one dangling wrist and felt for a pulse. Her searching fingertips could detect no beat.

Two years before, Black, then 48, had suffered a heart attack. Now he seemed to be having another. His eyes hung half open, staring. His expression was peaceful, as though he were asleep. His wife realized that he might be dying.

A knot of terror formed in her chest. The plane was 2,000 feet in the air, flying in circles at 150 m.p.h. A dying man was at the controls. His life depended on her landing the plane. So did her own life. So did the future of five young children.

And Beth Black had never flown a plane in her life. At that moment began a woman's desperate hour.

The stars that had winked at her moments before now seemed to be closing in, forming a prison around her. In the dim light she searched the instrument panel for some clue that would help her. She saw only a meaningless jumble of dials and hands.

She picked up the radio transmitter microphone, which had fallen from her husband's hand. She pressed the button in panic and twisted the frequency switch. "Help!" she shrieked. "SOS! SOS!"

Then she realized that no one could help her. The battle was hers to win or lose.

She felt horribly lonely and helpless.

A million thoughts crowded through her mind. She remembered the day she had met Spence three years ago in New York. He was a widower with four young children. He was warm and sincere, and he captivated her immediately. In only a few weeks they were engaged and two weeks after that they married.

Her first flight with him was a honeymoon trip to Cuba. Spence loved flying. He had bought the Beechcraft two years before for business hops, but they used it frequently for pleasure. Sometimes on Sundays he would go to the airfield to polish up his favorite "toy."

Irrelevantly she thought: "He'll never get over it if I crack up the plane. He's so darned proud of it." She listened for a moment to his breathing; she could still hear it. For some reason she thought if she could just get him home, he would recover.

Flight to Nowhere

She tried to recall what he had told her about flying. She remembered about the wheel. Push it forward, the plane goes down. Pull it back, the plane climbs. Turn it, and the plane banks to right or left.

She had to reach completely across Spence, bending almost double, to grip the wheel. Beth knew the controls could be switched to the passenger's side but she was afraid to try. Spence's feet still were on the rudder pedals, making them useless.

She clung to the wheel desperately, as if it were a life preserver. The plane nosed down. She pulled back, hard. The plane climbed steeply. She pushed again. Down, then up the Bonanza went, flubbing about in the darkened sky.

She was a menace, she realized. If she tried to land, she might crash into a house. In the air, she might collide with another plane. She reached for the landing light switch, flicking it to warn other pilots.

She caught sight of the gas gauge. It read "1/2." She didn't know how to switch tanks. She reckoned she had a half-hour's flying time left. Her watch told her it was 9:20. She wondered crazily if the maid had put the children to bed.

The bright lights of the 22-story Southland Life Building loomed below. With a start, she realized she was flying over downtown Dallas. Off in the distance she could see Love Field, Dallas' jet airport. Its big, well-lighted runways seemed to beckon. Here was a place she might try to land.

Love Field. With a tug Beth remembered the first time she had seen it, back in 1957. She was coming to Dallas to marry Spence, her trousseau in her luggage. She remembered how he had grinned as he rushed up to the gate to meet her. How appropriate the name Love Field had seemed that day. Now she wondered if she might end her married life at the same field.

Spence still was wearing the radio earphones. She pulled them off his head but she could not get them onto her own ears with one hand. And she was afraid to release the wheel. Finally she dropped them into her lap. They lay there, squawking quietly, as she tried the microphone.

"SOS Love Field!" she called. "SOS Love Field! This is Nine-seven Charlie calling Love Field!"

In the Love Field control tower, supervisor Lester Reese and his crew heard Beth's cries clearly for the first time. Half an hour before, they had picked up a faint, frantic voice but could not understand it. Ever since, they had been asking for a repeat.

It was a busy night in the tower. A Braniff airliner and a twin Beechcraft had just landed when the first SOS crackled in. American and Delta airliners and a private Cessna were over the field, waiting instructions. Then the voice cut in again: "SOS to Ground Control! SOS to Ground Control!"

There was a moment's pause and the towerman listened. Then the voice called again, only slightly garbled: "I need help, help, help, help!"

In the tower, everything stopped. The order went out to clear the skies. The two airliners and the Cessna were sent into a holding pattern outside the Love Field area. Suddenly a towerman called out, "Here she comes!"

The Bonanza was dipping in from the north, heading directly across the field. Its wobbling, rocking flight told the towermen something was seriously wrong. They still were receiving SOS calls, but no inkling of the trouble. Nor did the Beechcraft respond to instructions. Reese got on the mike:

"Aircraft at north end of Love Field. If you hear us, blink your landing lights."

Innocent Bystanders

The men watched intently, but the lights did not blink. They were helpless to aid. Reese ordered the tower to broadcast to the Bonanza on all 16 frequencies. Then he called the crash truck:

"Crash truck, a small aircraft turning final up there appears to be in possible distress . . . We are receiving a voice that appears pretty upset . . . Proceed to the stand-by position and we'll keep you advised . . ."

Aloft, Beth Black could not hear the sirens, but she could see the crash trucks racing into position. She knew now that the tower had cleared the skies for her. Far below she could pick out a small runway, which she assumed had been lighted for her.

Quick Turnaround

She tried to pick out what the earphones were saying, but it was a meaningless garble. She pressed the mike button and called for help again. Then she sucked in her breath and started down.

She fixed her gaze on the runway's blue lights. She was down to 1,000 feet, then 900, then lower . . . Suddenly a tower operator crackled out:

"Aircraft south of Love Field! Pull up! Pull up! You are going into the downtown area!"

That command, ripping out of the earphone, cut into Beth's consciousness like a knife. She yanked furiously on the wheel. The plane zipped upward sharply. She dropped the mike and dug into the wheel with both hands.

Around the field she came again. In the tower the operators watched intently for landing lights. On the field the crash crews and firemen were in position, scanning the skies.

She was descending too steeply, and too fast, and she knew it. Suddenly her eye caught a button marked "flaps." She pushed it; the aircraft slowed. She saw another button, "landing gear," and pushed that. She heard the whir as the wheels went down. The ship slowed to 100 m.p.h.

She knew she should land at 80. But she was afraid to tinker with the throttle. She couldn't afford to stall now. She had stopped thinking about being killed. She had stopped thinking about smashing up the plane. All she could remember was that she had a sick husband and five children.

Suddenly she thought: the best way to slow down is to shut the engine off. She reached out and flipped the key. The motor died away.

Then there was just the rushing of the wind and the lights coming up at her, weaving as the plane wobbled. In the hush she could hear the earphones as the tower still tried to reach her. She threw herself across her husband. She never felt the wheels touch.

The plane slammed into the ground at an angle of 25 degrees, bounced 40 feet into the air, and then came down in a geyser of metal and parts 300 feet down the runway. The crash trucks cranked up their sirens. Silence fell across the tower.

"My God," said one operator. "She flew it right into the ground."

When rescuers reached her, Beth Black was sitting dazedly on the crumpled wing. A fractured left arm dangled at her side. Blood trickled from her mouth. Her jaw was broken in three places. Puffily she asked a rescuer to go home and take care of the children. A stretcher arrived and she was loaded onto it. She asked about her husband. No one answered. She realized now that he was dead.

"I felt his strength right there in the plane with me," she said recently from a hospital bed. "I felt two great strengthening spirits—the strength of God and the strength of my husband. It was a revelation, in those last tense moments before landing—God and my husband, both calming me, both helping me to do what had to be done."

"People have told me that I'm a heroine. I'm not. I'm just the mother of five children. It's going to be hard for those children without a Daddy—a fine, loving Daddy like Spence was. I had to come back to them. Heroics didn't enter into it at all. I landed that plane because it was a matter of necessity."

8 TIPS TO CUT YOUR CAR REPAIR BILLS

by ROBERT P. GOLDMAN

The 50 million cars rolling on American roads cost their owners a whopping $9 billion yearly in maintenance bills. Such bills hit hard in summer, when car use is at its peak. Yet by industry estimates, every U.S. car owner could save $50-$75 annually by practicing good "preventive maintenance." How to do it?

First, follow advice in your new car manual. Beyond that, you yourself can improve the care and feeding of your car. Here, the Chrysler Corp. Development and Training Office offers eight tips on preventing needless repair bills in summer.

1. Oil change. The time-worn idea that oil must be changed every 1,000 miles is way off base. Actually, a great many cars can efficiently go 2,000 or 2,500 miles or more without an oil change.

To determine the need for an oil change, rub a few drops from the oil measuring stick between your fingers. If it's gritty, either the oil needs changing or your oil filter isn't working properly. Have the filter checked. If it's in good shape, change the oil. Contrary to what you may have heard, the color of oil has nothing to do with its cleanliness.

Contaminated oil can cause deterioration of the cylinder walls, piston rings, bearings and crankshaft. As a result, you may lose horsepower.

2. Anti-freeze. Many drivers never drain anti-freeze but leave it in the year round. Most anti-freezes, however, should be drained as soon as warm weather sets in. The reason: most anti-freezes lose their potency after a single winter and thus will not afford full protection for the following winter. In winter, anti-freeze acts as a rust inhibitor. In summer, most "used" anti-freezes act as rust encouragers. A good rule: when anti-freeze is drained, have rust-inhibitor put in. It is inexpensive but mighty worthwhile.

3. Super fuel. Most compact cars, American or imported, and most low-priced, standard American cars require super-premium fuel only occasionally. Best advice: about every fifth or sixth tankful, fill up with super-premium fuel. Then, take your car out on the superhighway and drive at moderately high, but of course legally permitted, speeds for several miles.

By so doing, the premium fuel helps "blow out" extra carbon and deposits that build up in the car's "system" with consistent city driving and make the car sluggish. In effect, the super-premium gasoline acts somewhat like a laxative for your automobile's "anatomy."

4. Tire inspection. Many drivers believe only tread wear to be important—and that only on the front tires. They are wrong.

Regularly, you should inspect all your tires for the following: damage from sharp objects, uneven wear in the center of the tire surface or on the left and right sides, random flat spots or little lumps. These last two conditions can mean that brakes are faulty, tires have become weak or the wheels are not properly balanced.

On the consistently underinflated tire, only the sides (left and right of center) will be worn. The consistently overinflated tire will show undue wear in the center—where it contacts the road.

5. Oil filler cap. In the filler (not filter) cap, there is usually wire mesh screen. Its purpose is to permit the crankcase and oil pan to "breathe"—give off pressures. If sand and grit are allowed to accumulate in the mesh, this in itself can lead to oil contamination. The grit can be shaken out or blown out with forced air. Before replacing the cap, put a few drops of heavy oil in the mesh to help collect dirt.

6. Fan belt. Warning: just look; keep your hands away from the motor. If the fan belt is frayed, or slaps around loosely, have it adjusted or replaced. If you don't, your battery may run down prematurely, the car may overheat and it may lose power. A too-tight fan belt (which requires a professional eye) can cause premature wear on certain bearings, in the generator and on the water pump agitator. This can result in repair bills of upward of $100.

7. Battery. Have your battery checked in summer each time you fill the gas tank to determine if the battery needs water. Reason: in heat, battery water evaporates comparatively quickly. The water should be poured in so that it just covers the battery plates. Point to remember: insist that your service station attendant fill your battery from a glass container with distilled water. That's because water in metal containers inevitably picks up tiny amounts of metal from the container walls. These can damage your battery and prevent it from charging fully. If this happens, the entire electrical system of your car will become overtaxed. Don't fill a battery with tap water; it may contain traces of metals derived from its source.

8. Car finish. Don't wash it in the hot sun after a long drive or if the car body feels hot to the touch. The change of temperature from the heat of the day to the cold of the water can cause paint to crack.

Interesting fact: automobile body paint "breathes." That is, it "shifts" position in micro-inches—tiny, tiny fractions of an inch. If you douse your car with cold water on a hot day, you prevent the paint from breathing.

Don't use polish on your car on a hot, sunny day. The polish may cause streaks in paint that can be very difficult to remove. Final tips concerning body finish: Don't park your car in the sun consistently; sun dries out the body paint and causes cracking and chalking (finish-fading). Don't park the car consistently under trees in summer; debris and fluid from the trees do the finish no good.

Tire inspection is carried out by the motorist himself on this routine stop at a gas station.

A public statement concerning Metrecal, a new concept of weight control

Several months ago, Metrecal was introduced to the medical profession by Mead Johnson & Company, manufacturers of nutritional and pharmaceutical products. Many people have since learned of this product by word-of-mouth. To emphasize the role of the physician in problems of weight control and to provide accurate information on Metrecal, Mead Johnson & Company is publishing this factual report.

In September of 1959, a new product—Metrecal—was introduced to the medical profession by Mead Johnson & Company. It was developed to provide physicians with a new technique for use in judicious weight reduction of overweight patients.

We wish to stress the importance of the physician in problems of weight loss and control. This is particularly the case for individuals who are tremendously overweight, patients with disease of the kidneys, and patients with various forms of heart and blood vessel disease.

In view of the broad public and medical interest in weight control, many persons have learned of Metrecal by word-of-mouth; hence, this factual statement.

What is Metrecal?

Metrecal, when properly used, is an effective weight control agent. It is not a panacea.

Metrecal is a complete food in powder form which is mixed with water to make beverage meals. It is designed to provide a low caloric diet which contains all basic nutrients required by a person on a reducing program. Metrecal contains no drugs.

Metrecal can be used as the total diet for the period required to achieve the weight loss which is best for the individual. Thereafter, it can be used indefinitely for one or two meals a day, or as the total diet on selected days to maintain desired weight.

In other words, the concept is measured calories according to the needs of the individual.

What does Metrecal do?

Overweight persons are able to lose weight on a properly devised Metrecal program simply because they take in fewer calories than are required to maintain weight. In this manner they lose weight naturally, without resorting to fad diets, complex schedules, or artificial appetite depressants. And Metrecal users are remarkably free from hunger—the appetite is satisfied normally.

What Metrecal cannot do

Metrecal is not a miracle cure for overweight. It cannot provide the will power required for weight reduction. It has to be used properly. It is imperative that the person who desires to lose weight stay on the Metrecal diet. This is not difficult since little, if any, hunger occurs after a day or two.

Medical evidence of effectiveness

Extensive clinical studies, conducted under medical supervision, have shown an average weight loss by Metrecal users of approximately one-half pound per day for periods up to six weeks. Some lose even more.

Most patients in the studies report little, if any, hunger. Many report that they feel better than before. Almost all find it relatively easy to continue on Metrecal.

What is in Metrecal?

One-half pound of Metrecal powder (a frequently specified day's supply) provides 900 calories or energy units, 70 grams protein, 110 grams carbohydrate, 20 grams fat and all essential vitamins and minerals in quantities that meet or exceed minimum daily requirements established by the Food and Drug Administration. Metrecal is available in all drugstores.

How to undertake a reducing program

Your physician is the best source of counsel and guidance in problems of weight loss and control.

This statement has been reviewed by the Department of Advertising Evaluation of the American Medical Association and has been accepted for publication in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Watch these winkle-pickers

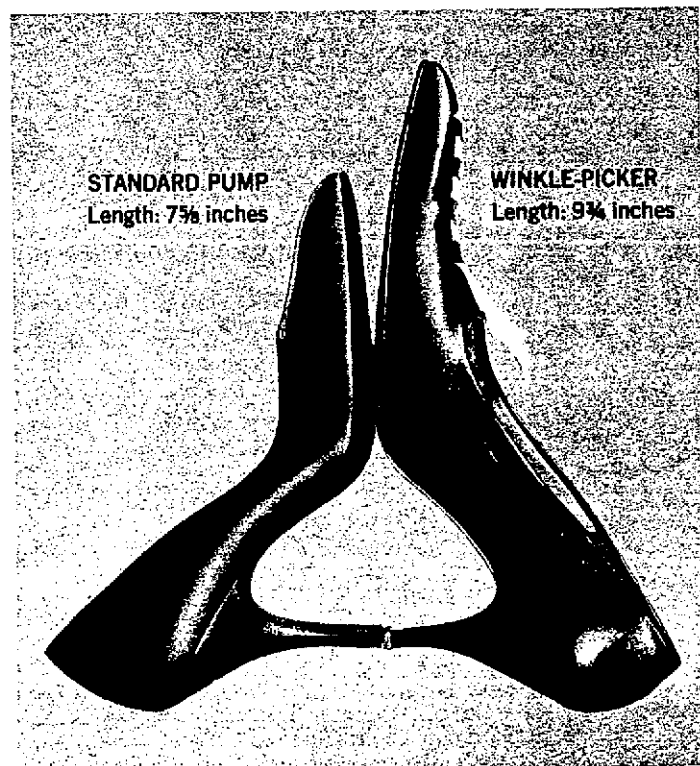

They point the way to a new shoe style

IF YOU THINK pointed toes have stretched women's feet as far as they can go, take a look at the new winkle-pickers. Winkle-pickers are the latest—and longest—shoe style we have. Their toes stick out as much as two inches beyond your real toes, and a girl wearing them has to go up a staircase one foot at a time—and sideways.

Any man watching this waddle will immediately ask why any woman would want to make her feet look big. Answer: it's the latest fashion, imported from England. The fad began in London when teenagers began to long for long-toed shoes—and each wanted hers to be longer than anyone else's. London shoemakers obliged, and winkle-pickers were born. They get their name from a long pin used to pry a shellfish called a periwinkle from its shell.

The winkle-pickers were imported to the U.S. this spring by a shoe-last manufacturer, and three companies promptly rushed copies into production. The first native winkle-pickers will go on sale this month, so get ready for a stampede of big feet.

HOW REAL IS YOUR HEADACHE?

Here are some facts about pains you've heard are psychosomatic

Q. Are these illnesses communicable?

A. In a sense, yes. These illnesses often develop in a conflict-laden family setting where tensions ricochet. Attacks of asthma in a child can arouse great fear and anxiety in the parents, and subject them to severe stress. One or perhaps both of them may then come down with a psychosomatic disorder.

Q. Can your job give you such an ailment?

A. Anything in your life that you consider important can cause such an illness. People who feel dissatisfied or unsure in their jobs can come down with a host of problems like migraine, ulcer or colitis.

Q. You hear that this kind of sickness isn't real, isn't important. Is that so?

A. Absolutely not. Psychosomatic diseases are just as real as those caused by bacteria, injury or advancing age, and they produce definite physical changes in the body.

Q. You hear too that psychosomatic problems are all "up here" in the head and that you can think them away. Is that true?

A. False. They are not imaginary and neither wishing nor will power will make them disappear. Obviously, if you could "wish away" the problem it wouldn't persist at all.

Q. Is it true that some of these problems go away without any treatment whatsoever?

A. Perhaps, but in the overwhelming number of untreated cases the patient gets worse.

Q. If you have psychosomatic symptoms, does that mean you are "crazy"?

A. Not at all. It means simply that you have an emotional problem so profound that it affects your physical state in some way. A school teacher who gets a stomach ache when his class is observed by his principal, a young girl who gets headaches when she sees a former boyfriend, a woman who develops a rash because of work pressure—none of these people is "crazy." But each has an emotional problem that is likely to need treatment.

Q. Should you see a doctor if you have symptoms of this kind?

A. Yes, particularly if the problem makes you uncomfortable to such a degree that your normal, day-to-day functioning somehow is impaired. When you feel so poorly that you cannot do your job as homemaker, employee or student—that's the time to see the doctor.

Q. Must you see a psychiatrist if you have one of these ailments?

A. Not necessarily. Many family doctors are capable and willing to treat them. If you suspect that something emotional is behind your physical symptoms, by all means mention this to your doctor. Psychosomatic illnesses require attention to both the medical and psychological aspects.

Q. Is this treatment for psychosomatic problems always long and drawn out?

A. No. At times just a few visits to the doctor may ease the symptoms considerably. Once the patient understands some of the whys and wherefores of the problem and acts intelligently on the basis of what he has learned, the problem loses much of its hold on him. However, in certain cases the severity of the illness indicates that extensive psychiatric treatment may be necessary.

ON BUSES, in stores and at parties you hear the word 'psychosomatic'. It's become part of our language in this age of surging interest in emotional problems. What does psychosomatic really mean?

PARADE asked Drs. Janet Kennedy and Hyman Bakst, who head the Psychosomatic Service, Montefiore Hospital, New York.

Q. What is the relationship between your mind and bodily symptoms?

A. It has been proven beyond doubt that stresses and upset emotions can cause or aggravate bodily disorders. That is what is meant by a psychosomatic illness—a painful or otherwise disturbing physical illness stemming from your emotional state.

Q. How does the mind work on the body to cause symptoms?

A. The exact way is unknown. There is evidence, though, that stress alters body chemicals, affects nerve pathways to and from the brain and works on glands that produce hormones to keep the body functioning smoothly.

Q. What can happen?

A. Emotions can be responsible for relatively simple problems—mild headache, slight palpitations, indigestion or skin rash. Or, emotions can cause or aggravate serious physical problems like asthma, colitis, peptic ulcer and high blood pressure. Some doctors believe strongly that emotional reactions to stress can trigger certain types of heart trouble.

Q. Can babies have psychosomatic ills?

A. Yes. It has been shown that even a 10-month-old baby, separated for long periods from his parents, can become depressed, sick and emaciated. When reunited with parents or good substitutes—close relatives, for example—the baby's depression ends, he perks up and his appetite returns.

Q. Is there a special time of life at which people get these illnesses?

A. Not really. They are common at just about every age.

Q. Is it true that some people have such strong emotions that they are immune?

A. No, there is no such thing as immunity to psychosomatic ills. Men and women of all occupations and all backgrounds may have these disorders at one time or another. Furthermore, it is not a matter of strength or weakness but rather of reaction to stress.

One happy family, Albert and Helen London and "gray market" daughter, Arlene, now 4, romp in their backyard.

Gray market babies

A first look at a controversial national problem—and how it meant happiness to a childless couple

by PETER HAWKINS

IN A NEW YORK attorney's office Albert and Helen London waited tensely, watching the door. Through it came a young girl, her eyes red-rimmed from crying. She carried a pink bundle. She went directly to Helen London and placed the bundle in her arms. Then she took one last look, spun on her heels and walked out.

Mrs. London looked down at the bundle. "Now you're my baby," she whispered.

Every day across the U.S. scenes like this are taking place. Thousands of childless couples like the Londons, frustrated by adoption red tape, are by-passing the established agencies to obtain children. Almost everyone has heard of the baby "black market," a vicious racket that fattens on the desires of the child-hungry. But less well-known is the baby "gray market." By one estimate, nearly a third of adoptions in the U.S. today are placed through the "gray market."

Black market babies can cost parents as much as $10,000. Gray market placements, however, generally are free—except that the parents must pay medical and hospital costs and legal fees involved. Most are arranged by kind-hearted physicians, nurses, clergymen and lawyers. A surprising number are negotiated directly by the principals themselves—the adoptive parents and the unwed mother.

However the deal is arranged, it is condemned by most welfare agencies. The U.S. Children's Bureau has declared that adoption is the responsibility of social agencies, not lawyers or physicians. Independent adoptions, made without agency safeguards, are dangerous and potentially harmful, the experts charge. They point to a Yale study that showed that 28 per cent of non-agency placements were undesirable as compared to 1 per cent arranged through agencies. And the Child Welfare League states flatly: "The gray market in essence prevents a more worthy family from getting a baby."

None of these arguments means much to couples like the Londons, to whom the gray market has brought only happiness. Today their daughter Arlene is 4, healthy and, by her mother's admission, "spoiled." Says Mrs. London: "I can't help it. I still thank my lucky stars we have her."

Physically unable to have children, the Londons decided on adoption. Four years after their marriage, they first wrote a letter of application to the Louise Waterman Wise Child Adoption Center, which handles Jewish adoptions. A form reply told them they would be contacted eventually for an interview.

Time of Decision

A year went by before the interview was granted. It lasted about an hour. Right at the start the Londons were told their chances of getting a child were slight. "It's no reflection on you," the social worker explained. "There are about 100 requests for each available Jewish child." A month later another form letter came: they had been turned down.

Officially, the agency gave no reason for the refusal. Informally, the Londons were told they lost out because of low income and a cramped apartment. Later, after Albert had changed his job and they had moved to a larger apartment, the Londons applied again. They were told politely that no case ever was re-opened.

The couple was only briefly daunted. Helen phoned every social agency in the classified telephone directory to ask for a child. She got nowhere.

The Londons were told they could buy a child in the black market for $3,500—but "I didn't like the idea of buying a human life," Albert says. Then one day an uncle told Helen he had "been told" that some doctors "knew cases where unwed girls wanted to give away their babies." The Londons immediately spread word that they were looking for a baby.

Months passed without result. Albert grew worried about Helen; she was so desperate for a child that she was begging the neighbors to let her babysit. Then one day a distant relative phoned Helen. She knew a girl who was "in trouble" and couldn't afford to keep the baby. Was Helen interested?

Helen was. In the next week she "made about 250 phone calls." The big hitch was that the mother was not Jewish. In New York, as in many states, adoptive parents must be of the same religion as the mother "where practicable."

Meanwhile, the mother was getting panicky. As her delivery day neared with no decision, she sent word that she would have to give up the child to an institution. Helen despairingly gave up. The next day, the baby—a girl—was born. The day after, a neighbor advised Helen that a Manhattan attorney named Philip Gelfand might be able to win such a case.

Gelfand is one of a small number of lawyers who have handled private adoptions. When Helen called him, he promptly advised her to stop everything. Then he began steps to secure custody of the baby. He arranged to pay the girl's hospital and medical bills. The next day, he arranged for the girl to give up her baby.

"It's a Miracle"

There was a last-minute hitch. The mother had been married, but divorced; there was fear the husband might have to sign the surrender, too. But that was smoothed over, and Arlene became the Londons' little girl. "It's a miracle," Helen told her husband.

Actually, the case lasted three years after that. First, the Londons had a doctor examine Arlene. She got a clean bill of health. Then there were papers to be signed, court investigations, the natural mother's release and consent, final hearings. In the end Arlene cost the Londons $1,075—$125 to the doctor, $200 to the hospital and $750 for legal fees.

"The agencies are wrong," Albert London says. "Maybe Arlene could have found a wealthier home, but never one with more love and security." And his wife adds: "We're not sorry we did what we did. We added a home filled with happiness for a little girl. That's aside from the happiness we brought ourselves."

In the view of most agencies, the Londons were fortunate that, despite the lack of safeguards, Arlene seems physically and emotionally healthy. Most agencies defend the need to be choosy in bringing together parents and children. Because of the pressure of the gray market and black market, many are less restrictive than in the past and speed up their procedures.

"I'm sour on the agencies," says Attorney Gelfand. "What do social workers have that a good, sympathetic doctor, lawyer or minister doesn't have? The so-called gray market is the door through which many, many children have found—and will continue to find—wonderful homes."

You can't take all the sweater out of summer, but you can do things to make baby more comfortable.

- When you bathe baby, the water should not be cold. Tepid water will leave him much more refreshed.
- On most days baby will be most comfy with diaper or sunsuit only. On real scorchers, he'll be happier with a shirt to soak up perspiration.
- Feed baby in a cool spot. Keep a lap-sitter shirted so your arm won't stick to his back. Ditto for a toddler so his back won't stick to the high chair.

TEENAGERS

BY BETH MERRIMAN Parade food editor

FOR THE TEEN-AGE SET, tired of ordinary party fare, we present three new taste-tantalizing sandwiches—all easy to prepare and easy to serve, to a few or to a crowd. One features the hamburger, in any of three different flavors. The second dresses the popular frankfurter in an appetizing sauce; the older crowd will like this recipe as a hot appetizer, with frankfurters cut in bite-size pieces and served with cocktail picks. The corned beef hash concoction can be served cold, or with the filling heated.

Hop'burgers

- | | |
|---------------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| 1 lb. ground beef | 4 hamburger buns |
| 1 teaspoon monosodium glutamate | 4 tablespoons peanut butter |
| ¾ teaspoon salt | 4 slices cooked crisp bacon, crumbled |
| ¼ teaspoon pepper | 4 pineapple slices |

Break up meat with fork in mixing bowl. Sprinkle monosodium glutamate, salt and pepper over entire surface of meat. Toss gently with fork to distribute seasonings. Shape into 4 patties. Panbroil or grill to desired doneness. Spread one half bun with peanut butter; top with bacon, hamburger, pineapple slice. Cover with other half bun. Repeat for each serving. Serves four.

VARIATIONS

1. Substitute deviled ham for peanut butter, onion slice for pineapple and pickle relish for bacon.
2. Substitute cheese spread for peanut butter, tomato slice for pineapple and stuffed olive for bacon.

Barbecued Frankfurters

- | | |
|------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| ¼ cup light molasses | ¼ cup ketchup |
| ¼ cup prepared mustard | ¼ teaspoon hot pepper sauce |
| 3 tablespoons vinegar | 1 lb. frankfurters |
| 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce | |

Blend the molasses, mustard, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce, ketchup and pepper sauce in skillet. Bring to a boil over medium heat. Add frankfurters; simmer 10 minutes, turning occasionally. Serve plain or in toasted frankfurter rolls. Spoon any remaining sauce over top. Makes eight servings.

Way-out Corned Beef Sandwiches

- | | |
|--------------------------------|--------------------------|
| 4 hamburger buns | ½ cup mayonnaise |
| 2 tablespoons melted butter | 1 tablespoon horseradish |
| ½ teaspoon dry mustard | ½ teaspoon salt |
| 1 can (1 lb.) corned beef hash | Lettuce |
| ½ cup finely diced celery | |

Split hamburger buns; cut small circle from center of each top half; reserve. Combine melted butter and mustard; brush over cut side of buns and circles. Toast under broiler heat until golden brown. Mix together corned beef hash, celery, mayonnaise, horseradish and salt. Cover bottom half of each bun with lettuce; spread with hash mixture; cover with top half of bun. Fill the hole in top half of each bun with additional hash mixture and top with toasted circles. Makes four servings.

With the political conventions ready to open, just look who's

ON THE

by JACK ANDERSON

Parade Washington correspondent

WASHINGTON, D.C.

WITH THE Democratic convention opening tomorrow and with the Republicans caucusing in two weeks, the great game of "button-button" is about to sweep the nation. As election fever reaches the epidemic stage this summer, political buttons, gimmicks and gadgets will pop out like measles in the children's ward.

Buttons are the favorites. During the 1956 campaign 56 million were sold; this year the total is expected to reach 60 million. The market is so good in fact that foreign manufacturers are trying to cash in. Republicans already can get Nixon novelties from such unlikely sources as India, Japan, Germany, Denmark, France, Greece and Italy.

Is campaign trinketry just a sign of modern-day zaniness? Not at all. It's an American tradition going back to the days of George Washington. He put out a locket-like trinket with a picture of himself in front and a mirror in the back. Worn by the ladies around their necks, they could turn the trinket around to use the mirror when a curl popped out of place. This was 122 years before the women got the vote, but the Father of his Country had a shrewd notion of the power of the petticoat.

Other Presidential campaign buttons are shown at right. Along with buttons, old-time campaign material ranged from ribbons to paper lanterns, paper collars, walking canes and water pitchers.

By contrast, today's campaign items include auto plates, balloons, book matches, nylon stockings, plastic

Medal of 1789 or 1792

Old-time campaign items are shown at Washington's Smithsonian Institution by the collector who donated them, attorney Ralph E. Becker. Unlike most of today's buttons, which are given out free, some Abraham Lincoln badges were sold. They went for as much as 25 cents, but as election day neared the price fell to 50 cents a dozen.

raincoats and zipper oil. Even perfume has become political: "GOPism, the Scent of Victory." One Democratic sticker proclaims: "Don't just stand there. Stamp out Republicans."

Collectors of such material have formed their own small society, the American Political Item Collectors, for serious study of this deep-dyed American tradition. One of the most notable collectors, Washington attorney Ralph E. Becker, has just turned over 250,000 campaign items, worth $75,000, to the Smithsonian Institution here. The Institution has permitted PARADE to inspect and photograph items not yet on public display—including the buttons shown here.

Most campaign stuff disappears so fast, however, that collectors like Becker have trouble finding material that littered the streets only a few years ago. Says John D. M. Hamilton, who managed Alfred M. Landon's unsuccessful campaign in 1936: "I haven't even so much as a Landon sunflower button although we bought about 12 million."

Rising Costs

As a result, the years add value to the old-time political mementos. A Martin Van Buren campaign medal is worth around $14, a Teddy Roosevelt bannanna $7, a Benjamin Harrison "Industry and Protection" flag $7.50.

They are worth every cent, insists Becker. "From our country's inception," he says, "the banner, button, billboard and broadside have played an essential role in broadcasting the identities of the nominees and their philosophies. They are an American tradition, in their way another wave of freedom's flag."

ARE YOU READY FOR

by WILLIAM COLE

The leading cause of marital discord and divorce in the U.S., authorities agree, is emotional immaturity. Here is a quiz that can test your maturity and preparedness for marriage. Developed with the assistance of Dr. Richard Hoffmann, noted psychiatrist, it poses typical situations that married people face. For scoring see opposite page.

1. You love your marriage partner but you find that he or she is moody and cranky at times. Would you: a) try to reform your partner; b) try to overlook or adjust to these traits?
2. When you and your partner go out socially you discover that you both spend most of the evening talking to others. Would you feel that: a) this is perfectly natural and no cause for concern; b) you are being neglected because your partner prefers others to you?
3. You've had a miserable day—a hundred little things went wrong. When you see your spouse in the evening would you: a) pour out your troubles and get them off your chest; b) mention them later or perhaps not at all?
4. Your partner likes company; you prefer solitude. Would you: a) insist that your partner compromise and limit social activities; b) agree to a lot of entertaining?
5. Your spouse wants to spend one night a week bowling with the boys, or playing bridge with the girls. You have no plans for these nights. Would you: a) feel that your partner should make arrangements to include you; b) consider this occasional breach of "togetherness" a healthy thing?
6. Your partner is more of an extrovert than you, more popular with the crowd. Would you: a) accept this and not try to compete; b) attempt to change your personality and get a share of the spotlight?
7. You have $500 for your honeymoon. Your heart is set on Paris. You can go if you take a cheaper apartment than you had planned. Would you: a) decide you only live once and go now; b) put the Paris trip off?
8. You've planned a budget but you can't seem to stick to it. Would you: a) go over each item carefully and find out where you are spending too much; b) forget the budget and just cut out nonessentials?
9. Your spouse is enjoying the movie; you are bored and want to leave. Would you: a) stay for your partner's sake; b) leave alone?
10. A year or two after marriage, your partner cools toward you. Would you: a) do your best to revive the romantic interest; b) look around for new thrills?
11. Having married young, you want a period of freedom before having children. But you have them right away. Would you: a) feel you had been tied down too quickly; b) accept the situation, change your plans?
12. Your partner feels it is wrong to pick up your infant when it cries, you think it is wrong not to. Would you: a) stick to what you believe is right; b) give in to your spouse?

MARRIAGE?

Maturity, experts agree, is the key to a successful life together. Just how 'grown up' are you emotionally? This quiz can help you learn if you're really ready for the altar.

ANSWERS

The b) alternative on each of the odd-numbered questions (1, 3, 5, etc.) and the a) alternative on each of the even-numbered questions (2, 4, 6 etc.) are the more mature responses. The opposite alternative in each indicates a tendency to allow your emotions to run your life. Here are explanations:

- 1 Marriage isn't a reform school. We rarely can change people. We must live with a person's faults as well as his virtues.
- 2 The purpose of social gatherings is to meet and converse with other people. The partner who becomes jealous when the other doesn't stick close in the company of a group is insecure. And that means immature.
- 3 The other person may have had a miserable day, too, and is fed up with troubles. It's best to wait until you're both relaxed—when your minor troubles, especially, will not seem important enough even to be aired.
- 4 It isn't always mature to give in. Compromise is necessary in marriage—and this goes for both parties.
- 5 "Togetherness" can be overdone. When couples rarely separate, one night a week devoted to individual pursuits may often be a good thing.
- 6 Personality is fixed. It is foolish to compete in an area such as this.
- 7 Living for the moment, not looking to the future, is the sort of irresponsible behavior characteristic of the immature.
- 8 Very few people can cut out all nonessentials. This is merely a form of rationalizing; those who say they can't stick to a budget generally don't want to.
- 9 There is no need to be a martyr. Your partner's evening at the movie need not be spoiled if you leave.
- 10 The immature person won't compromise with reality and must always have "kicks." Desire can be rekindled—and often is.
- 11 You should not get married if you are not ready and willing to accept the responsibility of raising a family, whenever this responsibility presents itself.
- 12 There are some things you should not compromise on—and raising children properly is one. Mature persons know when to yield on an issue and when to stand firm.

SCORING: Give yourself a point for every b) answer to the odd-numbered questions and for every a) answer to the even-numbered questions. Here is what your score will show:
9 to 12 — You're really grown up. You're a mature, well-balanced person and — as a spouse — you're quite the catch of the season.
5 to 8 — Your emotional development is only so-so. Better brace yourself for occasional spats with your spouse. But when the chips are down you'll probably kiss and make up.
0 to 4 — Emotionally, you're a child. Try to grow up. Remember, marriage separates the women from the girls, the men from the boys.

LINDA CRISTAL

She owes a lot to Cleopatra

by LLOYD SHEARER

Parade West Coast correspondent

ROME, ITALY.

THERE ARE SEVERAL accredited ways in which a young, ambitious, photogenic actress can claw, work or climb her way to stardom in Hollywood.

One method is to get ahead by ingratiating oneself with producers. Traditionally, this is recognized as "the easy way."

Another and more difficult method is "the talent route." This calls for training, study, experience, exploitation and luck.

Linda Cristal has been trying the second method for the past seven years, always missing that "one lucky break" necessary for screen stardom.

Linda is a tall, sloc-eyed Argentine brunette of 27, well-bred and provocatively shaped, who's made 15 films in Mexico, six in Hollywood (her latest is The Alamo, opposite John Wayne) and three in Italy. Currently she is under contract to Universal-International, which last year loaned her to Italian producer Virginio De Blasio to star in The Legions of Cleopatra.

"This was the big break I'd been hoping and working and praying for," Linda explained to me recently in her hotel suite here. "Playing Cleopatra, I thought, would make me a full-fledged star."

"They had tried to do this for me at the studio," she continued, "by building me up as a pin-up girl." It didn't work.

"Anyway," Linda said, "I was happy to be loaned out last year for Cleopatra. I was sure that picture would do it for me. We shot it in Spain and Italy. It took three months of hard work, and it made absolutely no sense—I mean the script—but the picture is full of spectacular scenes with a lot of emphasis on Queen Cleopatra's love life."

"Many of the girls in the film were photographed nude to the waist. That's only for foreign consumption, where they don't mind things like that. And I myself did a few very torrid dances."

"I figured the picture, awful as it is, would do very well in America. You know how much Americans like to be shocked. I mean it's the kind of film that can be exploited. Then suddenly, a few months ago, just as my picture was about to be released, 20th Century-Fox announced it had signed Elizabeth Taylor for Cleopatra. That's what ruined me."

Linda Cristal with ladies in waiting as Egyptian queen (l.) in The Legions of Cleopatra. Earlier attempt to build her up as pinup girl (r.) was a flop.

When 20th Century-Fox announced its intention to film still another version of Cleopatra in England this summer, studio executives knew all about The Legions of Cleopatra, starring Linda Cristal. They realized that the Italian producers would hold back their Cleopatra until Fox, following a tremendous advertising and exploitation campaign, was ready to release its $5 million epic. The Italians would then skim off the box-office cream by first releasing The Legions of Cleopatra.

To prevent this, Fox officials recently arrived here in Rome and quietly bought up the Italian-made film. They paid, according to reliable sources, $550,000 for the master negative. Then they decided either to scrap it entirely or to release the film to American audiences under some other name, which would have no mention of Cleopatra in the title.

Money-back Guarantee

"Whatever they do with the film," says Linda, "they are not going to exploit me as Cleopatra. I think they're going to call the picture The Legions of Messalina, or give it some other crazy title and release it as the bottom half of a double bill. All they want to do is get their money back. So there goes my big break. What luck! What awful luck I have in this business!"

There are many people who disagree with Linda. They say she's the luckiest girl alive.

Born Marta Victoria Moya Burges in Buenos Aires, Linda is the first Argentine actress to make any considerable dent in the Hollywood bastion. When she was 13 her parents were killed in an automobile accident from which she emerged unharmed. She was cared for by her brother, Miguel Moya, 13 years her senior, who enrolled her in a music conservatory in Montevideo, Uruguay.

At the age of 17, still grieving for her parents, Linda impulsively quit the conservatory, eloped with an Argentine actor much older than herself.

When the marriage was annulled she decided to become a nun, as her five elderly aunts had done—the youngest is 87—in the Convent Franciscano in Zaragoza, Spain. But her brother ruled otherwise. He suggested a trip to Mexico. In Tesquesquintengo, a Mexican film director named Raoul de Anda, impressed by her fiery beauty, offered to test her for a role in When the Fog Lifts. Linda got the part, then starred in nine consecutive films for de Anda.

He promptly changed her name, explaining that "Linda means 'beautiful,' and your skin is as flawless as fine crystal."

After a dozen films in Mexico, Linda was spotted by Hollywood director George Sherman, who specializes in discovering "wildly beautiful dames." Sherman described Linda as "a cross between Lupe Velez and Dolores Del Rio." On the strength of his recommendation, Universal-International brought the actress to Hollywood.

In between marriages (two), she has been working steadily, mostly on loan.

Triple-threat Girl

Italian producers like most to borrow her because she comes cheap ($50,000 a film) and because her father, Antonio Moya, was a well-known Italian magazine publisher and her mother, Rosaria Pego, was French. Linda speaks French, Spanish and Italian flawlessly.

In addition, she wants so desperately to become a major film star that she is, for a Hollywood actress, exceptionally cooperative, which is not true of some actresses who work here.

Many of them insist upon being treated as if they were Cleopatra. ■

LADY BOSSES—How tough

Copyright © 1959, The Four Window Girl, by Shepherd Mead, published by Simon and Schuster, New York.

A LADY BOSS is a two-faced woman, judging from what most people think of her.

According to one firm tradition, she's a sleek and sophisticated creature who dwells in a pine-paneled office, the envy of downtrodden housewives.

But a second myth says the lady boss actually is a homebody at heart, just marking time earning all that money until the right man comes to whisk her away from the paneling.

What is the correct image of the woman executive? Is she worth the housewife's envy? Is she really a good boss? Does she really want to be boss?

To learn the truth about women executives of 1960, PARADE questioned top women in government and private industry—and the people who work for them. The results shatter a few myths and puncture some prejudices—but confirm one fact:

Women bosses are something worth studying because there are relatively few of them. The world of the executive desk is still largely a man's world. And the struggle a woman faces to earn her gray flannel suit is so tough that one woman executive gave this advice to other would-be career girls: "Find a nice man, marry him, have babies and shut up."

Even when they reach the top, what faces the lady bosses? Call it prejudice or truth—the cold fact is that most men, and most women, too, do NOT like them. If anything, women who work for women are more critical than the men.

Why? PARADE first consulted Miss Bryna Ball, who worked on the "womanpower" survey for the National Manpower Council. As an associate director she herself is a woman boss. Miss Ball suggested:

"Most women will admit they can get away with more than a male boss. A snuffle, and he'll surrender."

Comments from many girls, secretaries to renowned women, were even more startlingly frank. Here are some of the comments the girls gave PARADE after being assured of anonymity:

Slings and Arrows

"She has a passion for detail, won't let me do things on my own. A man gives you a job and doesn't worry about it until deadline. She's constantly asking me what I'm doing and whether it will be ready on time."

"Outside the office she is a nice person. But behind her desk she's a female Hitler. What I hate most is the way she treats the men under her. I know she was crossed in love. Now she seems determined to take it out on every man who can't answer back."

"Secretaries to women are supposed to be completely sexless. If you turn up at some office function with a date while she doesn't have one—or if your date happens to be more interesting than hers—you can be sure of a dirty job the next day."

"Men don't pry into your private life outside the office. My woman boss always wants to know what I did last night, what time I got home and why I look as if I'd been out till dawn. It's all done in a sugary way, but the acid is there just the same."

There's a minority opinion, too. Those who take it are equally positive in their defense of lady bosses.

Secretaries who like them usually praised them for being more thoughtful and considerate than men. "I think lady bosses," said one, "are more sympathetic toward the problems of the working woman." Added another: "Lady bosses take a greater interest in the after-hours welfare of those under them."

The complaints of men who work for women were blithely summarized by an Army lieutenant on the staff of a WAC lieutenant colonel:

"She demands all the rights of her rank but still insists on being a woman. One minute she's as snappy and rank-conscious as a four-star general, the next she's wooing."

But William Lewis, Administrative Assistant to Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), had nothing but praise for his feminine chief. He concluded: "I don't find her aggressive, but she is a perfectionist."

What does the lady boss herself say? She expects to be criticized, like all bosses. But she would like to explain some of her special difficulties.

In the first place, the lady behind the big desk bears little resemblance to a glamor girl. In real life she's likely to be in her mid-forties, verging on the matronly, less glamorous than her secretary. Her working dress is the equivalent of the gray flannel suit: a dark two-piece costume with a little costume jewelry. Her hairdo is neat, her make-up discreet. Outwardly she does not want to emphasize her sex in what she knows from personal experience to be a man's world.

The lady boss had a long hard battle to become one. Although more women are becoming executives, the total number is still tiny. For example, since September, 1952, the American Management Association has graduated 6,000 executives in its management course, and exactly 20 of them were women.

Home, Sweet Home

One reason for the scarcity of lady bosses: most working women today combine their jobs with home and family, and nature dictates that the home comes first. Recognizing this, employers are reluctant to train women for top jobs because they will be likely to take time off for marriage and motherhood.

A second reason is social custom. Both men and women dislike the mannish or bossy woman as not being true to her sex. A woman cannot be one of the boys doing business over the bar at some club. And men feel awkward about women picking up the tab even though it might be essential for a lady boss to take male customers out to lunch. Also, a woman cannot easily travel alone unescorted. One male subordinate, obliged to travel with his lady boss, told PARADE:

"Wherever we stop I have to stay at a separate hotel so no one will get the wrong impression."

Added a male boss who won't have a woman supervisor working for him:

"They're too anchored to home. When you want

HOW TO BE A LADY BOSS

What's the proper behavior for a girl on her way up the executive ladder? Bryna Ball (r.), Associate Director of the National Manpower Council, lists five main rules. They're based on her seven years' experience as a lady boss.

1 Don't be apologetic because you're a woman. It isn't your fault.

2 Remember you became a boss because of the ability you've displayed in doing your job. Show at least modest confidence in yourself, but remember you will always have a lot to learn.

3 Don't exhibit the worst characteristics you've encountered in male bosses.

4 It's not necessary to act the part of "boss." Do not try to prove yourself by such things as officious behavior, unreasonable demands or excessively detailed instructions.

5 Behave as objectively and impartially in your job as you would outside. Remember, each example of a successful woman boss paves the way for more such opportunities for other women.

them to go off on a quick trip, they're always worrying about their children or family. A man just slings a few shirts and socks into a suitcase and is on his way."

In view of this, how do lady bosses get to the top? The answer is that the lady boss is often more efficient than her male counterpart. She has had to work harder, surmount more prejudice and opposition to get her job. She usually works with a greater sense of dedication, not only to her job but to her sex. She feels herself a pioneer on a pinnacle. Says Miss Ball:

"Most women in top spots want to do such an outstanding job that, when they leave, the position will be given to another woman."

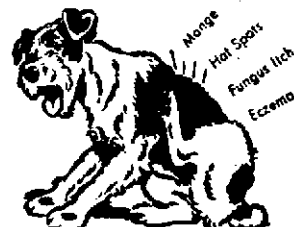

Yet this very competence can lead the lady boss into errors. She can become too competitive, too exacting of subordinates. Men have the edge because there are more of them at the executive level; the lady boss is marked by her sex. If she makes a mistake that would be overlooked in the case of a male boss, there's a tendency of others to snort: "Just like a woman."

She has human problems, too. Although in the armed forces a surprising number of women officers have married enlisted men, in civilian life it is difficult for the single woman executive to find romance. The lady boss finds it awkward to marry a man who is not her professional equal, and most of the men in her salary bracket turn out to be married.

Considering all this, do women make good bosses? Yes and no—just as the case with men.

But does that alter the way most people think about lady bosses? Apparently not. When we bluntly asked Miss Ball, who staunchly champions women as bosses, "Would you rather work for a man or a woman?" she hesitated, smiled sheepishly, then confessed: "A man."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Master of the triple-take and generally acknowledged Hollywood's most feared scene-stealer, Jack Oakie has appeared to date in 488 motion pictures. In most of these, to quote one critic, "Oakie puts a lump in your throat and makes you cough it up with a laugh."

Born Louis Delaney Offield in Sedalia, Mo., in 1903, but raised in Muskogee, Okla., Jack picked up the Oakie tag when bemused New Yorkers heard his accent. He is married to ex-actress Victoria Horne (above), saves his money and lives quietly on his Northridge, Calif., estate. He works in one or two films a year just to keep his hand in, and currently can be seen with Tony Curtis and Debbie Reynolds in The Rat Patrol. One of the funniest men in the film colony, Oakie is always telling jokes.

A WRITER I know, a man with a Don Juan reputation, tried to refuse when a witty hostess invited him to a charity affair. He explained that he was hard at work on an important assignment. "In that case," suggested the hostess, "bring your work with you. We'd love to have her, too."

DURING A heavy California fog a motorist decided that the safest way home was to follow the red lights of the vehicle in front of him. He followed for 15 minutes when the vehicle in front came to an abrupt stop. Leaning out the window, the motorist assailed the driver ahead of him. "Why don't you signal when you make a stop?" he shouted. "Why don't you put your hand out?"

"What do you mean—put my hand out?" came the retort. "I'm in my garage."

IN NEED OF a secretary, the president of a corporation decided to have the applicants judged by a psychologist.

Three girls were interviewed together. "What do two and two make?" the psychologist asked the first applicant. "Four," she promptly answered.

To the same question the second girl replied: "It might be 22." The third girl answered: "It might be 22 and then again it might be four."

When the applicants had left the room the psychologist turned triumphantly to the president. "We have here an example of practical psychology. The first girl said the obvious. The second smelled a rat. The third was going to have it both ways. Which girl will you have?"

Without hesitation the president said, "I'll have the blonde with the nifty figure."

A DRUNK staggered into a bar. He bet the bartender that he could tell the ingredients of any drink ever mixed. The bartender thereupon mixed the dregs of several drinks, a Martini, scotch, bourbon, several liqueurs into one glass. He handed it to the drunk. The drunk carefully sipped the drink, perfectly identified every single ingredient. He offered to do likewise with any other mixture. This time the bartender filled a glass with water. The drunk tasted it, meditated for a moment, then announced, "I don't know what it is. But I can tell you this—it won't sell."

I apply for "Accumulative" Accident Insurance, to become effective day policy is issued and dated. I understand that it takes about 10 days to issue a policy and agree (1) to pay the premium of 50¢ per month; (2) designate person who collects for my newspaper as my messenger to deliver premium to above office; (3) that policy will automatically expire if I fail to pay premium when due. Insurance does not cover persons who have lost both hands and feet, or the sight of both eyes.

☐ FOR FIRST POLICY IN FAMILY — Send no money. Pay carrier 50¢ each month at the same time you pay for paper.

BORN ON THE BARREN ARCTIC TUNDRA WHILE SNOW CLOUDS STILL GATHER IN THE SKY, THE CARIBOU FAWN'S FIRST HOURS ARE TRYING ONES

IMMEDIATELY THE YOUNGSTER ATTEMPTS TO STAND ON WOBBLY LEGS, FIGHTING THE CEASELESS WIND AND ROOTING FOR A MEAL OF HOT MILK

HIS LITTLE STOMACH FULL, HE COLLAPSES AND RESTS, BUT SOON THE DOE URGES HIM TO HIS FEET

SHE STARTS AWAY TOWARD THE HERD, BUT AFTER A FEW YARDS AGAIN PERMITS THE STUMBLING WEARY INFANT TO NURSE AND REST

THEN AT HER SIGNAL THE FAWN ONCE MORE STRUGGLES TO HIS FEET AND FOLLOWS FOR TO LIE STILL TOO LONG IS TO FREEZE

BY THE FOLLOWING DAY HE CAN KEEP UP WITH HIS MOTHER EVEN WHEN SHE IS RUNNING, FOR IN THIS BLEAK AND HOSTILE LAND ONLY THE STRONG SURVIVE

TRAIL WAYS

IN EARLY JUNE, WHEN THE CARIBOU FAWN FIRST SEES DAYLIGHT, IT IS STILL WINTER ON THE BLEAK ARCTIC WASTES

THE CARIBOU DOE LEADS HER FAWN TO HIGH GROUND, WHERE THE SNOW REMAINS HARD, UNTIL THE LOWLANDS HAVE LOST THE ICY BLANKET

TO BREAK THROUGH THE SOFTENING CRUST WOULD BE THE END OF HER YOUNGSTER, FOR THE DOE COULD DO NOTHING TO HELP

WHEN GRAVITY LOWERS THE BOOM... CRASH OUT BELOW!

ON THE DECK OF THE S.S. 'CARIBBEAN ISLE,' UNLOADING A CARGO OF SPICES FROM THE TROPICS... TONY, A LONGSHOREMAN, RIGS A "STOPPER CHAIN" TO HOLD THE CABLE GOING TO THE 5-TON BOOM... THEN CALLS TO THE DECK MAN HOLDING THE CABLE ON THE DRUM-END OF THE WINCH.

ALL RIGHT, PETE - I'VE GOT HER!

PIN'S BACK IN-CHAIN'LL HOLD NOW!

NOTE: Had the man at the winch not been told "Hold it!" when he still had enough turns on the drum end to snub the cable... the full weight of the boom would have gone onto Tony's unsecured stopper chain - and the boom would have crashed!

YEP, THIS FILTER SURE GIVES YOU THE GOOD OF THE TOBACCO. REAL SMOKING MAN'S TASTE!

YOU HEAR IT ALL OVER... "A THINKING MAN'S CHOICE... HAS A SMOKING MAN'S TASTE" - THAT'S VICEROY FILTERS!

SHE'S SLIPPING!

LATER... YOU SURE THOUGHT FAST WHEN THAT BOOM STARTED TO GO!

YEAH - YOU THOUGHT FOR YOURSELF AND ABOUT TEN OTHER GUYS ON DECK!

THEY SAY VICEROY'S CALLED "A THINKING MAN'S CHOICE."

KNOW WHY?

ONE REASON: I'VE FOUND, LIKE MOST PEOPLE, THAT THIS VICEROY FILTER DOES THE JOB OF SMOOTHING THE SMOKE WITHOUT KILLING THE TASTE.

THE MAN WHO THINKS FOR HIMSELF USUALLY CHOOSES VICEROY
